Postman raises cash for research through bare-legged deliveries

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Amid the Christmas Eve snowstorm, Carrol Pines pulls open her window and yells, "How many more days until that bet's over?"

She smiles at the postman who delivers her letters each day on Burns Street.

"I'm trying to make it all winter," mail carrier, Al Seese, says.

"All winter? I'm going to get you some long johns," Pines adds, just before extending a Merry Christmas and closing her window.

The thought of a pair of long johns is intriguing to Seese, whose knees are bright red from the biting winter wind. But they would defeat his purpose of wearing shorts all winter to raise money for Jerry's kids.

The 46-year-old Ellsworth man never had put away his summer delivery shorts. He's determined to complete what started on a impulse.

"If I can make it through today," he said, continuing his journey, "I can make it through the winter."

Seese has been called crazy by his fellow workers and some of the people along his route. But his intentions are to win the bet that he has going with other postal workers and put the money toward research to cure muscular dystrophy. He got the idea from mail carriers in Minnesota who have raised thousands of dollars for charity. And since his union, the National Association of Letter Carriers, gives annually to Jerry's kids, he decided to personally add to the pot.

As Seese travels his foot route Tuesday, he's tested more than on any other cold day this year. His feet blaze a trail through unshoveled walks. Snow sticks to his gray wool socks as it slips off the short rubbers that cover his shoes. The day encourages even dogs to huddle beneath the large flakes that add another layer to winter's white blanket.

"I'm not a quitter," Seese says. "I'm not going to quit. If other people can do it, I'm going to do it in Michigan."

Little Miss Charlevoix County found dead

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

The shining 6-year-old who once represented area residents as Little Miss Charlevoix County was found dead in her Colorado home Thursday, according to a spokesperson at the Boulder Police Department.

JonBenet

After a day of opening Christmas presents, JonBenet Patricia Ramsey went to bed with the rest of her family in the upscale 15-room home in Boulder.

The next time she was seen, it was by her father, who found her strangled in the basement. The family and police were in the process of meeting demands of a ransom note found in the house by JonBenet's mother early Thursday morning.

The girl was strangled, apparently before the kidnapper could take her out of the house.

The Ramseys own a summer home on Belvedere Ave. in Charlevoix. They are members of Christ Episcopal Church in

Beaver Island icon, business owner dies at 84

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

More than just the passing of a man was observed last week when Daniel "Archie" LaFreniere died. In terms of Beaver Island history, it meant the passing of an era.

LaFreniere, who at 84 succumbed to Parkinson's disease, was widely recognized as both the island's unofficial mayor and chamber of commerce head during his lifetime.

"Every inquiry, whether someone wanted a boat schedule or information on rentals, he was the one who answered all that," his daughter, Loretta Slater said. "He was a man of boundless energy."

LaFreniere

Much of what Beaver Island is today is due to LaFreniere's work. He was one of the driving forces behind the fund-raising and renovation of Holy Cross Catholic Church. He built the Isle Haven Tourist Court. He founded the Great Lakes Ferry Boat Association and owned his own tavern, the Shamrock for over 35 years. He ran the unemployment office out of that bar with no compensation from the government, and on a handshake founded the Beaver Island Boat Co., which came in handy because at the time no ferry service existed between the island and the mainland. While he was in charge, the Emerald Isle was bought and sold, and the money used to purchase the Beaver Islander.

"Archie had a unique style," said Tom Erber, who grew up watching his father and LaFreniere conduct business. "He was one of the fathers of Beaver Island."

Everything it seemed had LaFreniere's hand on it, even the local art. When he opened his new business, LaFreniere's Gift Shop, he sold his own specialized artwork. Taking beach stones he would stencil in India Ink various nature scenes, portraits of houses and animals. For him, it was the culmination of a life dreaming of being an artist.

"When he was in school, the nuns were always rapping on him for drawing instead of doing homework," Slater said, going on to recall the times she and her brothers and sisters begged him to draw something for them.

"He started copying notations on stones in India Ink, and they sold like hotcakes," she said.

Little money hoped to add up for carrier

So far, Seese has a few commitments by people to give $20, $10 or $5 toward the cause if he can endure the cold each day until spring.

Out of each day delivering,, Seese drives about 21 miles and walks for about an hour in northside neighborhoods during his travels.

Bill Dreyer, a customer who lives on Nettleton Street, pulls into his drive just as Seese is deciding what to do about the two large dogs who are in the yard. He's jokingly offers Seese a pair of pants to put on. Other customers have told Seese he's crazy or that he's too young to be senile.

"Some days when I'm out here, I think 'Am I really crazy,'" he says.

All the comments, even his own, give Seese more incentive. So does that money that will go toward charity, even if it's not a record-setting amount.

Seese's legs are numb by the time he gets back to his mail truck. He automatically begins packing the front with hoxes that have traveled with him in the back. He doesn't notice the cold of the snow as he leans against the bumper to reach a package.

At least the truck has a good heater. He should be thawed by the time gets back to the post office downtown.

"I'm guess I'm cold blooded, he says with a smile, as he pulls away to finish his day.

Area students get Hepatitis shots

Health department seeks parental permission

Hepatitis B is a disease that is spread mostly among teenagers and young adults. The disease affects the liver, causing some victims to die from cancer or cirrhosis. In the United States alone, there are 1 million carriers (people who spread the virus to others).

Ahout 5,000 Americans die each year from Hepatitis B, according to District-Health Department No. 3.

But thanks to a special program through the health department, students in some local school districts will have the opportunity to receive immunizations at school.

A pilot program will start in Charlevoix County schools. Plans to offer this program in Antrim, Emmet, and Otsego counties are in progress.

All seventh- and twelfth-graders will he given materials explaining this disease and its prevention.

Information will be sent home with each student from school for parents to read, sign and return with the appropriate fee. As with any other immunization, parental consent is required hefore vaccines are given. It is estimated that about 730 students will be offered this immunization in the Charlevoix County schools.

Doctors recommend that children be vaccinated for Hepatitis B either as infants or around the age of 11 or 12. If you have health insurance or Medicaid, Hepatitis B may be covered and you should consult your physician.

For further information, contact your physician or a public health nurse at District Health Department No. 3 at 547-6523.

Correction

The amount of a corporate match for the Charlevoix Middle School Spirit of Christmas Can Drive was misreported in the Dec. 24 issue. LexaLite has agreed to donate $6,300 to the Charlevoix Food Pantry, which matches the contribution raised by the school's top class in this year's contest.

Beaver Island man looks to children as his greatest lifelong achievement

Beyond all his achievements, Slater feels her father's truest legacy is found in his family.

"There are 21 of us, and he never wanted us to come home in shifts. We have a closeness that was instilled in us by our parents. That is what he would look at as his greatest achievements."

Slater mentioned that as the family's new generation rises into adulthood that they are just as attuned to the closeness as her father was. One of his last wishes, which he saw through, was to enjoy Thanksgiving dinner at his oldest granddaughter's home.

"We're gathering again to celebrate his life, not his death," she said. "He's at peace up there with Mom."

Slater points out that much of her family remains on the Island, "a wonderful place to grow up," she said, and she plans on retiring back to the Island within the next few years.

"I'm anxious to get back down there and follow in his footsteps," she said.

His footsteps will be large, but could be filled, according to Erber, with nothing but courtesy and a smile for everyone.

"When you were around Archie you felt like you belonged," he said. "He loved people, he loved to see you, and you loved to see Archie.

"He was the icon of the Island."

Events in brief

Charlevoix woman wins sweet tooth filler

Power outage disrupts Christmas Eve

The lights went out downtown during the last day of Christmas shopping.

About 8 a.m. Dec. 24, lights flicked downtown as an insulator on an electric pole flashed. The fire department was called out, hut there were no flames, said Charlevoix water and electric superintendent, John Whitley.

The insulator has only been in use since 1992, and shouldn't have flashed, Whitley said. Parts are being sent back to the factory to determine whether the failure is a result of improper installation or a defect in the part.

Regardless of cause, postal workers spent more than two hours sorting Christmas Eve mail in the dark, downtown telephones were dead and store owners were left without light.

"We survived," said Charlevoix postmaster, Jay Wheatley. However, the power outage put carriers about two hours behind schedule. All red envelopes had to be held for sorting until the lights came on about 10 a.m. so the addresses could be read.

Skating rink opening

The new skates that arrived underneath the Christmas tree can be broken in this week at the city rinks on the corner of Carpenter and May streets.

The hockey rink is poured and plowed. The figure skating rink will be finished soon.

School board talks land purchase at next meeting

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

The school board, leaping ahead of most New Year revelers, has challenged itself with a New Year's resolution — structure a building plan which will appeal to the voters.

With the prospect of purchasing land off M-66 for future schools, the board needs to craft a plan to use that land. To that end, the board wants as many public suggestions as possible, and would like much of that to come during its next meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Jan. 7.

It is the board member's hope that not only can they reveal the enigmatic location of their new property (the holidays apparently have stalled the process), but that they can also begin to forge a new proposal to cure the various ills plaguing the present schools.

"It's hard for all the people at the same time to agree on the same thing," board president Mary Lee Campbell said. "But we need to come up with a project enough people will support to pass a bond issue."

Years down the line, three new schools are expected to be built on the board's new land. For now, however, Campbell talks about slow steps and looking into every option. For example, instead of proposing to build a new school on this land, it might be more prudent to just tinker and fix up some of problems with the existing buildings. Asbestos needs to be removed from the high school, middle school boilers need replaced, overcrowding remains an issue at the elementary school, and electrical problems persist in all three schools (for example, each elementary classroom has but one outlet at their disposal which is not efficient for the computer era).

"The board, to a man, wants to meet the needs of the students in a way the community deems fiscally responsible," Campbell said..

Campbell admits that that will be difficult, and calls for "citizen leadership" and compromise to help the process.

"There are many facts and many factors and everyone has their own idea," she said. "We all need to come together and think broadly in terms of what we all can live with."

Campbell said she feels that the only way anything in the form of a positive facilities project will happen is if everyone, board members, parents, residents, and teachers all cooperate and "give and take a little." To her, cooperation is the necessity because without public support and interaction the project may never get out of the board room.

"We are not going to pluck it out of the air," she said of the future proposal.

The board will meet Jan. 5, but its location is different than usual. The meeting will take place in the middle school cafeteria at 7:30 p.m. A walking tour of the middle school will take place between 6:30 and 7:30, and if the board's hopes are met, the beginning steps of their New Year's resolution will be taken.

Tom Meggison is done making rescues. He's planning time with family to replace hours once spent fighting fires.

Calling it quits

Firefighter retires after 17 years

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Tom Meggison just can't wait for that first fire alarm of the New Year,

"I'll jump, you can't help but react," he said. "If I want to I might go, but if I'm into a good movie, I'll probably just stay put."

After 17 years of service on the Charlevoix volunteer fire department, Meggison will be stepping down at the end of this month.

"If your heart is not into the job, then you're going to get hurt," he said, explaining his departure. "All the guys now, they have that spark. It's not the time to be there when you don't have that."

His spark has been gladly stolen away by his wife, and his 7-year-old son Justin. Spending more time with Justin has become his biggest desire.

"He is so much fun to be with, if I had known how fun kids were, I would have had one earlier," Meggison, 47, joked. He and Justin plan on going on long walks, bike rides, and riding "anything motorized."

As far as his career as a fireman, Meggison leaves a distinguished trail, having been involved in two of the more notable fires the city has seen. The one Meggison will always be remembered for is a house fire in November of 1985 when, as the first on the scene, he rushed into the building to rescue a 4-year-old girl trapped in her bedroom.

Meggison recalled having to grope around a dark, unfamiliar house, hoping to not just find his way around, but to get to the girl through the thick smoke, which had cut visibility to nothing.

"I just wanted to find her, and not scare her," he said. "Your voice is muffled in that mask, and you kind of look like a spaceman."

Find her he did. He tucked her head into her jacket and rushed back through the fire to the safety of the outdoors. Meggison downplayed his hero tag.

"Any one of the 20 guys would have done the same thing, I just happened to be the first one there," he said.

Meggison also recalls the Lexalite fire, which turned out to be one of the larger fires in the city's history. Firefighters had to submerge a truck into Lake Michigan to be sure they had access to

OPINIONS

Don't add to traffic problems, drive defensively

EDITORIAL

Winter roads are reason enough to slow down. And as of Christmas Eve, winter blew into northern Michigan in full force.

It now takes more time to smoothly enter the lane of traffic than when roads were clear and dry. However, many drivers are not taking icy hazards into consideration when traveling.

Accidents have been increasing and when one car goes out of control on a snow-covered road, oncoming traffic has a slim chance of being able to stop quickly or easily get out of the way. There is a sense of helplessness when another driver makes a reckless decision and the people in the oncoming car or truck know that impact is inevitable.

In an attempt to minimize accidents and educate drivers, Charlevoix County Sheriff, George T. Lasater, offers the following winter driving tips.

— Mild weather this time of year can fool drivers. Temperatures are reaching the freezing point at night, which could cause moisture to form slick spots in shaded areas and on overpasses and freeway exit/entrance ramps.

— Let common sense rule. Slow down.

— When applying brakes on either snow or ice, don't lock the brakes. Depress them without locking them. This allows the driver to maintain control of the vehicle while still slowing the car down. Drivers with anti-lock brakes should not pump the brake pedal, that's the job of the ABS (refer to your owner's manual for specific instructions).

— Make sure the gas tank is kept full to prevent fuel line freeze up, and always keep the windshield washer reservoir full.

— Check wiper blades and tires (snow tires too) and make sure they are in good condition.

— Don't be a "peep-hole" driver. Make sure the windows outside and rearview mirrors and headlights are free of ice and snow.

— If stranded in the vehicle, stay put and wait for help. Run the engine and heater for short intervals only, and with the window partially rolled down. Check the tail pipe to make sure it is clear of any obstruction to prevent carbon monoxide poisoning.

— A winter emergency kit should be kept in the trunk of the car. This should include warm blankets, a few candles, matches in a waterproof container, a collapsible shovel, flares, and a bag of sand or cat litter. Candy bars or protein bars can also be kept in the kit.

As northern Michigan residents, we get used to the slipping and sliding that comes with winter. However, road conditions change daily. Nature as a whole should be respected. She wields power that should not be taken for granted or forgotten, even with years of driving experience.

Most accidents occur close to home, where drivers have let down their guard. Specialize in defensive driving and arrive alive.

Letters to the editor

Come-lately suggestions not appreciated

Editor:

I read the letter written by retired superintendent Gordon VanWieren. I did not realize he had only been retired four years. If he has any answers why didn't something start while he was still the superintendent. As a taxpayer how can I trust anyone from education who wants me to believe that in only four years we need three new schools.

Why didn't we manage our income properly? How can $200,000 busses for sports be justified if we need all these classrooms!

I don't understand what it means in his letter that our elementary staff volunteered their time to do a math and science study with a grant from Michigan State. Why did we need a grant if we had volunteers? Were they paid volunteers? There are lots of things going on in education which need explanation to voters. We don't need another millage election to raise taxes. The voters have spoken. We need a new school board if another election for millage is called.

Instead of trying to find ways to raise taxes, let's find ways to operate with what we have. Eliminate administrative non-teaching types. Freeze teachers' pay. Charlevoix collects a lot of taxes from people who only spend summers in Charlevoix and do not send kids to the schools. We must be better off than small towns without tourists to finance public services.

William Kury,
Charlevoix

Historical society founders worthy of remembrance

Editor:

I read with interest an article by Marilyn Boss about the founding of the Harsha House Museum. I was active in the society at that time and well remember the details, to Dale and Marilyn the people of Charlevoix owe a debt that never can be repaid.

I think the public should know also the beginning of the Charlevoix Historical Society. It came to my mind and others back in the late 1940s or early 50s when Vincent Madison was closing the estate of Ira Adams, late editor of the Charlevoix Sentinel. He had a fabulous collection of authenticated weapons of the James and Dalton gang and many famous gunslingers of the west. It was stored in the old Argo Milling Co. awaiting sale. I and others tried to get someone to buy it locally. I even brought it before the city council, as I knew it would increase in value in coming years. We could not find a purchaser so the collection was sold to a gun collector on Staten Island and Charlevoix lost part of its heritage.

A decade later (1972) five individuals, all over 60 years, met in the basement of the Charlevoix State Bank with the purpose of forming a society to preserve, protect and obtain historical artifacts and history of the region. They, being Robert Miles, Robert Burns, Mrs. Carl (Benona) Kohler and Mrs. Arthur (Bernice) Wickstaff and myself.

No one wanted the leadership so

Guest Commentary

This guest commentary was submitted by Charles Butcher, of Charlevoix. He is a member of the ad-hoc school committee that formed to address district building needs after failure of the September millage.

There are arguments pro and con concerning the middle school as to whether it should be rehabilitated or torn down; Pro arguments are:

1. It is centrally located.

2. We own the building and land free of debt.

3. Though built in 1927, it is structurally sound.

4. We have poured a lot of money into heat efficient windows, electrical upgrading, etc.

5. The structure is pleasing to the eye.

6. A great amount of nostalgia is attached to it.

7. It is close to the downtown shopping area.

8. Two residential properties adjacent to the school yard's east boundary are owned by the school board and can be torn down for yard expansion.

Con arguments are:

1. It is old and out of date with current technology.

2. The classrooms are too small, thus crowded for the size of classes.

3. Asbestos needs to be removed.

4. The boiler and hot water system are old, and/or inadequate.

5. Control of movement of students is done partially by chains and padlocks on doors. Safety is a problem.

6. It is not handicapped accessible.

If the middle school can be rehabilitated and expanded to meet the technical and academic needs of today and the future, then the acquisition of land in or around Charlevoix, for a new school complex, becomes totally unnecessary and unjustified.

We are all aware of the high cost of land in this area. The board has already taken steps to obtain land outside of Charlevoix in spite of the resounding NO vote to their bond proposal this past fall. Some of us believe the middle school can be made to meet our needs by a combination of revamping the old and constructing some new. This is the key item to the whole issue of buildings, land and money.

The existing east wing addition has already been revamped from its original construction to meet the needs of a later day. It also is deficient in original design both horizontally and vertically. In addition, the sewer for the toilets freezes up and backs up into the school yard. The windows are single pane glass that are not heat efficient, nor structurally safe as they face the play yard. This wing should be torn down and replaced by a three story structure.

It can house:

1. A new modular boiler system.

2. A new adequate hot water system.

3. A larger wood shop.

4. A larger band room.

5. A larger art room.

6. A larger drafting room.

7. Several larger class rooms (enabling removal of the portable classrooms).

8. The superintendent's office and staff.

9. The principal's office and staff.

10. Through corridors (eliminates using gym as corridors).

11. A new entry access with wide staircases, elevator, ramps, toilets and vending equipment.

12. Greater storage space.

13. Improve and add entry-exits to the existing gym.

By constructing a three story wing, it is more cost effective than trying to duplicate the same total area in a one story structure.

Previous school boards purchased the two residential properties adjacent to the east boundary of the school yard for future expansion of the yard. These acquisitions were made in recent years and indicates a clear intent by these boards to retain and expand the middle school; not tear it down!

The 103 second-graders and 120 first-graders will begin entry to the middle school in three years. It is essential that we make room for them now. At the same time we can get rid of the inadequate east wing and the two "temporary" portable class rooms that have existed 26 and 28 years, respectively. Some of the classrooms in the 1927 building can have a common wall removed to create one larger classroom, if found necessary.

The present school board has a $2 million surplus. Of this $900,000 is reserved for employee benefits. During December, $100,000 was committed to obtaining two new "temporary, portable" classrooms to alleviate the overcrowding at the elementary school. That leaves $1 million available for urgent items. The urgent list includes repair of the middle school roof, the high school gym arches and roof and asbestos removal.

A good guideline for cost renovation and new construction exists, one block from the middle school, in the Charlevoix County Building which has just been completed. The 11,000 square-foot new construction is a three story addition with new staircases, handicapped ramps and elevator, all of which accesses the original county building and Annex (the old jail). These two original buildings were renovated including ramps where needed. The whole project cost $2,063,000. Our county commissioners had foresight to have the cash on hand to pay the bill; no bonds with interest costs for taxpayers.

Using the county building as a basis of cost at $188 per square foot, renovation and addition of 29,000 square feet at the middle school would approximate $5,364,000. Much of the criteria for building access, workplace safety and environment and fire safety in the county building will be identical in a public school building.

There may be special criteria for the school building just as there is for the county building; for example, the science lab and woodshop in the school verses court rooms in the county building.

The easy solution is to build everything new on a new site and tear the old down. But like many easy solutions, it is also the most expensive.

We need expansion and upgrading of our schools and school system to accommodate the existing enrollment and new arrivals in this population expanding area. We also need to re-attract those students who left our schools for schools of choice.

It would seem advisable for the board to request millage (5 mills maximum allowable) for a sinking fund, (i.e. establish cash on hand) for renovation and construction for the middle school as soon as possible. The work needs to be completed within three years.

it fell on my shoulders. I could not devote much time to the organization because I was secretary of Kiwanis, publishing a weekly bulletin and operating an accounting practice. The others were retired. I was not. Thus, they became the "work horses" of the organization. Bob Burns, an attorney, completed all the paperwork. I presided at every meeting and made assignments.

We sorely needed funds to operate. So, Bob Miles conceived a publication of a century in pictures. He insisted it was not a history of Charlevoix, but it turned out to be. With tremendous help of Bill Ohle, a publisher was found and a loan floated under our signatures to pay for publication. It was decided that the book would retail for $25 with a prepublication price of $20, a limited edition of 2,000 books would be published, making it a rarity. Prepublication orders paid for publishing, and when the books arrived the loan was paid. It was published as "Bob Miles - Charlevoix." Each volume was numbered, and I retain copy 430, personally autographed by Bob Miles. That is priceless.

In July of 1997 the society will be organized for a quarter century. I have received recognition and retain a lifetime membership. I am the last living member of the founders.

The society is vibrant and active under its current leadership, and I commend all the administrators for their wonderful work and expansion. But I sincerely believe that on this 25th anniversary, these four founders should be remembered and be recognized.

Sincerely,
Ralph Hamilton

Women's resource center accredited for counseling

The Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan, Inc. has earned its three year accreditation from the Commission on Accreditation of Rehabilitation Facilities.

Promoting quality service is the sole concern of the accreditation agency. It does so by establishing standards of quality for services and using those standards to determine how well an organization serves its consumers, according to a news release.

Two surveyors were sent to the resource center for two days in September. During the visit, the surveyors went over all of the operating policies and procedures for the counseling program, as well as toured each site. They also met with individual clients, staff, board members and representatives from different funding sources. The surveyors then prepared a written report/recommendation based on their findings for the accreditation agency board, which either awards or denies accreditation.

"The Women's Resource Center chose to go through this very extensive process because it has always been our goal to provide quality programs to the community," said the center's executive director, Jan Mancinelli. "Accreditation through CARF shows that we have demonstrated we are in conformance with nationally recognized standards of performance."

Daniel "Archie" LaFreniere

Daniel "Archie" LaFreniere was born Dec. 9, 1912, to Sophia Boyle LaFreniere and Nels LaFreniere. He entered the U.S. Coast Guard in Jan. of 1935, serving four years. On Sept. 11, 1940, Archie married Frances Connaghan. They made their home on Beaver Island.

Archie entered the U.S. Navy on Dec. 7, 1943, serving with the Amphibious Forces in the South Pacific. He received three Bronze Stars, including the Phillipine Liberation Star. He returned home to Beaver Island in December of 1945.

He owned and operated the Shamrock Tavern for 36 years. Beginning in 1946, he operated the local unemployment office out of the Shamrock. Archie and Frances built the Isle Haven Tourist Court in 1956.

A lifelong member of Holy Cross Parish, Archie was instrumental in the fund-raising and development of the Dominican Convent next to Holy Cross Church. He served for over 20 years as a board member of the Beaver Island Boat Co., 18 years as secretary-treasurer. Both the original Emerald Isle and the Beaver Island were constructed during his tenure.

He founded and was past president of the Great Lakes Ferry Boat Association. Archie was also a lifelong member of the Beaver Island Historical Society. At the age of 65, he opened LaFreniere's Gift Shop and discovered a new career as an artist, specializing in India ink on Island beach stones.

He was preceded in death by his wife of 49 years, Frances; one grandchild, Sara Hansul; three brothers, Patrick, Vernon (Dick) and Joseph; and two sisters, Eva McDonough and Mary Margaret Wojan.

He is survived by seven children, Loretta (Ken) Slater, Sandy (Pete) Lodico, Judy (Rick) Hansul, Alvin, Glen, Mark (Jacque), and Joan LaFreniere. Eight grandchildren, Nicole, Tan, Brooke, Kelly, Kristen, Rachel, Gail and Daniel. Three sisters, Helen Pike, Winifred McDonough and Rita Elms. And many friends and relatives.

Visitation was at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix from 2-4 and 7-9 p.m. Monday, Dec. 23, and on Thursday, Dec. 26, at the LaFreniere home on Beaver Island. Funeral was 11 a.m. Friday, Dec. 27, at Holy Cross Church. Interment will be in Holy Cross Cemetery.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Beaver Island Medical Center or Holy Cross Catholic Church.

OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

Forty six years ago, a young man and wife walked into Hanneman Hospital in Philadelphia, Penn., to await the birth of their first born son. Strange as it may seem, they are not so unlike a couple we just recently celebrated. Even though the young wife was in labor, there was no room in the hospital. She was to have a Caesarean section and every available operating room was full.

Picture what that Christmas night was like for the couple. The wife groaning with contractions. The husband feeling helpless. And their doctor pacing back and forth, trying to persuade anyone who would listen that he needed an operating room right away! With the help of modern medicine that Mary and Joseph will never know, the other woman's labor pains were slowed for awhile.

At 6:30 the next morning, the young wife finally got to introduce her husband to their first born son. A head full of brown hair and sleepy brown eyes peered up at his Dad through the swaddling of hospital green. Little could they imagine how things would change and happen with that little baby over the coming years. A college bookstore manager with Scottish roots and newly graduated journalism major with strong Swiss heritage made for an interesting background from which the little guy would start. But that was 46 years ago and here we are on the threshold of a brand new year.

So what makes the tale of a nearly half century old birth worth considering? If you haven't guessed already, that baby was me. And if you could talk to my folks about the adventures they had with me and my brother and sister, I suspect they would tell you that one of the last things they ever expected to see me follow for my life's work was the ministry.

There's a scripture verse in the New Testament that does my heart good every time I think of it. "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, but it doth not yet appear what we shall be..." How I wish more of you could see the potential and the possibilities that lie in every life. Not just in the little children's lives that we all hold so dear, but in your life.

Your future is not settled. You are never too old to change. You are never too set in your ways to look at something new. As "maturity" dawns upon us, we tend to look at not being able to as much as we used to and yet there is so much of life ahead. A friend told me a few years ago that 40 is the old age of youth but 50 is the youth of old age. To me that says the "wiser" we get, the closer we are to hitting our stride!

Caleb was 85 when he made it to the Promised Land. Instead of asking for an easy piece of land, he boldly declared to Joshua, "Now therefore give me this mountain." At 85, he knew the best of God's blessings were still ahead of him. Abraham fathered a child in his 90s. Jesus confounded the priests and scholars in the temple at the age of 12. You just don't know what kind of potential lies within you until you try.

God willing, my 46th year in this world will be my best ever. I hope it's your best ever, too.

Kevin Murphy (right), of the Corporation for National Service, picks the winner of the R.S.V.P. raffle alongside director, Carla Bufe. The corporation is the governing body for all R.S.V.P. programs.

Winners announced

The Retired and Senior Volunteer Program (R.S.V.P.) of Charlevoix and Emmet Counties announces its raffle winners, from the drawing held on Dec. 11.

Charlevoix resident, Fran Wilson, won third prize, a plush brown bear. Ruth Schwartzfisher, of Petoskey, won second prize, a doll cradle handcrafted by RSVP member, Bill Bridge, of East Jordan. First prize, a handmade quilt, donated by Mae Bridge, was won by Clara McPhall of Alanson.

The $892 raised will go directly toward volunteer expenses.

enough water to extinguish the flames. By the end of the fire, they had even used the water in LexaLite's pond, killing all the fish in the process.

Recalling the black smoke from that day reminded Meggison that he could no longer deal with all the smoke that came with his job. It's another reason he's calling it quits.

"It's like smoking 10 packs of cigarettes with a bag over your head," he said.

He will not miss the smoke, but he will miss the camaraderie of working with one group for more than a decade and a half.

"It's a tight group, and everybody gets along," he said. "I have nothing but good things to say about them."

Meggison, to some of his colleagues will be remembered as the one who always voted against the mainstream in their meetings. A cynical voice of dissent? Not according to Meggison.

"I do that for fun," he said. "If I can make an argument and have fun with it, then I'll do it. Who knows, I might show up one Tuesday and vote no again to get my name in the books."

It will be a "no" vote accepted with smiles from the force.

(616) 547-3270

TO ALL INTERESTED AGENCIES, GROUPS AND PERSONS:

On or about January 20, 1997, the City of Charlevoix will request the State of Michigan to release Federal funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (P.L. 93-383) for the following project:

Project Name: CPI Building Expansion & Relocation of Storm Water Retention Pond

Nature of Project: Filling in existing storm water retention pond located in Outlot A to accommodate CPI expansion, relocation of storm water retention area into portions of Gibbons Drive, Taylor Road, Lots 3, 5, 6 & 9, as well as Outlot A in the Industrial Park, construction of on-site drainage for the existing CPI parking lot, planned expansion into Lot 6 and construction of CPI building expansion.

Location: Charlevoix Industrial Park in the City of Charlevoix, Charlevoix County, State of Michigan

Census Tract: 9804, Block #113A

Findings of No Significant Impact

It has been determined that such request for release of funds will not constitute an action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment and accordingly the above-named City of Charlevoix has decided not to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (P.L. 91-190).

The reasons for such decision not to prepare such Statement is as follows:

1. The project will have no effect on the environment of a negative nature.
2. The project is not in a flood plain, wetland or historical sensitive area.
3. The area is in an industrial park area, with low density industry, which will retain the beauty and character of the area.

An Environmental Review Record respecting the proposed project has been made by the above named City of Charlevoix which documents the environmental review of the project and more fully sets forth the reasons why such Statement is not required. This Environmental Review Record is on file at the above address and is available for public examination and copying upon request at the City Manager's Office between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

No further environmental review of such project is proposed to be conducted prior to the request for release of Federal funds.

Public Comments on Finding

All interested agencies, groups and persons disagreeing with this decision are invited to submit written comments for consideration by the City of Charlevoix to the Office of the City Manager on or before January 17, 1997. All such comments so received will be considered and the City of Charlevoix will not request the release of Federal funds or take any administrative action on the proposed project prior to the date specified in the preceding sentence.

Release of Funds

The City of Charlevoix will undertake the project described above with Community Development Block Grant funds from the State of Michigan under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974. The City of Charlevoix is certifying to the State of Michigan that the City of Charlevoix and Michael R. Wiesner, Certifying Officer of the Applicant, in his official capacity as City Manager consent to accept the jurisdiction of the Federal courts if an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to environmental reviews, decision-making and action; and that these responsibilities have been satisfied. The legal effect of the certification is that upon its approval the City of Charlevoix may use the Block Grant funds and the State will have satisfied its responsibilities under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969.

Objections to State Release of Funds

The State of Michigan will accept an objection to its approval only if it is on one of the following bases: (a) that the certification was not in fact executed by the certifying officer or other officer of applicant approved by the State of Michigan; or (b) that applicant's environmental review record for the project indicated omission of a required decision finding or step applicable to the project in the environmental review process. Objections must be prepared and submitted to the State of Michigan, Department of Commerce, Office of Federal Grants, P.O. Box 30225, Lansing, Michigan 48909.

Objections to the release of funds on basis other than those stated above will not be considered by the State. No objection received after February 3, 1997 will be considered by the State.

Deck warriors serve as Great Lakes' unsung heroes

Acacia crew endures a different kind of pre-Christmas rush

By Tom Rau
Courier special

While search and rescue is the most decorated Coast Guard mission, buoy tending is the least. Even the name, "buoy tending" fails the imagination. It's dirty, cold backbreaking work that at day's end finds the crew smeared in foul lake scum, and spent like whip-driven sweat mules.

Hardly the stuff that spins a legend. Yet, even 19th Century Storm Warriors of the fabled United States Life Saving Service might have to concede to modern day buoy deck warriors, who have one up on them when it comes to stamina, will and completing a mission with value.

The work is as dangerous. Reportedly, buoy tending is the most hazardous occupation afloat, next to recovering aircraft aboard carriers.

Nowhere is the danger greater and the will more fiercely tested than on the Great Lakes. Each fall demands a campaign against time and nature to remove more than a thousand navigation aids before the lakes establish their dominance by freezing every object open to their siege. If the buoy crews are lucky, they will have completed their mission and be home for Christmas, if but by a day.

This year the Ninth Coast District Commander chose Oct. 14 to begin pulling buoys across the Great lakes with a fleet of 19 ships and small boats. Leading the charge are five ships: the 180-foot Acacia, Sundew, and Bramble, flanked by the 140-foot Bristol Bay, and Mobile Bay — all are home ported in the lakes' northern latitudes with the Acacia calling Charlevoix home. Supporting the larger units are 14 smaller sub units that range from 11 trailerable small boats to one 46-foot and 63-foot buoy boat.

Year-round this small armada is responsible for maintaining 1,726 buoys that make up the corridors of safe navigation that web across the inland seas.

The Lake Carriers Association, a conglomerate of major shipping companies, depends on buoys just as commercial pilots rely on landing lights. But buoy lights are not just shut off or turned on with a flip of the switch. The seasonal buoys — all 1,218 of them — require a herculean effort to remove; 433 will be replaced with unlighted winter buoys. And the window of opportunity is tenuous at best: Pull the aids too soon and endanger major vessel navigation, too late and ice will maul them into scrap.

Winter's breath grows meaner by the day. In these later days of the campaign, crews work their longest hours, especially aboard the larger buoy tenders. These recent extracts recorded aboard the Coast Guard Cutter Acacia reveal how long and brutal this work can get. The boat is named after the Acacia flower, which is a thorny bush. The name better suits its mission.

The 52-year-old buoy tender carries a 50-member crew with a primary duty of maintaining more than 150 buoys, lighthouses and other navigational aids from Chicago to Alpena on Lake Huron. This year's orders direct the Acacia to pull 78 major seasonal buoys — buoy, anchor and chain can weigh as much as 18 1/2 tons — and replace them with small unlighted buoys called "Winter Marks."

Dec. 5. Mackinac Straits. At 9:55 a.m., the Acacia is steaming toward Major Shoals Buoy No. 3, located just east of Mackinac Bridge. The crew has just pulled another buoy, and as they steam along, the deck gang straps the 26-foot tall, eight-foot around mass to the deck with 190 feet of chain. Fortunately, the weather is benevolent, with the wind speed at 18 knots, temperature 30 degrees and wind chill zero. Even the seas appear in a friendly mood despite an occasional hail of icy sea spray that flares off the bow and rains down on the deck force.

As Acacia nears buoy No. 3, wind and seas stiffen. Deck hands and those on the bridge wing wear protective eye and ear gear. Major Shoals looms just 50 yards east of No. 3, providing water depths less than 10 feet. So often buoy tenders must labor within an arm's reach of what large ships avoid by generous yards and miles.

Yards and feet become the focal point on the bridge. A crewman on radar provides danger ranges to nearby shore targets. Eyes follow the depth finder. And the young ensign monitoring a lap top computer barks out ranges as satellite fed information pinpoints within feet the buoy's location on the screen.

The conning officer's experienced hands, covered by thick arctic gloves, shift between bow thruster and main engine throttle. Stationed on the port wing of the bridge, she has full vision over the buoy deck and portside where the buoy will be picked up.

Forward of the buoy deck atop the forecastle stands the chief warrant officer, who is responsible for orchestrating deck operations and, foremost, safety. He communicates with the bridge with a hand held radio. This communication with the conning officer is critical to mission safety. It's essential when the ship takes the buoy alongside that it stands straight up and down so crewman can attach the boom cable. Often, however, wind and sea insert their own will, placing the deck gang and bridge at dangerous odds.

As Acacia glides up to No. 3, deck hands stand ready with 12-foot long oak boat hooks. Following the chief boatswain's orders, they jab at the bobbing buoy as if it were an unruly beast. So often it is. Nearby lies a brass hook snapped off by a renegade buoy, yet better the hook then hands and limbs. Once they stabilize the buoy, crewmen attach the boom hook.

The 1,026 ton cutter heels to starboard as the boom hoists the buoy onto the 32-foot wide deck, where it is temperately secured. Now comes the laborious task of pulling nearly a ton of anchor chain. Thirty-eight degree lake waters pierce rawhide gloves and eat at splintered finger joints. Icy steel toe plates gnaw and minus zero winds turn cheeks flesh raw — the effects of which take months to mend. The wife of a buoy deck veteran bemoans how her husband's hands look like iguana skin, his lips a ring of jagged crust, and his nose like W.C. Field's.

First class petty officer, Bud Remer, jabs a pole toward one of the many buoys that have recently been hauled onto the Acacia during the ship's collection throughout the Great Lakes.

Back at the source, crewmen attach the boom hook into a bread-loaf sized chain link. The chain is then hoisted up 15 feet and locked into a deck chain stopper. Once secured the chain's standing end — oozing odorous lake bottom slime that rivers down outstretched arms — is lowered onto the deck and laid out in rows; the process repeats itself until all 90 feet are dragged aboard. Then follows the buoy anchor rock, which weighs nine tons.

Crewmen from the Acacia "gripe" a buoy onto the deck. It is one of 150 the ship maintains.

The captain elects to strap the rock along side the hull and steam to safe water. Snow begins to fall. Acacia settles into safe water a mile off Mackinac Island. The Grand Hotel, locked in winter's lifeless grip, looks like a block of marble encased in dead foliage. The hotel goes unnoticed by the deck crew who are now wrestling with the unruly rock. Pulling with guide ropes and poking with boat hooks they corral the slab toward a desired spot on deck.

The boom cable goes limp. The rock thumps down. Seismic waves rumble through bulkheads.

Now the chain must be coiled atop the four-foot high anchor weight. Those on deck feed the chain up to mates standing atop the cement block. With chain hooks, they coil the chain. By day's end, the eight-man crew will lay out and coil eight tons of chain. And there is more chain to deal with. The buoys are strapped to the deck with half inch chains linked to deck rings. Crewmen tighten the chain with steam boat jacks with the grace that bowers tune violins.

Little is said throughout the undertaking, as hands and feet move in familiar patterns. Icy decks intertwine with chain tentacles extending from buoys demand attention. Black and blue shins tell of wandering minds. The unremitting racket of metal clashing with metal, which leaves little room for words.

All the while the cold bites at hands and feet, relegating one to a quiet penitence — "Why me dear Lord?" And there's no mercy. A buoy warrior describes how he and his mate purchased battery heated socks, a great plan until feet sweat turned to ice. Overboard went the short-lived relief.

Their tools of sweat are sledge hammers, picks, mallets, and shot guns, which are used to blast ice off chain bails.

By 12:30 p.m., deck forces with these tools have racked three buoys on deck while setting two unlighted winter buoy marks. Several crewmen break for lunch. Donning their work overalls caked in foul lake dung, they head to the mess deck. Here the labor intensive efforts of the buoy deck are matched by the galley crew who hustle to provide a calorie rich meal that piques the pallet while satisfying health guidelines.

A typical deck warrior — average age 18 to 22 — consumes more than a pound of food during a buoy work day. According to the chief cook, the crew eats, on an average, about three and half meals a day. But on long days, he may serve five meals. The $9,000 a month galley budget averages out to $7.53 a day per crew member, an unusually generous rate. Normally, chief works with $6.45 a day per person, hardly the cost of an appetizer at some restaurants. Today's lunch is baked pork chops, stuffing, mashed potatoes, greens, bread rolls and unlimited coffee or milk. During the buoy season, the menu carries heavier foods charged with proteins: steaks, starch, pasta, bread and potatoes. In spite of the calorie-rich food, one truism prevails — you will not find a fat deckie in the buoy fleet.

A mother certainly wouldn't approve of the way they scarf down food. "Eat it now, taste it later" is their habit. The deck force quickly goes through the transition from galley warmth to cold overalls and even colder gloves for eight more hours of buoy busting.

It could be worse. Some deck veterans recall last December on the Saint Mary's River. The wind chill dabbled at the zero mark, then it shot off the scale at 30 below. The chief boatswain describes that arctic encounter without the slightest hint of bravado. The wind chill danced between 50 and 70 below. Guided by satellite navigation, the Acacia crunched through ice toward the buoy location. Nothing, no buoy. Nearby the faint flash of a buoy light under ice caught eyes. Acacia backed and jammed around the buoy breaking it free. After blasting a chain bail free with a shotgun, they lifted the buoy, cocooned in ice, to the deck. Crewmen slammed away with sledge hammers then secured it to the deck.

Seaman Brian Brown chips away at the ice built up on a buoy shortly after the Acacia crew hauled it aboard Dec. 16. The crew uses an array of tools, including a shotgun, to free buoys of ice.

As today nears twilight, the deck crew has landed the last three buoys, which dominate deck space. In St. Ignace, they will unload 35 tons of raw labor. The Acacia crew will then stand down. They hope. The captain and senior personnel huddle to determine whether to pull three more buoys that night or wait until dawn. The deck force's dead pan expressions makes the call — dawn.

Meanwhile on the bridge, quartermasters wrap up navigational details and wind down from a day that begins with the cooks and ends long after the deck force lies at rest. Acacia's two quartermasters perform more navigation in one day that most boaters do in a lifetime.

Over this buoy season, Acacia will log 2,690 underway miles. Every drop of water covered is charted, even between buoys yards apart. To pinpoint the ship's exact location, crew use radar eyes more than their own.

Engineers must maintain detailed maintenance schedules to assure equipment performance. A mechanical failure can thwart the operation, which will squeeze the buoy window. Engineers run the buoy boom then stand 24-hour engine room watches. Wrenches, screwdrivers, pliers are always at play in an engine room that bakes above 100 degrees in summer and now requires coats as arctic breath whistles down deck air vents. Nasty ice gathers in the engine sea intake cooling systems, coughing off coolants that stabilize engine temperatures. Bucket brigades gouge ice from the sea strainers and dump it overboard.

While the ship's only storekeeper and yeoman aren't wrestling with the massive paperwork required to support logistical needs of a 52-year-old cutter and the administrative needs of her 50 crew members, one or the other is on the bridge during buoy operations manning the helm, standing lookout, or keeping watch.

Sharing the load is the ship's only electrician. The ship's corpsman also plays a key role maintaining a healthy crew, a task made difficult by the WW II living quarters. In some spaces, a forearm length separates racks. Tight quarters, a weather whipped crew, and long work days make for the ideal germ haven. The water must be checked daily for contaminants. In 1994, contaminated water laid out most of the crew during fall buoy campaign.

The buoy campaign requires total focus until the last buoy.

After Mackinaw Straits, the Acacia will go south to Milwaukee, then Chicago and back to Gray's Reef at the top of Lake Michigan. The Gray's Reef's lighted buoys stand the last buoy watch.

Dec. 19. Starting at 3 a.m., engineers light off generators, cooks fire up ovens, morning reveille pipes through the ship, and at 6 a.m., deckies pull mooring lines. Below decks, crewmen don extra clothing. On deck, the early light flashes frigid teeth. The wind chill reads minus 15 degrees.

As Acacia approaches Gray's Reef Lighted Buoy No. 7, it's evident the arctic beast is at play. The buoy drum base is ice coated. Icicle spears creep toward its radar reflector and light. The arctic beast can maul the buoy's upper body into scrap.

Acacia slides up to the buoy. The ship shudders as an unruly sea slams the 26-foot high, six-ton buoy against the hull. A 12-foot oak boat hook explodes. The seaman throws the splinters aside and grabs another lance. The buoy bobs like a boxer. A crewman slings a line through a cage bar and flips it around a cleat. The mass yanks at the line like a pit bull on a junkyard chain. Boat hooks jab feebly at ice. The chief boatswain orders out the shotgun. Boom. Boom. Boom, .12 gauge slugs rip through ice. Crewmen snag an eye and lift the ice-coated buoy to deck.

By late afternoon — and 22 shotgun rounds later — crewmen rack the fifth and final buoy. The deck warriors slam away with sledge hammers. Winter diamonds bounce across the deck. Crewmen with snow shovels push ice debris overboard. It's over.

On the horizon, the 678-foot motor vessel, Wilfred Sykes, looks like a caterpillar inching north along a greenish-grey horizon, no doubt feeling an uneasiness as Gray's Reef's lighted buoys lay still on Acacia's deck.

By 7 p.m., the Acacia steams down the Charlevoix channel. Christmas music blares over the P.A. system. Christmas shore lights glitter off the snow and water, creating a surreal blend of postcard and painting. A crewman, in a sarcastic tone, equates the Christmas music to a shopping mall. If the seaman's mood appears to lack Christmas spirit, even less enthusiasm is expressed regarding the end of the final buoy run. There's no hoopla, no high fives, no party — nothing. These are worn out deck warriors who want to unload 30-tons of a cold day's labor and go home.

After a grueling, hard day's work, they silently relish the fruits of their collective labor. They know in spring that when the buoys are planted, there is not a vessel on the Great Lakes — from row boat to 1000-foot freighters — that won't reap those fruits also. Without these deck warriors, shipping and its cargo would be laid up across the Inland Seas.

The crew's work might not be the stuff from which legends are made, but it is essential. Not many would do the work for a seaman's wage.

Shoppers didn't drop when Christmas Day came

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Charlevoix is in the midst of the third stage of the Christmas holiday.

Stage one is the shopping spree that lasts right up until Santa himself is ready to wedge his portly body down the town's chimneys. The second phase is Christmas Day, and then the final stage begins — returning all those gifts that were not on your Christmas wish list.

"The day after Christmas is very, very hectic," said Randy Vogel, store manager of K-Mart. "It's just as busy as the week before."

Joe Trojanek, owner of Charlevoix's Sears franchise, said that while business may be "a little off the pace" of the pre-Christmas rush, his store remains a center for shopping activity because of the holiday.

"People who received gift certificates or money for the holidays are in, as are people who did not get what they wanted, he said. "They're here to buy it themselves."

Of all gifts, clothing appears to be the one most regularly returned. Either it doesn't fit, or the color isn't appealing. Whatever the reason, Vogel said his store is more lenient toward returns when it comes to Christmas.

"We're really open, sometimes this time of year we'll not always require a receipt," he said.

Another aspect of this third stage of Christmas is the influx of vacationers to the area. In a span of one week, northern Michigan reverts back toward its summer population as people take advantage of winter activities such as skiing, snowmobiling and all-around relaxation. Stores are busy, restaurants have a waiting list, and parking spots become scarce. It's like deja vu all over again, as Yogi would say, except that it is much, much colder.

Regardless, shoppers endure the cold to get that final purchase of the year.

"Most of our customers are spending, not returning," said Pam Beer, store manager of the Clothing Company. Beer expects to see a lot of skiers, and, every now and then, a disgruntled Christmas receiver. She mentioned that people are more relaxed about returning items these days.

"They know they have a month, or until the end of January," she said. "They might not get the selection, as merchandise is picked over, but at least they can get store credit and come in later."

Does this Christmas rush ever end. Most agree that usually by New Year's Day business will once again be normal.

"It seems that as long as people have time off of work, they're in spending money," Trojanek said.

So the Christmas spree continues, and one thing has not changed. There are no "Tickle Me Elmo" dolls to be found.

Twenty ways to boost savings in 1997

It's wise to save at least 10 percent of your pretax income for retirement and other financial goals.

Although that could sound impossible, it may be easier than it appears.

To start, the Michigan Association of CPAs provides these 20 ways to boost savings and the return on savings in 1997 and in years to come.

1) Pare down debt. Unless you can find an investment with an after-tax return that's higher than what you're paying on your debt (and that's not likely), reducing debt is the first step toward smart saving.

2) Track your spending. If you don't have a clue about where your money goes, try monitoring your spending for a few months. Then look for ways to cut back spending and increase savings.

3) Pay yourself first. As long as your debts are under control, put a predetermined amount away in a savings plan each month before you make big-ticket purchases.

4) Make it automatic. Authorize your bank to transfer a set amount each month from your checking account to a savings account, mutual fund or another investment vehicle.

5) Maximize your 401(k) contribution. Remember every dollar you invest in this qualified retirement plan reduces your gross income by the same amount.

6) Save the small stuff. Rather than cashing small checks you receive for dividend payments, insurance reimbursement, birthday gifts and the like, deposit them in your savings account.

7) Bank "extra" checks. If you get paid biweekly, two months out of the year you'll get three instead of the usual two paychecks. Save those two checks and you'll boost your savings significantly.

8) Revise your W-4 form. If you got a large tax refund last year, reduce your withholding for 1997. You'll get a bigger paycheck and you can save or invest the extra cash instead of letting Uncle Sam do so.

9) Save your raise. Resolve to save the extra money you get in your paycheck after you've gotten a raise. Do the same with any bonuses you receive and you'll really come out ahead.

10) Make it painless. If your adjustable rate mortgage adjusts downward, plan to save not spend your monthly windfall.

11) Reach for higher yields. To compete with money market mutual funds, some banks offer penalty-free Certificates of Deposit (CDs), but watch out for hidden charges.

12) Put found money away. If you're earning more than the Social Security withholding cap on payroll taxes, your Social Security deduction will stop before year-end. Take the portion of your salary that you previously turned over to the government and put it toward your personal retirement savings.

13) Switch credit cards. With a credit card that charges less interest, you can pay off your balance faster and free up money for saving.

14) Open a "think twice" account. Every time you decide not to buy something, write a check for the amount you would have paid for the item and deposit it into a separate account. Before long, you'll forget what you gave up and have a tidy sum to invest.

15) Pay down your mortgage. Send an extra $50 or more with your monthly mortgage payment and you'll pay off your mortgage earlier and save thousands on interest.

16) Make the most of emergency funds. Don't keep all your emergency funds (typically three to six months worth of living expenses) in a low-yielding savings account. Put a portion of it in higher-yielding, yet liquid investments, such as short-term CDs or money market mutual funds.

17) Use a discount broker or buy direct. Unless you need professional advice, consider buying and selling stocks and bonds through a discount broker. You can also cut your costs by buying stock directly from a company.

18) Consider investing in municipal bonds. Any interest earned on these bonds is free of federal income tax. That feature can boost the yield on your investment significantly.

19) Refinance your mortgage. Consider looking into refinancing if the interest rate on your existing mortgage is two or more points higher than today's rates. Then invest the money you save on your monthly payment.

20) Commit to planning. Keep more of your money when you take advantage of opportunities available to those who make tax planning a year-round event.

— Business — in brief

Unemployment rates dropped six of Michigan's 10 major labor market areas in November, according to the Michigan Employment Security Agency. They include Flint, Jackson, Benton Harbor, Detroit, Grand Rapids-Muskegon-Holland, and Lansing areas. The largest decline was in the Flint area, where unemployment fell from 5.9 to 5.3 percent.

Four areas reported rate increases in November, the Upper Peninsula, Ann Arbor, Kalamazoo-Battle Creek and Saginaw-Bay-Midland. The greatest increase was in the Upper Peninsula, where the rate jumped from 5.6 to 7.4 percent.

Overall in November Michigan had an unemployment rate of 4.2 percent.

The staff at Mt. McSauba has been busy getting the slopes ready for winter. This late-night scene shows the groomer at rest after many trips up and down the slopes. The snow guns, however, are still hard at work.

McSauba ready for recreation

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

While most of the world takes time-out to toast the season, Bo Boss and his staff at Mt. McSauba have been working as much as Santa himself to make sure the city's slopes are ready for the season.

From making snow, to grooming the hills, to perfecting the tow-rope, the end product is to make the slopes safe for their main customers, the city's children.

"We cater to the kids, and what makes this so great is that every kid can ski for the entire season at an inexpensive price," he said. A season pass costs $55, the first ski rental of the season is free, and scholarship programs are in place for those who can't manage the fee.

The busy week was made all the more tolerable, by Boss' standards, due to snowflakes which cascaded on Charlevoix all week. While 80 percent of the slope's snow comes from their snow-making machines, the fresh stuff is, in Boss's words, "icing on the cake."

This will be a monumental winter for the mountain as it celebrates its 40th year as the city's top ski facility. Boss is planning on having "a bigger and better" winter festival to end the season on the weekend of Feb. 14-15. Boss, who has been a part of Mt. McSauba for the last 21 years, reflected a bit on the time passing.

"Never ever did I think we would have a state-of-the art groomer," he said. He also recalled that before McSauba owned snow-making equipment, they used to take as many area Christmas trees as possible, line them up and down the hill, and shake them, letting the snow run-off and cover the hill.

Now with equipment making the process easier, McSauba has become a competent ski hill. Its main purpose is to introduce the sport to youngsters, and Boss pointed out that among the thousands who use the slopes each year, many sign up for lessons. McSauba has become a feeder program for some of the area ski racing teams.

As with the eve of every season, Boss worries about safety. His main advice to beginners is to at least sign up for one lesson, and make sure the equipment matches their size.

Equipment can be rented at McSauba, which has 150 sets of downhill and 150 sets of cross-country skis, and snowboarding equipment. Renting will ensure that equipment fits. But if skiers are using hand-me-downs, Boss suggests they bring the equipment to the rental desk, where it can be double checked for fit.

McSauba is one of just three city-owned ski slopes in Michigan. Boss sees that as part of the definition of Charlevoix.

"Charlevoix is pro recreation, and we have a great recreation budget," he said. "It's why people come to a town like this, because of the beaches and ski slopes."

Even if the skiing bug doesn't hit, Boss still suggests making a pilgrimage out to McSauba. Climb to the top and gaze out. To the north, sits Lake Michigan and the peaks of Nub's Nob and Boyne Highlands, and looking down south offers a glimpse of East Jordan.

"I would bet that a majority of people who live here have not been to the top of this hill, and that's too bad," Boss said.

Mt. McSauba's hours

Mt. McSauba's slopes are open Monday, Wednesday and Thursday from 5-9p.m., Saturday from 10 a.m.-4 p.m., and Sunday 11 a.m.-4 p.m.

The cross country trails are open and lit seven days a week.

Patricia Ramsey is a former Miss West Virginia, while John Ramsey is president of Access Graphics, one of Boulder's largest companies, according to the Associated Press.

JonBenet was crowned Little Miss Charlevoix in 1995. She is the former Little Miss Colorado, according to the Associated Press. She was a student at High Peaks Elementary School.

Police have obtained hair, blood and handwriting samples from a number of people, but are not releasing further information about the ongoing investigation, police said.

Police said no suspects have been ruled out, including family members. The crime scene has been under investigation since Thursday. Police were expected to have their investigation inside the house completed by Tuesday afternoon.

About 30 officers from the Boulder Police Department and the Boulder County Sheriff's Department remain assigned to the city's first murder case of 1996.

Obituaries continued

William G. Seese

William G. Seese, 74, of Charlevoix, died Dec. 18, 1996, at Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey.

Funeral was 11 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 21, at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix. The Rev. Bruce E. Hamilton of the Community Church of God in Charlevoix officiated. Burial will be in Barnard Cemetery.

Mr. Seese was born July 29, 1922, in Altoona, Pa., the son of Ross and Margaret (MacDaniel) Seese. He graduated from Altoona High School, then served in the U.S. Army Air Force during World War II.

On Oct. 18, 1945, he married Elizabeth B. Shores in Detroit. The couple moved from Williamsport, Pa., to Charlevoix in 1950.

Mr. Seese was a rural mail carrier for 33 years, retiring in 1978. Prior to that, he had worked at Penn Dixie Cement for two years. Following his retirement, Mr. Seese worked at the Holiday Station Store in Charlevoix for four years.

Mr. Seese was a member of the V.F.W. Post No. 1153 in Charlevoix.

He is survived by his wife, Betty; two sons, Gregg Seese of Charlevoix, and Albert Seese and his wife, Joyce, of Ellsworth; one daughter, Patricia Sutton and her husband, Art, of Charlevoix; 14 grandchildren; 12 great-grandchildren; one brother, Donald Seese and his wife, Jane, and two sisters, Jane Lucas and Betty Lucas, all of Williamsport, Pa.

The family suggests memorial contributions be made to the American Heart Association. Envelopes are available at the Winchester Funeral Home, where friends called from 7-9 p.m. today, Dec. 20.

Elizabeth I. Mosher

Elizabeth I. Mosher, 81, of East Jordan died Monday, Dec. 23, 1996, at Charlevoix Area Hospital in Charlevoix.

Funeral services were held at 2 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 28, at St. Joseph Catholic Church in East Jordan. Rev. William McKeon officiated. Burial will be in St. Joseph Calvary Cemetery, East Jordan.

Elizabeth was born Dec. 19, 1915, on Beaver Island, the daughter of John and Josephine (Ricksgers) Dhaseleer. She moved to Charlevoix at the age of 8 and graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1933. She graduated from Antrim County Normal in 1937 and received her bachelor's degree from Central Michigan University in 1948. On Oct. 6, 1951, at St. Joseph Catholic Church in East Jordan, she married Harvey B. Mosher. He preceded her in death on Nov. 15, 1989. Elizabeth received her master's degree from the University of Michigan in 1952.

She taught at the one room schools in Norwood and Barnard, as well as the East Jordan Public Schools for a combined total of 30 years. She retired from the East Jordan school district in 1977. She also taught C.C.D. at St. Joseph Catholic Church in East Jordan for many years.

Elizabeth was a member of St. Ann's Altar Society, St. Joseph Catholic Church in East Jordan, and Great Pines M.A.R.S.P.

She is survived by three daughters, Marilyn (Todd) Malpass of East Jordan, Diane (Gordon) Skeel of Fond du Lac, Wisc., and Eileen (Anthony) Damiano of Cheboygan; eight grandchildren; and one brother, Charles (Darleen) Dhaseleer of Charlevoix.

The family received friends from 1-5 p.m. and 7-9 p.m. at the Paullin-Penzien Funeral Home in East Jordan Friday, Dec. 27. A rosary service was held Friday at 7 p.m. at the funeral home.

Memorials may be given to St. Ann's Altar Society.

Ship explosion recalled on 60th anniversary

On January 1, 1936, while salvaging gasoline from the tanker "J. Oswald Boyd," the Beaver Island Ferry Boat "Marold II" blew up, with the loss of five lives.

Early in November, 1935, the tanker "J. Oswald Boyd" went aground on Simmon's Reef with a full load of gasoline.

Several area men, mostly from Beaver Island and Charlevoix, immediately started a salvage operation, using the "Rambler" to haul the gasoline. A temporary oil storage tank had been set up in the park at the foot of Antrim Street. The gasoline was sold as fast as it was brought in. Costing only pennies a gallon, it was carried away in almost every conceivable kind of container. There were drums, cans, bottles and even open pails. One old fellow filled an ancient wooden barrel on the back of his rig and left a trail of gasoline an arsonist would enjoy following.

The "Rambler" was small and slow, and carried only 9,000 gallons of gasoline each trip. She had made 24 trips when a switch was made to a larger and faster boat, the "Marold II." It was imperative that the operation be completed, as cold weather and icing conditions were apt to make the salvage work impossible. The loss of all that easy money was a thought not to be entertained. On her first trip the "Marold II" hauled 17,000 gallons of gasoline.

On Jan. 1, 1936, the "Marold II" left Charlevoix and headed for Simmon's Reef for another load. Time was wasting and a fortune was growing, just for the taking, holiday or no holiday.

The sun shone all day and the water was almost forebodingly quiet. The long line of Beaver Island stood out on the far horizon, while in the west the sun blazed away, soon to be extinguished in the glowing water.

The "Marold II," with its valuable cargo, was usually on its way back to Charlevoix by shortly after 5 p.m. She was diesel driven and the engines had to be started with some type of flame. What happened will never be known. The first indication that there was something wrong came shortly before 5:30 p.m. when the lookout at the local Coast Guard station reported seeing a column of black smoke in the vicinity of Simmon's Reef. Capt. Oscar Smith immediately dispatched a lifeboat to the scene, more than 40 miles from Charlevoix. The boat arrived about 11:30 p.m. Other boats were already there, having been sent from closer ports. It was so dark, and the fire was raging so fiercely nothing could be done. The boats cruised in the area all night, their crew helpless and frustrated.

As morning slowly raised its gray curtain, the tragedy was revealed in all its ghastly horror. The explosion had peeled back the steel deck of the "Marold II" like the skin of a banana. Her entire superstructure, stack and all, lay across the deck of the "J. Oswald Boyd."

When the metal of the ships had cooled, a boarding party found parts of two bodies, later identified by dental work as the Cole brothers. The other three were never found, though an extensive search was made.

The Coast Guard theorized that gas had seeped into the engine room and had mixed with the air in just the right proportions to form a highly explosive mixture. When a match was struck to start the diesels the mixture exploded. The time at which the column of smoke was seen coincided with the time the boat was scheduled to start back to Charlevoix.

The five men killed in the tragedy were Capt. L.L. Hill, and his son, Leon H. Hill, Everett and Raymond Cole, and Bruce McDonough.

Some original churches still being used today

This Methodist Church in Atwood became Conrad Klooster, Sr.'s, John Deere implement store in 1938.

By Nancy Ritsema
Courier columnist

"O come to the church in the wild wood; O come to the church in the vale," begins the refrain of a familiar country song.

Early settlers came to the wild woods in northern Michigan and soon built small churches in settlements named Inwood, Atwood and Norwood.

Inwood, a settlement north of Norwood, was named after Rev. James Inwood, who came to Norwood Township in 1867 when the area was a wilderness. He was one of the area's earliest preachers.

At the age of 20, James Inwood left his native England in 1830 and settled in Ohio. He began his work as a preacher in Ohio and Indiana.

When the Civil War ended in 1865, he made his way to Northport to fill in for another preacher whose ill health prevented him form serving his church.

In 1867 Inwood settled on Section 18 of Norwood Township and organized and helped to build the Inwood Methodist Church. He eventually moved to Charlevoix and successfully served as a local preacher and organizer of church work in the village.

When the timber was gone in northern Michigan at the turn of the century, populations dwindled in many small settlements. Inwood's Methodist church congregation dwindled to such low numbers that the church building was no longer needed.

The little Inwood church was torn down in the fall of 1921 and hauled by horse and wagon and by rail to Brethern, Mich., to a congregation meeting in homes. The church was rebuilt in Brethern and is still in use today.

In Atwood, a small Catholic church on the corner of U.S. 31 and the Ellsworth Road, lost its early French members. It was finally torn down, hauled to Bellaire and re-erected. The building is presently used as a real estate office.

Such was the fate of the Atwood Methodist Church. After its congregation dwindled, the vacated church building was sold and used for several years for the first John Deere implement business of Conrad Klooster, Sr.

When Klooster built a larger implement shop building in Atwood in 1945, he used the old church as a warehouse. The building was eventually torn down to make way for the Atwood Christian Reformed Church's parking lot.

The Christian Reformed Church was built and supported by area Dutch families in 1896. It was called at that time the Dutch Christian Reformed Church.

Pioneer preachers and priests in northern Michigan served a diverse group of Native American and early settlers. A priest from Charlevoix came to Atwood every other week in the summer to the Catholic church and for special services at the Indian Gardens (Antrim Dells today) nearby.

The priest paid Hemke Elzinga, whose farm was on the main wagon road in Atwood, 50 cents for each trip he and his team of horses made to bring the priest to the Indian Gardens. The priest left his own horse and rig at Hemke's farm to rest before the long trip back to Charlevoix.

The earliest churches in Atwood and Inwood are gone. Norwood's Methodist church, completed in 1885, holds regular church services to this day.

The early priests and preachers married folks, and buried folks, and helped them to build their small churches in the wild wood.

Castle Farms neighbors new, three-school plan

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

The school board made public the secret of their land purchase Monday.

Their purchase is off M-66, bordered by Wickersham Road to the west and Shaw Road on the south. The 22-acre piece of property is across the street from Castle Farms.

"We looked at several sites, and when it came right down to it only this one fit our needs," district superintendent Roberta Jackson said.

The board hopes to use this land as the centerpiece of a new facilities project, and Jackson began the process by unveiling her plan.

Jackson's plan comes in four phases, and covers a timeline of more than a decade. Phase one includes doing all the major repairs to the school buildings, such as electrical, roof, the high school arches, asbestos removal and making each building barrier free.

Money needed for this endeavor would come from a sinking fund, which is a millage levied that the board would spend as it receives it. Money in a sinking fund may not be used for purposes other than what voters approved. Jackson expects the fund to be 1 mill for six years, or about $2.5 million for repairs. Of Jackson's plan, only this phase has the tag of immediacy on it, and when

Cable controversy prompts city to look at self-providing

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Jeff Porter is fed up with unseen people deciding what he can watch on TV.

Normally at 8 p.m., he enjoys a biography that airs on Arts and Entertainment. However, that channel can no longer be found on Charlevoix's list of choices.

Monday at 8 p.m., Porter was standing before the council to voice his displeasure with TCI Cablevision's most recent programming changes.

"Cable television in Charlevoix has sunk to an all-time low in the last 10 days," he told city council members during a plea for them to consider fiber optics or some other solution for community programming access.

Porter, a local dentist, volunteered for a committee being formed by the council to look at cable alternatives. He will be joined by council members Bob Timms, Bernie DeVries, Bruce Reid and other community members.

"I'm getting fed up with the arrogance of TCI," councilman Gabe Campbell said.

"I've had more phone calls in the last week and half than I got on the renumbering," mayor Josh Barnes, said when noting the community's negative reaction to a service for which they pay monthly.

The changes went into effect Dec. 31. Some channels were shuffled around. Those that are no longer offered through TCI are Nashville Network, Arts and Entertainment and Intro Channel.

Colorado investigators come to Charlevoix

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

The murder that involves a Charlevoix summer resident has come to town.

Two detectives from the Boulder Police Department spent the weekend in Charlevoix investigating the murder of JonBenet Patricia Ramsey, the 6-year-old who was killed Dec. 26 in the family's winter home in Colorado.

A search warrant was obtained from 90th District Court Judge Richard May to go through the Ramseys' 112 Belvedere Avenue home. However, court records involving the search warrant have been sealed.

JonBenet

The search of the Ramseys' home in Charlevoix makes Michigan the third state to be involved in the investigation. In addition to Boulder, five detectives traveled to Atlanta, Ga., last week to interview the Ramseys' family members and friends, and collect background information. The Ramseys lived in Atlanta before moving their winter home to Boulder.

JonBenet was buried there Dec. 31.

The former 1995 Little Miss Charlevoix County and reigning Little Miss Colorado is the daughter of John and Patricia Ramsey.

While in Charlevoix, the detectives were assisted by the Charlevoix Police Department, according to chief Dennis Halverson. He is not discussing where the detectives went or who they talked to, out of courtesy to the out-of-state officers.

"We don't want to taint the investigation," Halverson said.

The male and female detectives returned to Boulder Monday. With their trip to Charlevoix, the town has begun to get national attention, in connection with the JonBenet's murder.

The official cause of death is still being listed as strangulation. A cord and a stick, which was apparently used to tighten the cord were found near the body. Boulder based newspapers are stating that the killer also sexually molested the girl and fractured her skull.

Nobody has been ruled out as a suspect, according to Leslie Aaholm, who is communications director for the city of Boulder. However, no suspects have been named. No arrests have been made. And no ar-

The county's newest commissioners look at issues

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

A wave of change, beyond merely a new calender, is crashing into the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners in 1997.

Three new board members — half of the commission — have been sworn in, and will be active during the board's first meeting of the new year 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, Jan. 8. It represents the largest turnover in the board in six years, when in 1991 half the board changed as well. Until the new board was sworn in, there had been no change in the boards make-up for four years.

Vic Patrick will represent District 4, the East Jordan and South Arm seat. He will be replacing the retired Howard Hosler. Joan Blanchard, after unseating incumbent Donald Smith, will sit for District 5, which covers Charlevoix, Norwood, Marion and Eveline townships. Shirley Roloff, after twice defeating incumbent Richard Gillespie, takes over in District 6, which covers the city of Charlevoix, and the two Beaver Island townships, St. James and Peaine.

Patrick

A buzz is humming as the new members finally take their seat.

"Everybody seems to be excited," Roloff said. "We seem to be able to talk, and I think we can work well together and be a good board."

They will have to be a busy board, as much of the commissioners' activities as the year wound down was tabled for the new board to deal with. A case of good responsible government, according to Blanchard.

Blanchard

"They didn't push anything through," she said. "They wanted the input of the new board members, and that gave me a good feeling about the co-operation of the board."

One issue which directly affects Blanchard's district is the Cedar Ridge landfill near Nowland lake in Eveline township. Blanchard is interested in exploring the legal aspects of this issue to see if there is anything that the county can actually do. She hinted the board needs much more information, specifically an exploration of the original county agreement, which county planner Larry Sullivan is researching.

Roloff

Another environmental issue is oil and gas drilling in the Jordan Valley River within Patrick's district. A tense relationship between drilling and preserving always exists, and while Patrick admitted that nothing terrible has happened, the potential for environmental damage exists. The new board should be more watchful as the year progresses. Tearing up of land, soil erosion, waste drainage, and road destruction are among the potential hazards Patrick is watching. He mentioned with state layoffs in environmental enforcement agencies, monitoring the drilling might be more challenging.

This past year the board has flirted with the idea of hiring a county administrator, and Patrick seems to feel the board should restart the search because a full-time administrator, a role similar to school superintendent, would help "keep things in running order."

Patrick said that some sort of qualifications for the job need to be set. A handful of plans have been presented, and Patrick said, "We need to sit down, pick them apart, and come up with one."

Roloff, after initialing favoring an administrator has backed off, now considering it an unnecessary position and, more importantly, an

Events in brief

Two arrested for business break-in

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department has solved a break-in at the Flight Deck Bar.

Owners of the bar reported that 50 cases of empty long neck beer bottles and about $75 in steaks was stolen Thursday.

Deputies were able to determine who took the bottles and two people were arrested on felony charges the same day the crime occurred.

No names are being released until the suspects are arraigned.

Accident ends with driver's arrest

A part-time Charlevoix resident was arrested Saturday and charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol at a personal injury crash, according to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

Robert F. Harrington, 37, of Charlevoix and Southfield was lodged in the Charlevoix County Jail until he bonded out Sunday.

He is accused of causing a head-on collision at 1:05 p.m. on Mt. McSauba Road that injured three people: Amy B. Bacon, 39, of Grosse Pointe Park, Annelle Bayless, 79, of Dallas, Texas, and Daniel Bacon, 5. The mother, daughter and son were transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital after Harrington lost control of his 1986 Ford Bronco on icy pavement, crossed the center line and struck a 1995 Audi, driven by Amy Bacon.

All three of the injured were treated and released from Charlevoix Area Hospital, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

Chili supper to raise money for Rotary

The East Jordan Rotary Club will hold a chili supper from 4-7 p.m. Friday, Jan. 17, at the East Jordan Snowmobile Club. The club is located a couple of miles south of town on Mt. Bliss Road, also known as Old 66.

The menu will include award winning chili, salad, beverages and desserts.

Tickets are $5 for adults and $3 for children under 12. Proceeds will help fund Rotary's community projects. East Jordan Rotarians are selling tickets in advance. Tickets can also be purchased at the door.

For more information call Bob Tambellini at 536-2440.

Indiana man accused of stealing money from work

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department has arrested a 43-year-old Indiana man on felony charges of larceny in a building.

Ricky A. Dixon is lodged in the Charlevoix County jail pending further appearances in 90th District Court. Deputies were contacted by management of a local car dealership after a new employee abruptly left work, and they discovered money missing from the cash register late Friday afternoon.

Deputies located Dixon in another business in Hayes Township and took him into custody less than one hour after the complaint was filed. The Charlevoix City Police Department is also investigating Dixon on other incidents after a complaint was filed by a business within the City of Charlevoix.

Blood drive scheduled

Charlevoix is hosting a blood drive from 1-6:45 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 23, at the American Leagon Hall, at 106 E. Garfield.

Stand-alone millage hoped to pay for repairs

the millage proposal for this stage comes, it would include nothing else.

"For this, we wanted to pare out everything other than the necessary repairs," the superintendent said.

Phase two involves the middle school. Jackson expects that a future bond proposal will pay for building a new middle school, but left the door open for simply remodeling the 70-year-old building. Remodeling may pose legal problems, as building codes for educational structures are stricter than most.

For example, classrooms could no longer be taught in basements, stringent size restrictions to exits, entrances, and other doorways would now be required, and a remodeled building may not have steps leading into the bathrooms. The middle school's restrooms all have steps, and would have to be rebuilt should the school board decide to renovate.

For a building where the floor routinely shakes as students go to and from classes, building new bathrooms should not be on the top of the list. It may be cheaper and less of a hassle to build a new middle school than to remodel.

Phase three of Jackson's plan calls for a new high school within the next 15 years, and the final phase would be a second elementary school, which has the "when needed" tag on it.

Monday's meeting was more of "an information session than an action session," in board president Mary Lee Campbell's words. It centered around Jackson's proposal.

The board did not discuss the plan, leaving discussion for the public Monday. While ideas flew around, a consensus seems in doubt, and whatever the board decides to do with Jackson's plan will be worthless until Charlevoix the Diverse gets on the same page.

Jackson said she does not want to see any motion until a consensus has been reached.

"The pieces have to be in place and support has to be in place before we can move together," she said. "Many, many people worked hard the last time. Why do that again without any indication that it might be successful?"

City council returns more addresses to pre-9-1-1 state

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Belvedere Ave. residents aren't the only ones keeping their addresses from before 9-1-1.

Business owners along the 200 Block of Bridge Street were given permission by city council Monday to regain building numbers recently changed to meet the emergency rescue system's criteria. Letters such as A, B, and C now follow the downstairs street number to account for second- and third-floor offices and apartments.

Councilman, Gabe Campbell, a member of the city's renumbering committee, pushed for the stores to retain their original addresses to end the ongoing feud.

> "It's time to get out of the street business " ...
> — Gabe Campbell, city councilman

"It's time to get out of the street business — addresses," he said. And since the renumbering committee faced the resignation of two city staff members, Campbell and councilman Bob Timms were left to make the decision for this section of Bridge Street.

Campbell said it's only right for the council to back these business owners. He claimed that the Apple Tree was just about put out of business by the 9-1-1 change because much of its business is done through catalog orders, and second-class mail is not forwarded by the post office when there's an address change. Also, Murdick's Fudge had received an order for 20,000 boxes with their 230 address, not the new 238 address, on them.

Other business included in the recent resolution are: Kid's Wear and Bloomingwear, being changed from the new address of 222 to the former 220; Color Wear, becoming 222; Apple Tree returning to 224; and Maison & Jardin returning to 228. Space above the businesses will use letters after the street number for an address.

"Every time we do this," said deputy mayor, Butch Russell, "we're going to find another block somewhere else that wants changed."

Mayor Josh Barnes cautioned the council about backing the change because 9-1-1 has asked area communities not to use alpha numbers in addresses. When original renumbering was done, few alpha numbers were left in Charlevoix.

"I'd hate to see us adding alpha numbers," the mayor said. "You're adding alpha numbers where there weren't any before."

City attorney, Jim Young, has advised council — again — on the danger of allowing addresses that

OPINIONS

Justice is being innocent until proven guilty

EDITORIAL

As if daytime talk shows aren't enough, society craves for real life drama at every turn.

When a crime is committed, gossip of "Who done it?" rushes from mouth to mouth as people begin playing Clue. It must have been the professor, in the study with the candlestick. Unfortunately, the game of Clue that's being played so often nowadays is hurting real people. It isn't a game at all.

A paradigm case is Richard Jewell, the Atlanta security guard who became the nation's scapegoat when he was hastily accused of placing a bomb at the Summer Olympics. He was thrust before cameras and convicted by viewers before police had even collected enough evidence for an arrest. An arrest never came, and Richard Jewell's 15 minutes of fame brought no glitter or applause.

Jewell is an example of increasing mistakes coming from people's desire to pour themselves into someone else's life instead of solving the problems in their own.

For Lisa Hathaway, her crime was allowing her daughter and husband to indulge themselves in a publicity stunt that cost them their lives. Suddenly, Hathaway was put on trial by the public as being an unfit mother.

The death of Hathaway's 7-year-old, Jessica Dubroff, who died in the crash of a single-engine Cessna during an across-country flight, was tragic. Taking the flight might not agree with mainstream ideas. But that doesn't mean a grieving mother and wife should be ostracized by those who have become self-appointed judges and jurors.

For seven months, Robert Iverson has been asked to take lie detector tests and endure being a suspect in his wife's murder because his calm demeanor didn't meet society's expectations of a grieving husband. He, too, was put on trial by many. Today, the downstate man can rest — not in the fact that his wife will be returned to him and his three sons — but that two suspects have confessed to killing her.

Now, yet another tragedy has struck. And it's closer to Charlevoix than any of the incidents previously mentioned. JonBenet Patricia Ramsey has been murdered. And talk is flying high.

For people who know the Ramseys, their hearts ache over the loss of "a darling little girl" who brought smiles to those who knew her. Others, who are less close to the situation, are letting natural curiosity draw them into playing armchair investigator. Worst of all, potentially innocent people are being accused of this most heinous crime.

The death of the 6-year-old former Miss Charlevoix County will never be less horrifying, not even if the killer is caught and locked up. In real-life drama, the Ramsey family is being questioned and the Boulder mayor is busy assuring people the city is safe.

Media is descending on a town that is normally quiet this time of year looking for information their competitors don't have. Investigators, who once never heard of Charlevoix, are searching the Belvedere Avenue home.

As Charlevoix watches the mystery unfold, we urge its residents to abide by the justice system established in our country — people are innocent until proven guilty, not the other way around. Don't convict an innocent person by insensitive gossiping and barstool courtrooms.

The malicious killing of innocence has drawn national attention, as outrageous crimes do. A new kind of journey has just begun for the Ramseys, and for Charlevoix. We can help our hurting neighbors, and the entire community, by letting the police continue their investigation without the help of empty speculations and finger pointing.

Lives without scandal are too often left out of the limelight, when they should be lauded for accomplishments. The 15 minutes of fame once coveted now often comes through false accusations and tragic loss.

The spotlight could be put on any one of us in the days to come. How would we want the community to react to our situation?

Thanks for help with holiday gifts

Editor:

The holiday season creates enough anxiety and pressure. For those in a financial bind this is magnified tenfold. Fortunately, the community steps up to the plate and eases the tension at what should otherwise be festive occasion. Donors, both families and businesses, made the difference between a disappointing holiday and a happy holiday. The Charlevoix County Family Independence Agency would like to thank the families, individuals and businesses who put together a mountain of effort to spread cheer and joy to many families and children. There were 118 referrals received for assistance during the holiday season, totaling 342 individuals.

Donations included cash, turkeys, complete dinners, food items, toys and clothing provided by donors such as: The Charlevoix Giving Tree, DURA of East Jordan, St. Matthew's Church in Boyne City, GHA Insurance of Charlevoix, Charlevoix Kmart, Jeff and Julie Wellman of Boyne City, Butler Drugs of Boyne City, Boyne City Community Christmas, Care and Share of East Jordan, Kiddie Korner of Boyne City, Charlevoix Area Hospital, Charlevoix Yacht Club, Dee Janz of Charlevoix, NBD Bank of Petoskey and Boyne City, Jeff and Glenda Crane of Boyne City, Big Rock Point nuclear power plant, Toni DeVries and the Dance Group, Sue Goss' Brownie Troop of Charlevoix, Ruthann Garrett of Boyne City, Beaver Island School, Charlevoix High School Seminar Class, Allied Signal of Boyne City, Charlevoix County Club, Bridge Street Book Shop of Charlevoix, Judy Mann and Charlevoix Glen's Associates, Stafford's One Water Street and Weathervane, Connie Boyle and Beaver Island Airways and employees, Northwest Academy of Charlevoix, Community Church of God of Charlevoix, Peggie Borowiak and Dee Koteskey of Northern Michigan Sewing Guild, Lloyd and Dorothy Kirby of East Port and the employees of Charlevoix County Family Independence Agency.

There was an army of volunteers, employees and customers involved with the area businesses, organizations and families. It's amazing what can be accomplished with all the spirit and enthusiasm the community has to of-

Thanks to firefighters for Christmas service

Editor:

Please accept our sincere "Thank You" to chief Thompson and his men for the fire departments prompt response to the fire call at the Irish Boat Shop on Christmas Day. It is very comforting to see the turnout of men and equipment on short notice should there have been an actual fire. It was fortunate that no fire had occurred.

I extend my apologies to the men and their families for the interruption to the holiday festivities that so many were enjoying, as was evidenced by the number of suits and ties worn. It had to be the best dressed fire department in the country.

We are fortunate to be located in a community where dedicated people volunteer for this duty so willingly.

From all of us at the Irish Boat Shop, Thank You.

Sincerely,
Clifford D. Biddick

Christmas Project shows appreciation to community

Editor:

Now that Christmas, 1996, is only memories, it might be a good time to summarize our Charlevoix Community Christmas Project and spread a few thanks around!

Our project this year furnished 139 families with groceries and Christmas dinners; gifted 63 people at Pine River Place, 19 clients of adult foster care homes in the area, and 16 senior citizens of Charlevoix; and furnished Christmas presents in the form of coats and boots and clothes and toys to 216 children.

Many, many people deserve thanks for the successful conclusion of another Christmas Project, too many to risk listing them and then missing someone.

About 125 volunteers worked directly on the program. They did all kinds of things, from bagging apples and popcorn, to wrapping mittens, hats, and socks for kids, to knitting those items. They double bagged, labeled bags and toted bags. They filled bags with groceries and then met at the Congregational Church at 7 a.m. on a Saturday morning to add perishable items. All of this work — and much more — is done with great humor and spirit, and we on the committee agree it makes our Christmas nicer and more fulfilling.

Special thanks, though, must be given to Marc and Donna Cross, who several years ago began, and still co-ordinate and run, The Giving Tree at St. Mary's Church. The parishioners purchased and wrapped gifts for 185 children this year.

In addition, we had 31 children's names reach us after The Giving Tree had closed. As in the past, the Methodist and Congregationalist ladies graciously agreed to purchase gifts and wrap for those children, which they did with great exuberance. The Episcopal Church ladies also bought and wrapped gifts for 10 children, who are part of the project's effort to assist incarcerated parents at the county jail obtain gifts for their children.

It has never been a matter of trying to locate someone to buy and wrap for the children; rather, it is almost fierce competition. People from all of these churches not only volunteer to take a child or two, but often call back to see if we have anyone yet they can "adopt for Christmas" or to say, "If you need me, I can take another child or two."

We find that the generosity of our community is boundless.

We were all most impressed with the youth of Charlevoix. Not only did they furnish thousands of canned goods and dollars, but one of Mary Seaman's high school classes double-bagged more than 500 bags in an hour. Her honor society students passed up the chance to sleep in on their first full day of vacation and instead carried bags of groceries and gifts to the cars of the recipients. One young lady donated $100 of her baby sitting money to the project!

In the middle of the project, the Charlevoix High School Ski Team showed up with boxes of grapefruit they had left from a sale. This was also added to grocery bags.

As an added bonus, some of the larger families benefited from portions of the 150 pounds of elk meat donated by Tim Kochanny of the DNR. This was an unexpected and welcome last-minute addition.

The Charlevoix Community Christmas Project Committee would like to thank everyone who worked on the Christmas project this year.

Without you, it wouldn't have happened! It is what Christmas is all about: A giving of ourselves through time, talent, or money to others.

A Blessed and Healthy New Year to all of Charlevoix!

Very truly yours,
Charlevoix Community Christmas Project
Rosemary Horton

Garden club hosts meeting

"Designing with Drieds" will be the topic at the next Charlevoix Area Garden Club meeting at 1 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 14.

The program will be presented by Alice Dunkel of Wintergreen Herbs & Potpourri at the Charlevoix Public Library in Charlevoix.

Members will learn how to use dried flowers, seed pods, vines and other materials to design decorator pieces for the home or office. A business meeting will follow the program.

Anyone interested in membership in the club should contact Joan Knecht at 547-5072. Membership is open to men and women. Prospective members should live in the Charlevoix area and be interested in gardening, flower arranging or related topics.

The Charlevoix Area Garden Club is a member of the Federated Garden Clubs of Michigan.

Snowmobilers hope for trail through city

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

A plan to route a snowmobile trail through Charlevoix's city limits may be ironed out in the new year. City manager Michael Wiesner said he plans on meeting with members of the snowmobile club and city law enforcement to discuss the possibility.

"It's been requested," Wiesner said. "We've had a lot more pressure to use the city because of the use of the trail from Charlevoix to East Jordan."

Charlevoix snowmobile club president John Fiedorek said creation of a trail within city limits is becoming "one of my top priorities."

The city's laws in regard to snowmobiling within city limits have not been updated since 1986. Snowmobiles are not allowed on any city sidewalks, may not be operated on U.S. 31 within the city unless crossing the road, and no snowmobiles may be operated within the "Downtown District of Charlevoix."

That district is defined by Dixon Street on the north, State Street on the west, Hurlbut Street on the south, and May Street on the east.

Designated areas do exist within the confines of the city to drive snowmobiles.

A trail begins at Alice Street and Belvedere Avenue South running south, intersecting with Garfield before running just east of May Street. On the west side of town, a route runs south on Sherman leading up to the airport, and near Mt. McSauba. There is a third designated trail running along Waller road. However, none of these trails come close to downtown Charlevoix, are not connected with each other, and give riders no chance to go from south Charlevoix to north Charlevoix.

With the number of riders expected to increase because of the Charlevoix to East Jordan trail, the move to update a trail to involve downtown access seems logical. But is it? Opinions vary.

In Boyne City, no designated route exists, but other than restricted areas along Water Street and South Lake Street, the city permits riding on the far right-hand edge of the road. Sledders are expected to obey all traffic rules and yield the right of way to everyone else. Boyne City Police Chief Randy Howard said his job is more stressful as a result of the liberal snowmobile policy.

"The mixture of recreational snowmobile vehicles with pedestrians and motor vehicle traffic is just not a good blend," he said.

He would prefer no snowmobiles within city limits because sleds are geared to go faster than city traffic, they can cause property damage when riding over people's lawns, riders take dangerous shortcuts, and can bottleneck traffic even further.

The feeling is different in East Jordan, a city referred to as the mecca of northern Michigan snowmobiling.

A route runs through the city for riders, and at times is marked better than the regular street signs, police chief Jerry Alward said. Having snowmobilers does create more traffic concerns, but Alward said he feels that snowmobilers help the downtown economy.

"Our businesses want the snowmobilers and the tourist money that goes along with it," he said, guessing that about 95 percent of the riders adhere to trail markings. "We want them to enjoy their stay and come back."

A route through downtown Charlevoix may be more challenging because of the narrowness of the main drag through town. Fiedorek, however, thinks it can be done.

"As long as it's marked, automobiles, pedestrians, and snowmobilers can co-exist," he said. "The snowmobilers will need to be more cautious and look harder at where they're supposed to be."

Enforcement on trails continues to be difficult

John Fiedorek had anticipated this winter as one which would bring the snowmobile industry full-force into the city limits. With the opening of the Charlevoix to East Jordan trail, the Charlevoix snowmobile club president had hoped to bring a viable winter economy to the area.

However, rogue snowmobilers have, as some expected, disregarded trail markings and cruised over private property at high speeds. The county sheriff's office has already logged more calls than it wanted. All the calls have complained of excessive speeds and trespassing.

"We are very, very concerned," Fiedorek said, mentioning that those straying off the trail have been cruising through fields. It may not seem to be damaging, but Fiedorek sees otherwise.

"We're dealing with crops here," he said. "I know that winter wheat and alfalfa are susceptible to damage caused by frost and snow tracks."

The county sheriff's office had hoped to have a snowmobile at its disposal to help patrol the area. But its request was turned down by the county commissions because it would be too costly, they said at a recent meeting. About $7,000 would be required for the sleds, which does not even factor in costs of hiring new officers to help patrol. According to Cheboygan under deputy Les Tebo, his department budgets $6,300 a year to cover administrative costs for their snowmobile patrol. However, his department was helped by a local dealer who donated two sleds for the season for police use.

A snowmobile does not make patrolling the trails any easier. Snowmobiles are not required to have visible license tags. Drivers wearing helmets are not readily identifiable. It's easy in a high-speed chase for suspects to disappear in the woods. Chases endanger other riders on the path. And if caught, what is a policeman to do with the perpetrator in the middle of the woods?

"You are a long way from backup," Tebo said. The under deputy, though, sees having sleds important from a safety standpoint.

"When we hear about an injury on the trails, now we can start them up and go," he said. "We can really save lives and cut down accidents."

From a law enforcement standpoint, the DNR will be patrolling the Charlevoix to East Jordan trail but may lack the resources to patrol on such a local behalf. To that end, Fiedorek places much of the burden on the snowmobilers themselves.

"When you are out riding, and you see someone doing something they should not be doing," he said, "you have an obligation to make contact with the snowmobiler and let them know how you feel. Tell them it's not the right thing to do."

unnecessary salary. She said that before hiring someone to smooth the waters, the new board should have a chance to sail by themselves.

A county administrator would ease communication problems between board members and department heads, but other ways exist to do so. Roloff suggested bringing back the "committees as a whole" meetings where the board, once a month, would meet only to discuss issues with no voting done and no resolutions being passed.

"Each one of us will have a chance to voice an opinion and we all can find out where everybody stands on the issues," she said. The creation of a mental health authority will also be dealt with by the new board. Spanning Charlevoix, Emmet, Cheboygan and Otsego counties, the new authority will be more autonomous than ever and its main benefit will be better protection against liability lawsuits.

"I don't know how advantageous that is," Blanchard said. "I just want to do what is best for the residents of the county, and we need some more answers."

A public hearing on the mental health authority was scheduled for the old board's last meeting, but the representative for the authority failed to show-up.

"There is a lot do because plenty was put aside for the new board," Patrick said. "We need to tie up these loose ends before trying something else."

Walk raises money for fight Alzheimers

The Northwest Michigan Chapter of the Alzheimer's Association recently recognized individuals, teams and sponsors of the 1996 Memory Walk. Northmed, Grandvue Medical Care Facility and Munson Medical Center were recognized as the Memory Walk's major sponsors.

The Top team raising $3,468 for this event was Munson Medical Center. Since 1993 the chapter has worked with Vic Pickard, who collects pledges and returnable cans and bottles, and sells holiday poinsettias to help raise money.

This year, Pickard raised nearly $16,000, with hopes of winning the country's first place prize of a trip to Hawaii.

"Vic is truly our hero, and we are all hoping he achieves his goal of being the top Memory Walk fund-raiser in the Nation," said Chris Weaner, executive director. "What makes his achievement so special is that it is done with love and compassion for the many who are challenged with Alzheimer's Disease."

The Memory Walk event raised nearly $51,000. Proceeds remain in the ten-county area for education, training and support to the many who care for people with Alzheimer's Disease, and 15 percent of the proceeds go toward research, which will hopefully eliminate this disease.

Charlevoix employees help United Way reach '96-97 goal

The Medusa Cement Co. has had a very successful second year campaign with the CharEm United Way. Employees raised more than $4,800 and combined with the corporate gift, they will provide more than $10,000 toward local human service programs.

The employee campaign was led this year by Wayne Gregg. Medusa has once again contributed the largest corporate gift of the 1996-97 campaign.

With more than 80 percent of this year's goal collected, the CharEm United Way still needs help. This year, 36 agencies have applied for funds totaling more than $195,000.

The CharEm United Way was able to fund 30 organizations in 1996. Services ranged from child abuse and neglect prevention, domestic violence shelter, substance abuse treatment, day care for the elderly, youth development and adult mentoring programs, and hospice services.

Many local companies and individuals have already pledged their support for 1997. This years Pacesetter companies each increased their campaigns to meet the challenge of a larger goal and increased need.

The 1996-97 Pacesetter organizations were Boyne City Public Schools, CB North, the City of Charlevoix, FMB Northwestern Bank, JC Penney Company and United Parcel Service.

Anyone interested in contributing to the 1996-97 campaign may contact the United Way office at 347-0115.

The check that helped boost Medusa Cement Co. into its place as making the greatest corporate gift in this year's United Way campaign is presented to Ellen Zienert, United Way president (left) from Wayne Gregg, Medusa campaign chair.

Aura McBride Stevenson

Aura McBride Stevenson, 91, of East Jordan, died Saturday, Dec. 29, 1996, at Havencrest Adult Foster Care Home in East Jordan.

Funeral was 11 a.m. Tuesday, Dec. 31, at the First Presbyterian Church in East Jordan. The Rev. Robert H. Carter officiated with interment following at Sunset Hill Cemetery in East Jordan.

Aura was born Oct. 17, 1905, in De Ward, Mich., to Robert Young McBride and Emma (Secord) McBride. She graduated from East Jordan High School in 1924. She attended Western Michigan University for two years, taught school for the next two years and then returned to college to receive her bachelor's degree in 1931.

Mrs. Stevenson taught Latin and English at Kent City High School, served as the high school principal at Martin, Mich., and then moved to Muskegon where she taught for 30 years. Her last three years in Muskegon were spent in selecting geography, history and music text books for grade schools.

She married Barton Stevenson, a music teacher from Whitehall, on Aug. 12, 1940. They continued teaching in the Muskegon area until their retirement in 1965. They moved to the Charlevoix area shortly after that. They enjoyed cruises on the Mediterranean and Caribbean, as well as the Mississippi River. They built two homes in Charlevoix and also one in Muskegon. Barton died Sept. 2, 1970, and in 1973 Aura moved to the old Stevenson house on Prospect in East Jordan. She returned to the First Presbyterian Church in East Jordan, having joined as a young girl in 1920. She enjoyed serving as a deacon and an elder.

Aura was a member of the Retired Teachers, M.A.R.S.P., National Education Association, Michigan Education Association and the East Jordan Education Association. She also was a member of the Crooked Tree Arts Council.

She is survived by her sister, Eva McBride Brown, of Battle Creek; five nephews; and several great nieces and great nephews. She was preceded in death by her husband; her parents; one brother, Robert Glenn McBride; and her sister, Eleanor McBride Carson.

Memorials may be given to the Multiple Sclerosis Society or the First Presbyterian Church in East Jordan.

George A. Sharow

George A. Sharow, 79, of Charlevoix, died Jan. 3, 1997, at his home. Funeral will be at 11 a.m. Wednesday, Jan. 8, at Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix. The Rev. Bruce E. Hamilton of the Community Church of God will officiate. Burial will take place in Brookside Cemetery, Charlevoix.

Mr. Sharow was born Aug. 27, 1917, in Charlevoix, the son of Bert and Effle (Willis) Sharrow. He attended Charlevoix Schools and was a life resident of the area. He was a U.S. Army veteran of World War II, serving in the Asiatic-Pacific Theater.

On Nov. 3, 1935, he married Mary Saganek in Ellsworth. She preceded him in death on June 21, 1985.

Mr. Sharow was a member of the American Legion Leslie T. Shapton Post No. 226 and the Boyne City Eagles Club. He loved to hunt and fish. He was a stone, brick and concrete mason by trade, and was employed by Swanson's and Lake Construction, retiring in 1979.

Survivors include one son, Robert Sharrow and his wife, Barb, of Charlevoix; two daughters, Barbara Kane and her husband, Sam, of Charlevoix, and Donna Stoneham and her husband, James Sr., of Charlevoix; one brother, Robert Sharrow and his wife, Ida, of Barryton, Mich.; eight grandchildren; 21 great-grandchildren; and a special friend, Marge Imel, of Charlevoix.

Memorial contributions may be made to Charlevoix County Hospice. Envelopes are available at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix, where visitation was held from 7-9 p.m. Tuesday, January 7.

OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

The keyboard and I are talking to each other in the early hours of the morning. I've not been able to sleep too well. I have been watching the radar pictures and the forecasts like a hawk. My daughter and her mother are running in a two-car convoy back to school in Indiana. So far the trip has not gone well. They only got as far as Grayling because of our girl's car sliding off the roads into one ditch or another different three times.

Would you understand what I mean when I say that it's kind of a helpless feeling to have shared all the wisdom and advice you have to give and then let them go on their own? It's even more frustrating when you know they are struggling and you are more or less forced to let them sort it out for themselves. But then again, I know another Father who has had to work under similar conditions for generations.

Where you and I can look to radar images and computer projections to get an idea of the kind of conditions that lie ahead of us, this Father has the intimate knowledge of how his children have based their choices and made their decisions since the dawn of time. Where you and I have coached our offspring based on our experience and knowledge, He has laid out centuries worth of truth before us in easily digestible fashion. And just like there comes a time for us to let our children face their own adventures, he too has never forced those he has loved to do things his way.

If we know how our own hearts rise and fall as parents when our children face life's different adventures, then it really shouldn't be hard for us to get an insight on what the heart of God is like. I'm sure I'm safe in saying that, regardless of our ages, there isn't anything parents wouldn't do for our children. If they need us, we move heaven and earth to support them. So you think God, your heavenly Father, would do less?

As strongly as you feel about your sons or daughters, imagine how God felt about his Son. Long before Jesus came to earth, his Father knew what awaited him. Yet for the sake of all those he loved, God knew he had to let Jesus go through every aspect of being human-like on His own.

There were good and thrilling times when his Father had to be excited and pleased. There were dark and sad times that made the inevitable road to the cross loom so large that even our creator had to experience some anxiety. But in the end, look how things turned out. You and I are able to live with much more peace and security than we would ever have been able to gain on our own because God let his Son go and grow through every kind of challenge life hurled his way.

Oh, I have no doubt that Deb and Linda will slip and slide their way to Anderson okay. And I have no doubt that after this adventure, Deb will be a much better "snow driver." But boy, sitting on the sidelines and taking their phone calls has been fun (not!). Then again, how much fun do you suppose our heavenly Father has fielding some of our prayers? Aren't you glad God is God?

Helen Wynkoop

Helen Wynkoop, 77, of Norwood, died Jan. 5, 1997, at Munson Medical Center in Traverse City.

Funeral will be at 11 a.m. Thursday, Jan. 9, at the Safe Harbor Baptist Church in Charlevoix. The Rev. Perry Fowler will officiate, and burial will take place in Norwood Cemetery.

Mrs. Wynkoop was born Jan. 12, 1919, in Holts Township, Clearwater County, Minn., the daughter of George and Rhonda (Elliott) Baumann.

On Oct. 21, 1934, she married Chellas L. Wynkoop in Bemidji, Minn. They lived in Minnesota until moving to Port Huron, Mich., in 1950, where they lived for 23 years. In 1990, Mr. & Mrs. Wynkoop moved to Charlevoix from St. Helen, Mich.

Survivors include her husband, Chellas, of Norwood; three sons, Richard Wynkoop and his wife, Sally, of Norwood, Cecil Wynkoop and his wife, Jeanne, of Norwood, and Victor Wynkoop and his wife, Karen, of West Branch; one daughter, Rosalle E. Graham, of Port Huron; 15 grandchildren; many great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren; and three sisters, Marion Langworthy of Portland, Ore., Irene Hobbs of Gilby, N.D., and Evelyn Anderson of Hatton, N.D.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Safe Harbor Baptist Church Benevolent Fund. Envelopes for memorials are available at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix, where friends may call from 2-4 p.m. and 6-8 p.m. on Wednesday, Jan. 8.

Lucian L. "Lou" Chapman

Lucian L. "Lou" Chapman, 66, of Charlevoix, died Dec. 26, 1996, at his home in Charlevoix.

He was born Aug. 13, 1930, in Steubenville, Ohio, the son of Edgar and Catherine (Douds) Chapman. He served in the U.S. Army from 1949 to 1951.

On Dec. 13, 1952, he married the former Norma Rideout in Walled Lake, Mich. She preceded him in death in July of 1984. On Nov. 1, 1991, he married the former Sue Knowles in Charlevoix.

Mr. Chapman was a tool and die maker and was employed by Chapman Industries, a metal fabricator located in Detroit. He was also an inventor and holder of several patents. In 1970 he moved to Charlevoix from Novi, where he was employed by the Charlevoix Area Hospital from 1980 to 1993, when he retired. He was a master carpenter, and loved to hunt and enjoyed playing cards.

He is survived by his wife, Sue of Charlevoix; two sons, Philip C. Chapman and George T. Chapman, both of Petoskey; two daughters, Tamara and her husband, Everett Langford, of Pea Ridge, Ark., and Joy Chapman of Grand Rapids, Mich.; eight grandchildren, Bo, Norma, and Hannah Chapman, Trinity (Moore) McAllister, Tessa Moore, and Jennifer, Ashley, and Courtney Chapman; a great-granddaughter, Alexis McAllister.

Memorial contributions may be directed to the family of Lou Chapman, envelopes are available at the Winchester Funeral Home, where visitation was held Monday, Dec. 30.

Wade Healey

Wade Healey, 83, of East Jordan died Thursday, Dec. 26, 1996, at his home.

Private services have taken place at the First Presbyterian Church in East Jordan. The Rev. David Downton officiated, with interment following at Sunset Hill Cemetery in East Jordan.

Mr. Healey was born Sept. 1, 1913, in Los Angeles, Calif., the son of William and Maude (Grover) Healey, Sr. He moved to East Jordan in 1933. On May 11, 1937, in East Jordan, he married Eva Dennis.

Wade owned and operated Healey Hardware in East Jordan for 42 years and retired in 1976. He enjoyed ice fishing, jack lighting, hunting, country western music, reading, and spending time with his grandchildren.

On May 3, 1994, at 11 a.m., he accepted the Lord while in the presence of Cecil Drost, who has since died. Cecil's faithful council was then taken up by the Rev. David Downton.

Wade is survived by his wife, Eva, of East Jordan; five children, Sally (Mark) Pomante of Alden, Linda (Tom) Louiselle and Bruce (Carol) Healey of Charlevoix, Glenda (Gary) Ciszewski and Tom (Zila) Healey of East Jordan; 16 grandchildren; 10 great-grandchildren; and one brother, William (Geraldine) Healey, Jr., of Boyne City. He was preceded in death by one brother, Robert Healey.

Funeral arrangements were handled by Paullin - Penzien Funeral Home, East Jordan.

Mrs. Biddick attended Albion College, was a member of the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix, the Charlevoix Garden Club and the Charlevoix Friends of the Pool. She loved, and was active with, her family.

Survivors include three sons, Kenneth L. Biddick and his wife, Julie, of Petoskey, John H. Biddick, and his wife Joanne, of Harbor Springs, and Cliff Biddick, and his wife, Michelle Rick-Biddick, of Charlevoix; and two daughters, Carol Hellstrom and her husband, Bernie, of Horton Bay, and Annie Berdanier and her husband, Charles, of England; and 13 grandchildren.

The family suggests memorial contributions be made to the Charlevoix Friends of the Pool, P.O. Box 1, Charlevoix, MI, 49720.

Arrangements were handled by the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix.

Rose Mary Mann

Rose Mary Mann, 88, of Charlevoix, died Dec. 26, 1996, at Boulder Park Terrace Nursing Home in Charlevoix.

Funeral was held at 1 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 28, at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix, under the auspices of the V.F.W. Post 1153 Auxiliary and Clement Olach of V.F.W. Post 1153.

She was born on Aug. 18, 1908, in Curtis Bay, Maryland, the daughter of Frank and Mary (Petrik) Novotny. She attended the Loeb School in Charlevoix.

On Oct. 6, 1929, she married Phillip W. Mann in Charlevoix. He preceded her in death on Aug. 14, 1965.

In the 1930s the couple made their home in Bay Shore. In the 1940s they moved to Lansing. In the 1950s they lived in Grand Rapids and returned to Charlevoix in the late 1960s.

Rose Mary was a member of Charlevoix V.F.W. Post 1153 Auxiliary and enjoyed traveling, bingo. She loved her family.

Survivors include two sons, Edwin Mann and his wife Judy, of Charlevoix, and Phillip Mann and his wife Rosemary, of Cedar Springs, Mich.; a granddaughter, Tami Peck and her husband Dave, of East Jordan; five grandsons, Ed Mann and his wife Susan, of Minneapolis, Minn., Phil Mann and his wife Debbie, Mike Mann and his wife Leslie, Keith Mann and his wife Linda, and Richard Mann, all of Cedar Springs, Mich.; seven great-grandchildren, Michael, Melanie, Ashley, Tiffany, Amanda, Shayne, all of Cedar Springs, Mich., and Nik of Minneapolis, Minn.; a brother, Frank Novotny of Charlevoix; two sisters, Lily Novotny, and Edna Gallagher and her husband Chic, of Charlevoix; a sister-in-law, Hazel Neubecker and her husband Ernest, of Kalkaska.

She was preceded in death by two sisters, Helen Flowers and Mary Hardy; a brother, James Novotny; and a close friend and companion, Russell Stratton.

Visitation was held from 6 to 9 p.m. Dec. 27 at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix.

During The Rev. Gordon Cooper's (left) 1995 visit to Charlevoix, he spent time with Father Lander Carter (right) and the Christ Episcopal parish, which he will soon lead as their priest.

Charlevoix priest heads 'down under' for father exchange

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Father Lander Carter is about to step into someone else's shoes. He is on his way to Leongatha, Australia, to lead parishioners in their spiritual journey.

In turn, members of Christ Episcopal Church — where Lander has been a priest for more than seven years — are about to experience the other side of an exchange that isn't as common as high school students coming from and going to foreign lands. A new priest is stepping into the shoes Carter is leaving behind.

The Rev. Gordon Cooper and his wife Rosemary will be arriving in Charlevoix the day before he steps up to the local pulpit — Sunday, Jan. 19.

"This will raise the consciousness of the parish that we belong to a worldwide communion," Carter said during one of his final days at the State Street office. He and his family leave Monday. "We share a faith with people throughout the world."

The two ordained priests are trading places by choice, not assignment.

The exchange includes living in each others' homes and driving each others' cars. They will be using prayer books for services that are similarly written throughout the denomination.

Carter, his wife, Gretchen, and their two youngest children, are packing only what they can take on the plane.

"It's pretty much a clean swap," Carter said.

The father exchange began in 1994, as Cooper sought a way to be closer to his daughter's family in Cadillac. He wrote to the Diocese of Western Michigan inquiring about an exchange. Carter responded out of curiosity. After the men corresponded for the summer, they sought blessings for the move from their bishops and vestry.

"It seemed like a natural fit," Carter said.

After a year delay, because Cooper's appointment as an arch deacon added responsibilities he needed to tend to, the priest is retiring from his position in Australia. Carter will serve as interim priest for six months.

"This is literally as far away from here as you can get," Carter said, noting that distance helped determine the length of the exchange. "It's the other side of the world."

When the opportunity came, Carter was considering a sabbatical. Instead, he's heading to a job that involves sacrament responsibilities at five parishes. He's not sure what to expect.

"I don't know if I'm looking at 40 hours a week or 70," he said.

Carter's 19-year-old daughter, Taylor, will be leaving the family for a time once they arrive in Australia to attend an Outward Bound course. After she returns, she will attend the University of Melbourne. Alex, Carter's 14-year-old son, will attend public school. He is a high school freshman.

The Coopers have five children. However, they are grown, and the couple will be coming north alone. Before becoming a priest 13 years ago, Cooper fulfilled a career in education, first teaching and then being a principal.

His strength in ministry is for youth and older adults. To Carter, that's good news. Most of his 136 church members are older adults and few are young people.

"We definitely need a ministry to children," Carter said. "I see that as critical to the future of the church."

Cooper isn't a complete stranger to those who will look to him for guidance in the coming six months. He preached in Charlevoix once in 1995 as an introduction.

Carter leaves with a confidence that everyone — in Charlevoix and Australia — will benefit from the father exchange.

"It will be a broadening experience," he said, noting that it's easy for people to get focused on their traditions and begin to question those who do things differently. "We begin to think that people do as we do and think as we think. That's just not life."

The Carters are expected to return to Charlevoix in early July.

Media follows detectives to Charlevoix on Ramsey case

rests are pending.

The Boulder Police Department is not directly releasing information about the case at this time, except through press conferences that are being held at Boulder's city hall and organized through Aaholm.

A desire for information is taking the nation by storm. Out-of-state and downstate newspapers and television stations are on the heels of the investigators as reporters travel to Charlevoix — either by telephone or vehicle — to learn more about the investigation and the Ramseys.

Local freelance writer, Sara Gay Dammann, contracted with People Magazine to write a profile of the Ramseys and their life in Charlevoix. She found the family's friends hesitant to talk.

"People are really clamming up," she said. "People were tired, and some frightened of the press."

> "People are really clamming up. People were tired, and some frightened of the press."
> — Sara Gay Dammann

However, in her travels, Dammann has found the Ramseys friends supportive.

"The people who I identified as friends of the Ramseys were universally supportive and concerned for the tragedy," she said.

Pictures of the Ramseys' home were taken by Petoskey News-Review photographer, G. Randall Goss, and submitted with Dammann's article, which could run as soon as next week.

Back in Boulder, the Ramseys are regaining control of their home, which was seized for the investigation. It is not known if the family intends to resume residency in the home. JonBenet's body was found in the basement there by her father hours after a ransom note was discovered.

Police are scheduling appointments to interview JonBenet's parents, according to Aaholm.

They have also received more than 250 calls on a voicemail tip line as part of the ongoing investigation.

Charitable gift

Michael S. Lord

Michael S. Lord, 45, of Norwood, died Dec. 22, 1996, at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

Funeral was 11 a.m. Tuesday, Dec. 24, at Belltower Reformed Church in Ellsworth. The Rev. Thomas Welscott will officiate, with burial in Norwood Cemetery.

Mr. Lord was born July 14, 1951, in Traverse City, the son of Stanley "Stub" G. and Catherine (Richardson) Lord. He was raised in Norwood, and graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1970.

On June 30, 1972, he married Nancy L. Vandenberg in Ellsworth.

He had been employed by LexaLite International since 1972 as a tool and die maker.

Mr. Lord enjoyed hunting, playing golf and especially his family.

Survivors include his wife, Nancy L.; son, Jesse M.; daughter, Kate E.; and his parents, Stanley "Stub" and Catherine Lord, all of Norwood. He is also survived by his father- and mother-in-law, Jacob and Alice Vandenberg, of Ellsworth; three brothers-in-law, Harold Vandenberg and wife, Betsy, of Stevenson, Wash., Marvin Vandenberg of Albuquerque, N.M., and Neil Vandenberg and wife, Luann, of Ellsworth; and 11 sisters-in-law, Dorothy Rynearson and husband, Irwin, of Waukegan, Ill., Marilyn Carpenter and husband, Steven, of East Jordan, Betty Carpenter and husband, Nathan, of Jenison, Ruth Alderman and husband, Guy, of Mims, Fla., Linda Richardson and husband, Kenneth, of Farwell, Mich., Carole Schettler of Traverse City, Althea Olds and husband, Richard, of Kingsley, Thelma Chellis and husband, Steven, of Ellsworth, Janet Drenth and husband, Hud, of Ellsworth, Barbara Vanstedum and husband, Richard, of Ellsworth, and Eileen Danbert and husband, Jack, of Ellsworth.

The family suggests memorial contributions be made to the Norwood United Methodist Church or to the Norwood Cemetery Association. Envelopes for memorials are available at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix, where visitation was held from 6-8 p.m. Dec. 23.

TV channels not likely to return

TCI location, said she has received numerous "concerns" about the channel changes. However, she believes that the bulk of the displeasure stems from the company not notifying customers prior to the change.

"It's not normally now we do it," she said, noting that late finalization of the year-end changes didn't provide notification time.

She said the company's decisions about programming was based on business decisions, costs and a desire for variety.

"It was a major channel realignment," she said, noting that the changes affects TCI customers across the nation.

Even though most of the complaints coming into the company involve viewers losing the Nashville Network and Arts and Entertainment, Martin said there are no plans to bring the two channels back to customers.

Shortly after the changes occurred, councilman Butch Russell said he began to look into buying a satellite dish. The store had had a line of people with the same ideas throughout the day.

Barnes said that the city owns the cable poles and has a nonexclusive contract with TCI.

The idea of having a city cable system is not new. According to city manager, Mike Wiesner, the last time council considered the possibility, it decided to wait and see how other groups were handling making a similar change.

Porter said he is sure that a solution can be found to offer the city's viewers "the highest form of viewing." A community doesn't need two shopping channels to take local dollars when the cable company complains about not having enough slots to include certain channels.

"They're full of garbage," he said of the current slots.

9-1-1 will accept alpha numbers

don't conform with the emergency system's advice.

"If we have been told that a certain approach could cause confusion — and there is confusion — there is a potential for liability," he said.

Roxanne Beach, master street address guide coordinator for the 9-1-1 central dispatch authority, said Tuesday that she doesn't see a problem in using the alpha numbers as long as each apartment and office address is provided to the authority and clearly labeled at the location. Without it, a time delay can occur during an emergency.

With the enhanced system, 9-1-1 has a location field where additional information is placed by keying it into a database. Alpha and mobile home lot numbers are placed there for rescuers to see when responding in an emergency.

Beach said alpha and lot numbers cannot be added to the original computer map, and the location field is how the system differentiates between apartments and mobile homes when one main address is used. Having the correct information in the computer is crucial when someone who has dialed 9-1-1 can't speak.

Renters must be informed of their correct address so that the telephone company will list it correctly, Beach said.

Store owners decide off-season store hours

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

The punk rock group The Clash are still singing the question, "Should I stay or should I go?" It's a question many Charlevoix business owners ask themselves once Old Man Winter puts his feet up until spring.

To many, the city turns into too much of a ghost town once the summer frenzy ends. Charlevoix has a good mix of stores that stay open, but many like Northern Possessions, Kilwin's, Mercado Imports and Splash close their doors. At times, a cannonball could be shot down Bridge street and not hit an open business.

One factor in determining whether to brave seasonal slouches is the building that stores are in. Those who rent and lease are apt to close, while those who own the building and the business will stay open.

"That way they can work themselves," said Susan Dobson, owner of Michelle's, a year-round gift shop in Charlevoix. Dobson does close down for a few weeks in January to barnstorm the country's gift shows.

"I'll be buying the stuff that I'll be selling all year long," she said. She plans on going to shows in Miami, Atlanta, New York and San Francisco.

Labor pains are another consideration. If business slows due to a lack of people, then the same can be said for the work force.

Consider Juilleret's. The same restaurant that closes in Harbor Springs because of the challenge in finding help, remains open, under different ownership, in Charlevoix. Still owner Mary Ann Hodack has fits every winter keeping a staff.

"We have such a turnover in staff, that come May we're looking at a whole new crew. It's a continuous training," she said. Hodack said the restaurant only has two full-time employees year-round, and that she and her partner, Mary Morrison, work the floor to compensate the smaller staff.

That does not mean business is at a halt. Hodack, who stays open because it is "a service to the community," expects this winter to be better than usual because of the new snowmobile trail.

"It's going to help, but we need to support it more because we need the business it will bring to town," she said.

Being unique is a key for Dobson as she tries to keep Michelle's afloat. Last year while purchasing for her store, she focused on smaller, inexpensive items that one might pick-up for a spur-of-the-moment gift. As a result, her "off-season" was better than in previous years.

"You have to be creative, yet cautious and not sell what everyone else is selling," she said. "The secret is selling things that you can't buy in a department store."

It's unfair to blame everything on winter. After all, with all the slopes and trails people do visit the area. The hardest times are late fall, specifically November, and the springish months of March and April.

"All of January may be the same as one good day in July," Dobson said, "but all of April might not even be a bad day in June."

Added Judy Adams, owner of Northern Possessions, "March and April are downers, even the local people are gone." Adams' store in Charlevoix will be closed until May, but the store in Harbor Springs remains open because of the town's proximity to the ski slopes.

Most that remain open will scale down their hours to focus just on the weekends, like Bananarama, or will close shop for a few weeks in the spring. Bananarama store employee Joe Richter describes the weekend business.

"The holidays are wonderful, Saturdays are nice, but Sundays are slow, people are leaving," he said, noting that Charlevoix might not get the ski business Boyne City or Harbor Springs does. "We may get some of the stragglers."

See you in the Spring

Business in brief

Local bank president appointed to mental health board

Louis Hollow is the newly elected secretary for the Northern Michigan Community Mental Health Board, a board that serves Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Emmet and Otsego counties.

Hollow, of Charlevoix, is the newest member of the mental health board, having been appointed in September 1996. He has lived in Charlevoix since 1973 and is president and chief executive officer of Charlevoix State Bank. He has been an active member of the Charlevoix Area Hospital Board of Directors, Charlevoix Lions Club and the Boyne City Yacht Club.

Hollow also has served on the Governor's Supreme Court Commission. He is a member of the Charlevoix Development Corporation and the Charlevoix County Community Foundation Board of Directors.

Other elected officers for 1997 are chairperson, Paul Lenahan, chairperson, and Alice Mushlock, vice-chairperson. Lenahan is from Harbor Springs and Mushlock is from Cheboygan.

The mental health board meets at 4 p.m. on the third Thursday of each month at its administrative offices in Petoskey. The meetings are open to the public.

Secretary of State to close for coming holidays

Charlevoix's branch office for the Secretary of State will be closed Monday, Jan. 20, for Martin Luther King Jr. Day, and Monday, Feb. 17, for Presidents' Day.

Motorists having plates expiring those days are advised to renew early.

Statewide power company changes its name

Consumer Power Co., the owner of Big Rock Point nuclear power plant, is starting the new year with a new name — Consumers Energy.

The utility traces its history to 1886, when its founder, W.A. Foote, opened Jackson Electric Light Works in Jackson.

In 1910, Foote joined forces with other utility owners to form a holding company, Consumers Power Co.

The utilities name has remained the same since.

The new name is designed to represent "a more consistent impression of the value-added services," including the natural gas portion of the company, said Consumers' president, Michael Morris.

Indoor soccer sports family fun

Winter league in play

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

When Lindsey Carland comes home after winning a Saturday night soccer game, she has bragging rights over most of the house. Her brother and mother also play on the Charlevoix Indoor Soccer League.

"It gives a little extra competitive edge," the 14-year-old said. "You get to rub it in at home."

> "It gives a little extra competitive edge. You get to rub it in at home."
> — Lindsey Carland

The Carlands add to three of the six teams that make up the league, which began play just before Christmas. Each Saturday night the middle school gym comes alive with shouts from on and off the court.

Erika Kammermann, 15, said playing on the league gives her improvement time during the off season. She plays soccer for the Rayders in the spring.

"You get to play with different age groups," she noted as another bonus.

The league welcomes 42 players who are at least high-school aged. Teams are balanced by ability and gender, with each team being assigned at least two strong players.

The teams move up and down the gymnasium floor defending their goals. It's become a yearly pastime for those Charlevoix residents who are serious about soccer. This is the league's third season.

For Erika, indoor soccer provides a worthwhile activity during winter weekends. The league lasts 10 weeks.

Tom Conlan, Hagen Manker and Eric Kammermann formed the league after the three of them had been driving to Traverse City on Saturday nights for their share of soccer action.

They have been joined by individuals and families from throughout Charlevoix. Conlan's teen-age daughter also plays.

"It's all fun," Conlan said. "It's good competition and it doesn't get nasty."

Geralyn Doskoch (right) defends her goal against Steve Carland during Saturday's match between the Red Lumps and The Black Team. The Red Lumps won the game, 3-2.

Indoor soccer league standings

Currently, the Grey Ghosts lead the Charlevoix Indoor Soccer League, 2-0-1. The team has scored 14 goals to earn its standing. However, the White Knights are running a close second with 2 wins and 1 loss.

Next up is Yellow Snow, 1-0-2, followed by Green Crew, 1-1-1, Red Lumps, 1-2, and Black Team, 0-3.

Scorers for the league during Saturday's games were Steve Carland, with 2, and Ryan Vogelheim with one for the Red Lumps, which topped The Black Team, 3-2. Bob Molter scored both goals for The Black Team.

In game two, the Grey Ghosts defeated the White Knights, 5-2. Scoring for the ghosts were Ed Fantozzi, 1, Todd Schaperkotter, 1, Jamie Oppermann, 1, and Ted Newcomb, 2. Hagen Manker and Tom Conlan each scored once for the White Knights.

In game three, the Green Crew tied Yellow Snow, 3-3. Scoring for Yellow Snow were Jill Ramsey, 1, and Eric Hess, 2. Scoring for the Green Crew were Nicki Sheldon, 1, Marvin Whitthoeft, 1, and Noel Kammermann, 1.

League play continues at 6:30 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 11, at the middle school gymnasium.

Rayder volleyball tops Ellsworth in first conference match

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

After testing their mettle in two pre-season invitationals, the Charlevoix Rayder volleyball team began their regular season schedule by hammering Ellsworth 15-4, 15-4, 15-1.

Lisa Wheat and Emily Murray lead the team with seven kills apiece with Amanda Eaton adding five kills. Strong defensive effort was provided by Eaton, Carrie Blanchard, and Laura Maltese, and coach Brenda Bryan applauded Blanchard and Lyndsay Blechel for their serving.

The win came on the heels of the team participating in tournaments over the holidays. The competition was stiff, and the Rayders more than held their own coming out of play with a 10-4 record.

In the Roscommon Invitational, Charlevoix left town with a 5-3 record. Twice they defeated Manistee and Houghton Lake, split their games with host Roscommon, and dropped two games to Traverse City Central. A good showing, but not good enough to advance out of the round robin competition. Still Bryan was pleased.

"We played really well, and our pool was very strong," she said. Charlevoix was the only class C school in the pool. Manistee, Houghton, and Roscommon are class B, and TC-Central is a class A.

"It was tough to get out of there, and we only missed by a few points," Bryan said. The Rayders failed to advance because they lost on tie-breaker points to Roscommon.

Next they went to Petoskey. They swept Inland Lakes and Harbor Springs before splitting with Petoskey. The same fate awaited them, however, as they could not advance because Petoskey had more overall points. Instead they played a consolation match and lost to Cedarville.

Despite not placing in either tournament, the Rayders showed they can play with anyone, and Bryan would not trade the experience.

"We met some teams that we'll never see again," she said. "The girls are feeling really good about how they played, and I liked to see that because it boosted their confidence."

She added that the competition moves downstate as the state tournament moves into deeper rounds, and her players need to see how other teams are playing the game of volleyball to better their own perspective.

Bryan, herself, gained some perspective as to what kind of team she has as the conference season approached. Bryan would like to win the regular season crown.

Despite winning the last two conference tournaments, the Rayders have fallen short of a conference title because the champion is determined by combining regular season results with year-end tournament results. By falling short during the season, the Rayders are without a trophy.

Bryan feels this season might be different.

"This is going to be a good group," she said. "They work hard, but they talk to each other and support each other on the court."

The season continues with the team's first conference match Thursday at Boyne City.

No play Saturday for varsity basketball

The varsity basketball game was canceled Saturday because of harsh weather.

The match against the Saints will be rescheduled for either Saturday, Feb. 1 or Feb. 8, according to Charlevoix Athletic Director, Barry Anderson.

The Rayders next play at home Friday, Jan. 10, against Boyne City. The junior varsity game starts at 6 p.m. The team will also be playing Elk Rapids at home Tuesday, Jan. 14.

Wrestlers coming back from break

The wrestling team had Christmas vacation off. Its next match is Thursday, Jan. 9, at Gaylord. The wrestlers will also test their skill at Cheboygan's junior varsity tournament at 9 a.m. Saturday, Jan. 11.

Junior varsity volleyball 0-1

The junior varsity volleyball team fell to Ellsworth during its first conference match Monday. Scores for the best two out of three were 3-15 and 5-15.

"It was our first time out," said coach Annemarie Statsick. "They had some pretty good servers and that's hard to beat at a junior varsity level.

Statsick lauded Mandy Webb for good serving, Julie Swenor and Crystal Casciani for their offensive accomplishments and Wendy Wood for playing good defense.

Bump jumper manufacturing has Charlevoix history

By Geoffrey D. Reynolds
Courier columnist

With the winter carnival approaching, it is only fitting that the history of one Charlevoix's best known secrets be told. For it was here that the legendary "bump jumper" was manufactured in mass for children to master during the long winter seasons.

The history of the Snow-Scooter began with the formation of Foster Boat Co., which was located in the building originally built by the Ferry Seed Co. to house its local seed packaging plant.

About 1940, Bill Wallace and Harry Foster purchased the building and started making items out of maple that had been shipped from Beaver Island and local wood lots.

Soon they received a contract to make rough turned bowling pins, and possibly bowling balls, from the Brunswick Co. of Muskegon. This contract lasted for about a year. It is said that the contract ended in court because the wood hadn't been dried properly and was still sappy upon delivery, and that the equipment to make the pins was never delivered from Brunswick.

Shortly after that, when World War II came along, Bill Wallace pulled out of the company. Harry Foster stayed and was soon contracted by the United States government to construct several small, boat designs out of plywood and local pine.

Models included a boat called an Attack Personal Assault (APA); a sailing dinghy for leisure activities; a lightweight, outboard motorboat used by allies in the crossing of the Rhine River; a craft used to haul personnel to seaplanes while moored offshore, a seaplane rearming boat; and the handling boat used to tow seaplanes from one location to another.

Another wartime product included temporary troop shelters. These shelters were as large as a double stall garage and included a shipping design that resembled two shoe box lids fastened together. After being dropped from the air to awaiting soldiers, the sides were opened and metal bow frames were removed and used to construct the roof. Canvas was added to form the roof and ends. In each shelter a small stove was included for cooking and heating.

After the hostilities ended, Foster Boat Co., and many other war contract wood manufacturing companies, turned to the pleasure watercraft industry. While Foster turned out a few designs, it never gained the production levels of better known companies. The oar manufacturing department also failed after the war. Locally harvested ash logs, used in making the oars, were becoming increasingly harder to find.

In the summer of 1947 woodworkers at the plant, such as C. J. Fiedler, decided to manufacture a recreational snow toy out of scrap wood materials and extra parts used in the manufacturing boats. The design included an 18- by 3-inch, metal covered runner topped with a piece of plywood for a seat. Small pieces of wood were attached under the seat to serve as handles. After the pine parts were cut, a coat of shellac was added, and a label reading "Snow-Scooter, Foster Boat Company, Charlevoix, Michigan" was added.

The toy was packaged, unassembled, with assembly screws in a box.

While it is unknown where this toy — commonly referred to as a "bump jumper"' originated — local enthusiasts such as Hilda Gibson and Don Meggison remember hand-building them from scrap wood and using barrel staves for runners as early as 1918. The toy's design most likely came from the long-time use of the scooters by local residents.

After running out of scraps, production of the Snow-Scooter stopped without workers knowing the number manufactured that summer. Family members and workers could only attest that it filled a good portion of the third floor of the plant.

After manufacturing, the Snow-Scooters were stored on the third floor of the plant until Dec. 1954. Paul Foster then took a carload of the toys to the Dalquist store to market them. After convincing the reluctant owner of the toys potential appeal to local children, the entire load was left to be sold. After returning to Charlevoix from Arkansas, Foster was pleased to learn that all of the Snow-Scooters had sold and at a great rate.

Although originals and replicas of the Snow-Scooter had been popular before and since the Christmas of 1954, little is known of how many of the toys have survived. While unofficial competitions still occur locally, the championships once held during the Charlevoix Winter Carnival ended in 1983 with the crowning of Bo Boss as the champion in the open division.

To enjoy the sight of an original Snow-Scooter, visit the Charlevoix Historical Society's Harsha House Museum, where two are currently on exhibit.

Appledore could sail away from Charlevoix forever

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

The Appledore is about to have a make or break 1997 season.

Ticket sales have not been high enough to keep the passenger sailboat in town to charter trips around Lake Charlevoix. To avoid the break, the boat's owners are looking for a more visible place for set up shop and a season sporting 20 more passengers a day.

"We don't feel we're attracting enough people from our small hole-in-the-wall office," Appledore captain, Don Hicks, told the downtown development authority during a pitch to move the office.

For six seasons, tickets to cruise on the Appledore have been sold from an office the width of a door on Bridge Street.. The office extends eight feet deep, just enough to set up a computer and handle ticket sales.

In a letter to the city manager, Bill Allgaier, an Appledore owner, said that "unless drastic changes can occur with our presence in Charlevoix, I feel that we are in for another year of lackluster results which may force us to move the boat to another market area. Please don't take this as a threat but simply as a matter of economics."

Hicks said the company is already looking at other summer docking options.

The captain has sailed aboard the Appledore as long as she's been in Charlevoix, making three trips a day out through the channel and finally resting at the city docks. He would like to stay in Charlevoix, and his sentiment is matched by the members of the development authority, who see the boat as a draw for the commu-

Legal ban sought for coroner's photos

Much of the nation is responding to JonBenet Patricia Ramsey's murder with intense curiosity. Who killed the pageant princess?

Amid the swarm of media coverage, the publication of photographs in the Globe has crossed a line for some. A group of store owners in Charlevoix and Boulder are banning the sale of the tabloid. Law enforcement officials in Colorado are conducting a beefed up investigation as to who leaked the prints.

The Boulder County Attorney's office filed a motion for a restraining order Monday that would prevent Globe from printing any additional photos from the JonBenet case obtained from the coroner's office.

The motion states that further publication of photographs in the Globe's possession would result in "irrepairable damage to the police investigation and to the possibility of a fair trial," according to Jana Petersen, Boulder Board of County Commissioners public information officer.

Boulder police believe publications of these photos will not impede the investigation, according to Leslie Aaholm. However, any information which becomes public or common knowledge prior to an arrest will restrict the po-

Alcohol involved in local crash

Timothy DeYoung, 38, of Charlevoix, received multiple fractures and internal injuries when he was thrown from a snowboard that was being towed by a snowmobile, the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department reported.

About 12:10 a.m. Saturday, DeYoung was being pulled along a driveway in Marion Township by Russell "Pat" Curtis, 29, also of Charlevoix, when he struck the icy driveway. He was taken to Charlevoix Area Hospital and then transported to Northern Michigan Hospital. He was discharged at 1:13 p.m. Monday, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Alcohol use was involved in the accident, police said.

Events in brief

Driver pushed into local restaurant

An accident Friday landed a car in the side of Chee Peng Chinese Restaurant at 1411 Bridge Street.

Christopher Romig, 16, of Charlevoix, was given a hazardous citation after his lane change. He was heading south on Bridge Street, when he pushed a car driven by Mark Pirie, 42, of Charlevoix, into the restaurant. Romig, who was originally in the left hand lane, landed in the snowbank at the right of the road.

Winter challenge schedule moved back

The Mt. McSauba Snow Challenge has been scheduled for Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 15 and 16.

The community event is normally held the second weekend of February. However, because the first day of the month fell on a Saturday, the challenge was scheduled for the third weekend of the month.

Legislator holds office hours in Charlevoix

State Rep. Beverly Bodem, R-Alpena, will hold office hours for Charlevoix constituents from 9-10:30 a.m. Friday, Jan. 17, at the Charlevoix County Building.

Anyone needing additional information can contact the lawmaker by calling 1 (800) 29-BODEM.

Camp Daggett taking applications

Camp Daggett runs eight one-week summer sessions that start Sunday, June 15, and run through Saturday, Aug. 9.

Children must be between 7 and 14 years old to attend. Both boys and girls attend each week, with a maximum of 60 boys and 60 girls.

Cost for one week is $170 for residents of Emmet and Charlevoix counties, and $255 a week for everyone else. Scholarships are available for needy in-county children.

Spaces fill fast. Applications are available at the Charlevoix chamber of commerce and the elementary and middle schools.

A $75 deposit must be sent with the application.

For more information, call 347-9742.

Local earnings from CROP Walk announced

Of the $14,439.50 raised by the Charlevoix County Crop Walk, $1,205.75 has been returned to each food pantry in Charlevoix, Boyne City and East Jordan.

Walkers from each community raised the money through sponsors.

Pageant seeks participants

The Mrs. Michigan International Pageant, which will select a Mrs. Charlevoix County, is looking for participants.

The pageant is open to married women between the ages of 24 and 56. Competition include an interview, aerobic-wear and evening gown. There are no swimsuit or talent competitions.

The pageant will be held Sunday, April 20, at Smith Theatre at Oakland Community College in Farmington Hills.

Those interested in applying can write Michigan Pageants, Inc. 2474 Pontiac Drive, Sylvan Lake, MI, 48320, call 810-682-7616 or FAX 810-682-7617.

Correction

In the Jan. 8 issue, the amount given to the Charlevoix Fire Department for headsets was misreported.

The bank presented $1,000 to firefighter Joe Schwartzfisher for the department's effects in setting up and tearing down the 1996 Charlevoix Industrial Fair.

Carver is on the injured list. And for this goose, a broken wing means more than sitting out of a game. For the second winter, he's been unable to fly south. Employees at Irish Boat Shop fed the goose some last winter. The goose is named Carver. "We call him Carver because we were going to carve him up for Thanksgiving and never did," company employee, Don Pero.

High school seniors look at land option, district needs

During a class period Thursday, a group of Annemarie Statsick's government students discussed the future of Charlevoix schools and what — as future taxpayers — they are willing to support.

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Big buildings and lavish interiors won't give Charlevoix better schools.

Those are the words of Galen S. Paxton, a senior government student who thinks too much emphasis is being put where students are taught.

"The emphasis should be on getting kids to want to learn and use their minds," he said.

As the community and school board go around about whether to update aging buildings or start fresh, high school seniors are looking for necessities — for themselves and their children.

The thought of paying for three new schools in the next 20-30 years is overwhelming for the seniors.

"I'm willing to support schools," said Jenny Eveleigh. "But it's hard to say because it's going to cost so much money."

Eveleigh, like all the seniors, is unsure of what kind of job — or income — she will have when she

Board must decide how to buy land

Although the school board has announced the location of its 117-acre land option, it is no closer to deciding how to pay for the investment.

The land is priced at $170,000, and a one-and-a-half year option gives the board time to think about the purchase.

According to district superintendent, Roberta Jackson, the board

Young drivers pay higher price

Jerry Puhl, Charlevoix's driver's education instructor, met with parents Wednesday to outline the legislative changes of the program.

The most compelling change means that schools may begin to charge students for participating in driver's education classes. In the past it had been at no student cost.

Puhl estimates that the program costs about $300 a student to run. The state will be offering schools a stipend that schools are required to match. Any costs left over will have to be covered by the student.

For example, if the state gives a stipend of $75 per student. After the school matches that, $150 is left over (based on Puhl's estimate) for the student and family to cover.

"I was told the stipend could be as high as $150 or as low as $50," high school principal Gary Grundman said.

Beginning April 1, 1997, the education of the state's future motorists will also change. It will be pared into three levels.

Level one, which students may begin at age 14 years and nine months, is the most extensive of the stages. First, students must pass through 22 hours of classroom time and six hours of driving instruction. Before going on, would-be drivers must complete 50 hours of documented driving time with 10 of those hours being driven at night.

The student must drive with a parent or with any other licensed driver over the age of 21 who has parental approval. When this step is completed, along with a time passage of six months, then the student will graduate to level two.

At this level eight more hours of class time awaits the student. At level two, the student may drive during certain hours. They are put on a curfew from being behind the wheel between midnight and 5 a.m. After six months, the students will have to pass a road test, a requirement previously not needed in the state of Michigan.

Council should waver less once decision's made

EDITORIAL

Councilman Gabe Campbell says he wants out of the street renumbering business.

Yet, changes keep creeping before council because the committee on which he and councilman Bob Timms serve keep presenting resolutions for change. Some people are being allowed to use their addresses from before 9-1-1 changes; others are not.

Let it end. And the only way to do so is for the committee to stop making exceptions to the rule.

The rule — as council determined it to be in a formal vote— is that certain addresses were to be changed to better improve the response of rescuers during an emergency.

A decision was made after seemingly endless discussion and review.

People have made valid arguments that not all of the changes were necessary. There was an exhausting battle over the renaming of Belvedere Avenue to East Hurlbut. The latest includes claims that the city almost put someone out of business because they couldn't get their mail. Another business had 20,000 boxes in stock with their original address.

Admittedly, the changes have cost businesses money, as they've had to order new letterheads, envelopes and inform customers and suppliers of the change. Some individuals have had to part with life-long addresses without even moving; others have been granted the exception.

Council has got to stop wavering on its original decision, of which Campbell and Timms were a part. Since then, residents have worn them down. And the rest of the council is looking just as frazzled as the committee members when a street renaming or renumbering issue is mentioned.

As council agreed to change the downtown business addresses back Jan. 6, the members expressed a desire to get the resolution passed and put behind them, even against the opinion of the mayor and statements by the city attorney that the change presented a liability possibility. Is that the approach council will take if more people press for their addresses to be changed back? Will it become true that anyone who raises their voice and causes difficulty for council will get their way?

Part of being a city leader is to stand behind the decisions made. Before a vote is taken, each representative should carefully weigh what is best for their constituents and for the community as a whole. With that done, why do we continue to see war-torn looks on the faces of councilmen as yet another address exception is made?

Not even the street renumbering committee is operating as a whole. Campbell and Timms were the only two who decided and backed the most recent exception. The other two committee members, police chief Dennis Halverson and city manager Mike Wiesner, didn't want to be involved.

We douht anybody wants to be involved in making these decisions after such an exhausting war. Decisions shouldn't be pushed through in that light, the way they are when the legislature is about to recess.

The public is as tired of the ongoing wavering as the council.

Let it end.

Coordinator thanks community for teaching students postive life lesson

Editor

On behalf of the students, staff and parents of Charlevoix Middle School, our deepest gratitude goes out to the many kindhearted individuals, organizations and businesses whose contributions to the 15th Annual "Spirit of Christmas" food drive made in 1996 the best year ever.

The total of 40,000 items, including $8,700 in cash, delivered to the Community Food Pantry on Dec. 20 by the happy students is nothing short of remarkable.

Our students scoured the entire community, seeking people who would share their hounty with those among us who are less fortunate.

They brought back to the middle school not only your donations but also the spirit of kindness and generosity the people of Charlevoix were so willing to share with them.

Truly, the "Spirit of Christmas" has been instilled in these youngsters and they will, throughout their lives, warmly remember the lesson of caring and sharing graciously taught them by the people of Charlevoix.

We offer a special thank you to the many individuals and businesses whose cash contributions helped this food drive reach a new level this Christmas.

We appreciate the help from: LexaLite, CB North, Top Rank Disposal, County State Bank, Re/Max, Whitney's Oyster Bar, Irish Boat Works, Horizon Video, Cinema III, G.L.F. Ltd., John Merrill D.D.S., Bogart's Cleaning Service, Cass Supply, Pat McKeown Ford, Pepsi-Cola, Coca-Cola, Charlevoix Country Club, R.B. Lyons Inc., Central Drug Store, Thomas B. DeKorte D.P.M., Weathervane Restaurant, Way Transportation, Crown Motors, Haggard's Plumbing, Villager Pub, Kmart, Glen's Market, Brumm's Studio, Bullfrog Light Co., Ron Agnello C.P.A., Charlevoix Federal Credit Union, Medusa Cement Co., Charlevoix teachers and support staff, and many other individual, business and anonymous donors.

We especially appreciate the generous help and dedication of Beth and Frank Shepherd, whose many hours of invaluable service during the food drive brought a new excitement to our students.

The total food and cash donated over Christmas to the Community Food Pantry through the cooperative efforts of the middle school and the people of Charlevoix will be enough to fund the operation for approximately seven months of 1997.

We can all take heart that such goodness as this is alive and well. Happy New Year!

EDITH

EDITH GILBERT

Recently, I was invited to give a talk on table manners to high school students from the new charter school in Charlevoix, Northwest Academy. "You never know," I advised, "someday you may be invited to a State dinner at the White House!"

Or, you may he a guest as I was last week at Greenbrier, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., where 23 presidents of the United States have vacationed. This historic landmark and health spa was purchased by the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad more than 100 years ago, and turned into a posh family and convention center.

Please believe me, etiquette is still alive and well there. Everyone dresses for dinner every night. Men and boys wear suits and ties and little girls wear party dresses in each of the five formal dining rooms. Tables are set with three forks and two knives. You don't see any baseball caps there.

What you will see are numerous three-generation families gathered together enjoying a quiet and tempting meal. Candlelight and soft music keep babes in arms, toddlers, teenagers, parents and grandparents relaxed and happy. Over the hill and through the woods to grandmother's house we go-no more!

During the Twelve Days of Christmas at Greenbrier, there is something for everyone. Just like on a cruise, one is entertained morning, noon and night. For those interested in active play, there is a championship golf course, an Olympic size swimming pool, an ice skating rink, and horse back riding through woodsy trails. There are indoor tennis courts, bowling alleys and fitness classes with a spa. One may sign up for bridge, falconry or dance lessons. There are also concerts, movies and children's programs. In addition for the sit-down crowd, there are dozens of lectures on topics ranging from finances, to fashion tips and fine art series by experts.

With such stiff competition, it's no wonder that I was hesitant to present my museum slide talk, When Eating Became Dining, as well as an impromptu talk the next day on The Fine Art of Table Setting. What a surprise to have a standing-room-only crowd. Both men and women peppered me with questions. Where does the salad fork go for a buffet dinner? Why are wine glasses only half filled? Why is the white wine glass larger than the red wine glass? How do you serve sugar substitutes? Why not place napkins inside a glass? Should one put fork tines down on the plate when one is finished? We discussed the origin of the fork and Russian service with service plates, the advantage of using place cards, choosing proper carving utensils, wine bottles vs. carafes, the height of candlesticks and how to enlarge the dining room table.

These questions were a far cry from the ones I was asked by the Charlevoix high school crowd. (Where do you put your gum?) However, both groups were fun, and I enjoyed every minute of it.

Not satisfied with the four page handout I had prepared, the Greenbrier audience pleaded, "Don't you have a book on all this practical and historical material?"

"I'm working on it," I promised.

Subsequently, grandparents admitted to me that they were distressed to see their grandchildren mostly eating fast foods on the run in front of television. Of course, with both parents working, there's little time for leisurely family meals with good conversation, plus an occasional nudge now and then, "sit up straight" and "put the napkin on your lap," as was routinely practiced by past generations.

Still even today, there may come a time when one needs to know how to use a finger bowl, and enjoy dining with confidence. Going to Greenbrier for the holidays is certainly one of them.

College scholarship competition opens

The Charlevoix Historical Society is sponsoring the Benona Jane Kohler scholarship essay competition. The competition seeks student essays or projects relating to some aspect of Charlevoix history.

The winner of the competition receives a $500 scholarship.

The scholarship is open to Charlevoix High School seniors. Entries can be papers or projects done for class credit during the current school year or specifically for the competition.

The deadline for entering is Monday, March 31, 1997. Students are encouraged to use the Historical Society's museum and the library for research.

To make arrangements to use the museum or for additional information, call 547-0373 or 547-4640 after 5 p.m.

Wedding

Dillon-Daavid

Christine Dillon and Joel Daavid were joined in marriage Aug. 17, 1996, during an outdoor wedding at the Frank Lloyd Wright Ranch in Malibu, Calif.

Moises Gonzalez performed the double-ring rites before 100 guests.

Christine is the daughter of Patricia Butler and John Dillon, both of Charlevoix. Joel is the son of Jack and Orfa Esqueda, of San Antonio, Texas.

The bride was given in marriage by her mother and father. She wore an antique white renaissance, floor-length gown with floor-length veil. She carried pink and white roses with ivy.

Renaissance classical music was played during the ceremony.

Maid of honor was Katherine Dillon-Gamhill. Bridesmaids were Gina Gamhill, Leyla Sohaey and Coco Piuce.

They wore burgundy empire wasted, above-the-knee, dresses with matching hurgundy shoes. They carried hydrangias with purple roses.

Flower girls were Raquel Monoz and Lori Otto, whose dresses matched the bridesmaids'.

Ring bearer was David Thurston.

Best man was Crash Gopinath. Groomsmen were Henry Gambill, III, Salaridi and Wayne Everette.

Ushers were Andrew Wood and Scott Tallenger.

A reception followed the ceremony at the Frank Lloyd Wright Ranch.

Rehearsal dinner was held Aug. 16, at the home of Dr. and Mrs. William Gambill, II, in Pacific Palisades, Calif. It was hosted by Katherine Dillon-Gambill.

A wedding trip was taken to France and Italy.

The couple are making their home in Santa Monica, Calif., where Christine is the assistant program administrator for Pepperdine University in Malibu and Joel is a self-employed director of photography.

Levels added to driver's ed

"In the past it's been up to the instructor to pass the student," Puhl said. "But I think it's good for another person looking at them to see how they're doing."

Once the road test is passed, it's off to level three. It's simple here. Apply for a license at the secretary of state's office, and if all requirements have been met, young drivers will get the lamination machine buzzing because a driver's license — with no restrictions — awaits.

Levels one and two are nothing more than prohationary periods. Any traffic violations from creeping through a stop sign on a deserted back road to driving while under the influence of alcohol will force the student to go back to the beginning. Also during this time, parents may choose to veto their child's license for disciplinary reasons.

In the past, only 30 hours of class time and passing of a written test were needed for a license. And anyone who begins a driver's education class before April 1 will still follow the old program. Puhl, who has taught driver's ed in Charlevoix for more than three decades, likes the new focus.

"It puts some restraints on the process and makes kids put more effort into getting their licenses," he said.

Funding helps with respite care

Northern Michigan Community Mental Health Board has been awarded more than $26,000 in additional funds to assist with respite support services for families who are caring for a minor child with a serious emotional disturbance.

The funding was awarded by the Department of Community Health from tobacco tax revenues.

Funding is availahle to any family in Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Emmet or Otsego Counties who is caring for a child at home who has a diagnosed emotional impairment. Funding can be used to help with the cost of providing child care; skill building activities after school, on weekends, or summer camp experiences; activities that result in giving the family time away from the constant supervision.

For more information, please call the respite coordinator at 347-6701.

Carl W. Beattie

Carl W. Beattie, 82, of Charlevoix, died Jan. 10, 1997, at his home.

Funeral was 1:30 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 12, at the Barnard United Methodist Church. Burial will be in Brookside Cemetery, Charlevoix.

Mr. Beattie was born Jan. 14, 1914, in Charlevoix, the son of Clarence H. and Ruth (Bowdish) Beattie. He grew up in the Barnard area and graduated from Charlevoix High School.

He was active in Charlevoix City Band.

Mr. Beattie served in the U.S. Navy as musician second class from Sept. 15, 1935, through Nov. 15, 1945. He was a recipient of the Purple Heart.

Mr. Beattie graduated from Ferris State College on May 19, 1950, with a bachelor of science degree in education.

From 1950 until his retirement in 1978, he taught business education at the following high schools: Newaygo, Carson City, Cheboygan, Houghton Lake, Tecumseh and Swartz Creek.

He was also captain of the charter fishing boat "The Chloe" for 19 years, based in Grand Marais.

Mr. Beattie enjoyed hunting and fishing.

He was a member of Disabled American Veterans and Barnard United Methodist Church.

On Dec. 20, 1935, he married Vivian L. Fike in Midland.

Survivors include his wife, Vivian L. Beattie, of Charlevoix; daughter, Bonnie J. Bryan and her husband, Jack R., of Clio, Mich.; grandson, Todd Bryan and his wife, Doreen, of Omaha, Neb.; granddaughter, Lisa Hebl and her husband, Matthew, of St. Johns, Mich.; two great-grandchildren, Mark and Megan Hebl; brother, Harold Beattie and his wife, Genevieve, of Grand Rapids; and many nieces and nephews. Mr. Beattie was preceded in death by two brothers, Clare and Lyle, and one sister, Ruby.

The family suggests memorial contributions be made to the Barnard United Methodist Church. Envelopes for memorials are available at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix, where arrangements were handled.

Marjorie Drenth

Marjorie Drenth, 82, of Ellsworth, died Friday, Jan. 10, 1997, at Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey.

Funeral was held at 1 p.m. Jan. 13 at the Ellsworth Christian Reformed Church with the Rev. David Weemhoff officiating. Burial will be in Ellsworth Cemetery.

She was born Oct. 21, 1914, in Ellsworth, the daughter of Jacob and Bessie (VanderArk) Drenth.

Marge worked for many years as a self-employed housekeeper.

She enjoyed knitting, crocheting, quilting and spending time with relatives and friends.

She was a lifelong member of the Ellsworth Christian Reformed Church.

Survivors include one brother, John Drenth and his wife, Thelma, of Ellsworth; two sisters, Greta Vail and her husband, Ted, of Ellsworth, and Betty Klooster and her husband, Andrew, of Grand Rapids; four sisters-in-law, Ida Drenth and Clara Drenth, both of Ellsworth, and Martha Drenth and Alice Drenth, both of Grand Rapids; and by many nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by four brothers, Gerrit, George, Harvey and Peter; and by two sisters, Etta Drenth and Tena Koster.

Visitation was held Sunday, Jan. 12, at the Hastings Funeral Home in Ellsworth.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Ellsworth Christian Reformed Church or to Ebenezer Christian School.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

Sometime soon you are going to start hearing a massive advertising campaign marking the 20th anniversary of the "Star Wars" movie series. It seems like only yesterday that my wife and I packed our then relatively newborn daughter into the back of our station wagon and drove to a drive-in theater to see it. A lot has happened in two decades.

There are college courses on "Star Wars." There are people so caught up in this fantasy world that they dress the parts. You can find so called "in depth analyses" on the movies that put forth possible hidden meanings.

If you were to talk to George Lucas, I suspect he would be just a touch hemused by it all. His intent in creating the films was "to write fairy tales for a generation that had no fairy tales of its own." I confess I loved the films and I know more than a few lines by heart. One of my favorite lines is repeated by every character in the series at least once: "I have a really bad feeling about this."

Have you ever had a feeling about some things in your life? Think back to some Bible stories that you knew when you were a child. When Moses brought the children of Israel out to Egypt, one of the first challenges they faced was when they came to the shores of the Red Sea. A wall of water was on one side of them and the chariots and soldiers of an angry Pharaoh on the other. The Israelites were in a panic, but Moses told them in effect "I've got a feeling everything's gonna be all right." If you know the story, you know it was. Moses raised his staff and the Israelites crossed on dry ground. Everything was all right.

Think about when David came to visit his brothers in the army of King Saul. The whole camp was depressed because a giant named Goliath was bullying them. David asked his brothers, even King Saul, weren't they God's children? Didn't God promise to take care of those who had faith in Him? The brothers felt David didn't understand the realities of life. But David listened to what his heart was saying and told all who would listen that as a child of God, "I've got a feeling everything's gonna be all right." If you know the story, you know it was. Some stones, a slingshot and a firm conviction in his heart that God was in charge sent David out and the giant went down.

One last quick thought. Remember when Jesus went to the cross? Do you remember that he was not there alone? Two thieves were crucified with him that day. One of them didn't care. But the other knew he deserved his fate and sought the Lord's blessing. Jesus told him, "Today, you shall be with me in paradise." In spite of all the wrong that thief had done in his life, in that moment of confession and honesty, it hit him. "I've got a feeling everything's gonna be all right."

I don't know what you're facing in your life right now. I just want you to think back to some stories and thoughts from the Book of books that you've probably known all your life. You are God's child If you are prepared to really trust Him, I've got a feeling everything's going to be all right.

Warm breezes will waft through these windows this summer at the Charlevoix Community Pool. In the spa area, Shaun Gardner and Gary Malison install one of the sliders donated by Wojan Window and Door Corp. There will be eight 6-foot sliders surrounding the spa and nine 9-foot sliders by the pool.

Construction still debt free

After December bills were paid, the 1996 capital campaign for the community pool ended with $25,000 more than the previous month. Charlevoix Friends of the Pool announced this week that it has raised $1,321,661 toward construction and operation by the end of 1996.

"Year end gifting was generous and much appreciated," said group president Bruce MacArthur. However, he added, there is still a balance of $224,221 more to raise to complete construction. The organization has not borrowed money and hopes to avoid loan interest payments. The organization is optimistic that the pool will open before summer.

Land could squeeze budget

has two options from which to choose when considering the $170,000 bill:

— Squeeze the money out of the budget, which school officials have previously said is having to shear back expenses from state funding cuts and loss of students.

— Ask taxpayers to approve a millage for a sinking fund that could include paying for the land and major repairs to the current school buildings.

Jackson said 1 mill would be needed for about six years to cover major repairs. About $400,000 is raised by 1 mill annually.

She is recommending that the school board put the millage request before voters.

Students: Three schools, big bill

is the taxpayer entering the polls to vote on a school bond issue.

"It's hard to tell if I can even afford that," she added.

September voters either didn't think they could afford the new high school and renovations to the other two schools, and a performing arts auditorium, or they didn't agree with the proposal. It fell overwhelmingly.

Now school officials are trying to find a new solution. The board has landed an option to buy 117 acres on M-66, adjacent to the parking lot across from Castle Farms.

"They've got to start thinking about the future," Eveleigh said.

Most of the seniors involved in the discussion were willing to support the purchase of the land. However, they believe that in its efforts to find solutions, the school board goes overboard when making purchases.

For example, the students are supportive of the updated computers that have come their way. However, special chairs with hydraulic lifts are not necessary.

"People spend more time playing with the chairs than they do with the computers," said Mandi Meggison. "We don't need hi-tech chairs."

Sean Kimble said he thinks that 117 acres is too much land.

"There are necessities, but there are the luxuries," he said. "They go overboard."

If the land is purchased and Charlevoix's schools moved out of town, the students fear a closed campus for lunch. They want to get away from school during their break.

"It's time to get away and relax," Eveleigh said.

Tricia Farkas has reservations about the board's consideration to purchase the M-66 land and fix up the current schools.

"Buying land and making repairs costs more money in the long run," she said, "more money for gas and busses."

Farkas said the board ought to go for the least expensive plan, whether it be new schools or making repairs, but not both.

"Why make the repairs and then start building," she said.

Other students were concerned with the loss of 117 acres of natural area being lost to more construction, even if it is schools.

Most of the students have little concern about where they learn. They consider the high school a pit already and don't place much value in grand plans that mirror adult mind sets and not that of the students.

Galen S. Paxton backs his point that students don't want to be cloned after their parents and expected to grow up, go to college and marry. He wants what's inside the school to challenge him into wanting to learn.

Other students want to be asked what they think is best for them.

"They should ask us more," Mandi Meggison said. "They should find out our thoughts."

Commissioners change chairs

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

During the first session of Charlevoix County's new board of commissioners, the reshuffling of leadership continued.

Phil Johnson will remain as chairman, but Carl Price has replaced former commissioner Don Smith as vice-chairman for 1997.

The make-up of the committee's board has changed as well. The audit committee will consist of Johnson, Price, and Joan Blanchard, with Johnson serving as chairman.

The personnel/internal government committee, which oversees all personnel matters within the departments and public transit, equalization, registering of deeds, and planning will be manned by James Behling, Price and Blanchard. Behling will serve as committee chair.

The public safety/judicial/ and building and grounds committee will be Johnson, Shirley Roloff and Vic Patrick, with Johnson serving as chair. This committee deals with law enforcement, emergency service, all courts, child care, construction codes, conservation and the drain commission.

New outdoor trail sought

Top of Michigan Trails Council is hosting a meeting at the Charlevoix City Hall 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 21, for residents interested in developing a recreational trail from Charlevoix to Petoskey.

The council is working to develop a multi-use trail system. Efforts are being made to establish a Charlevoix Trail Committee to work on trail development in Charlevoix County.

"We've found that the most beneficial way to develop recreational trails in each community is to get each community's residents involved and let them determine what types of trails should be developed and where they should be developed in their community," said Jennifer Srigley, trails council executive director.

"The Charlevoix-Emmet Trail Committee has made great progress toward developing a Petoskey to Charlevoix trail, but most of that progress has been in Emmet County.," Srigley added.

For more information, call 348-8280.

Appledore could move to Clinton Street

nity.

"All the businesses in town are precious," mayor Josh Barnes told Hicks. "But I think you're a little more precious."

The Bay Breeze Schooner Co. first asked to put a small building at the corner of Clinton and Bridge streets, on a corner of East Park. Development authority members advised Hicks that the city council would never allow construction in a city park.

After discussing several options, Hicks and the authority decided to pursue a plan that involves putting a kiosk on the already-paved area next to the chamber of commerce for ticket sales.

To enable the boat to be visible from the booth, the boat could be moved to a slip at the end of Mason Street.

Details of the possible move are being discussed between Hicks, owners of the Bay Breeze Schooner Co. and city officials. A plan is expected to be presented to council at its next meeting, Monday, Jan. 20.

If the company can attract more of the community's foot traffic, it believes that Charlevoix can continue to support the Appledore.

Hicks said the business draws its share to town through advertisements, however, few people realize what the door is for and how they can board the big ship in the harbor.

"We'd like to make it work in Charlevoix," Hicks said, from the company's main office in Traverse City. "If we're able to make the business profitable there, we're staying.

"The current route we're following has merit, and we hope that it works."

Lawsuit filed against Globe

lice department's ability to confront suspects with specific facts about the killing.

A vote was taken Monday by the commissioners to file a lawsuit against Globe Communications Corp. The motions and lawsuit allege that Globe published photographs that were obtained under criminal circumstances. The lawsuit not only restricts use of the pictures, but orders their return to the coroner and an award of damages and attorney fees.

The Boulder County Sheriff's Department is heading the investigation into the theft of the photographs. Numerous interviews have been conducted and six people have completed polygraph tests, according to sheriff, George Epp. More polygraphs are scheduled.

"A number of promising leads are being pursued," Epp said. "Investigators have received helpful information from the public and from some members of the news media."

Grant approval would give city extra industrial lot

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Charlevoix isn't as out of land in its 22-acre industrial park as once thought.

A lot now being used as a storm water retention pond is being sold to CPI Products for an expansion. CPI makes press line automation equipment for auto makers from its plant at the corner of Ance and Taylor.

Moving the retention pond will enable CPI to put at least $750,000 into an addition to the plant. Controller, Tom Kenney, said CPI plans to expand its products line and increase sales to existing customers.

The company plans to buy two lots, one of which has been reserved since last April, and the other which involves filling in the retention pond. A state grant for $135,000 of the $150,000 project is being sought to pay for the bulk of the costs involved in filling the pond and installing alternative drainage. City manager, Mike Wiesner, said he is confident that the grant will be approved, since the project has already been reviewed by deciding officials and the grant offered.

> "It's a nice problem to have, to fill your park and need more space."
> — Mike Wiesner, Charlevoix city manger

The new design would not take building space away from the park, as drainage would border two lots along the roadway.

The grant requires a 10 percent city match, or $5,000. CPI has offered to pay $10,000 toward the match, which leaves the city with a bill of $5,000. However, with selling the 1.6 acres for about $19,000, the city is gaining revenue overall.

Wiesner said the money from the sale of the land will be used in the city's venture to buy more land for industrial development. If the plan is finalized with CPI, there will not be any lots in the park left to sell.

"It's a nice problem to have, to fill your park and need more space," Wiesner said.

Additional land for an industrial park means additional jobs. The CPI expansion will create 15 jobs at a company that has been in town since 1982.

Although mayor, Josh Barnes, said he would like to find about 20 acres contiguous to the city, it doesn't have to be.

"We would love to get significant acreage," Barnes said. "But we'll take what we can get."

The Charlevoix County Snowmobile Council's new purchase, a trail groomer, makes its virgin passage through the Charlevoix to East Jordan trail with John Ferguson and Clarence LaCrosse at the helm. The council expects the groomer to be on the trail three times a week to smooth out traveling for area snowmobilers.

Barber hits it big bowling

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Charlevoix resident Big Bergmann's quest for perfection in the bowling alley nearly came to an end after 50 years.

On Dec. 30, while bowling at Paul Bunyan Lanes, Big fell two pins short of a 300 score, the ultimate bowling feat.

It's the equivalent of pitching a no-hitter in baseball only to have the last batter, with two outs in the ninth inning; lace a single underneath the second baseman's glove. For younger, less baseball inclined people, it's almost reaching the princess in Super Mario Brothers only to be killed by some large lizard creature.

Big nailed eleven strikes in a row to put himself in position for a perfect game. On that last throw, he just missed perfection by leaving the 6 and 10 pins standing.

"Everyone quit their game to come over and watch me, even the bar emptied out," Big said. "Instead of the normal noise it got all quiet."

Big was as surprised as anyone about his good fortune that night.

"You can't hardly believe it that you haven't goofed up yet," he said of rolling strike after strike. "Maybe you'll make two or three but eventually you leave something."

Big Bergmann demonstrates his style, which earned him a near perfect 298 score. Big nailed eleven strikes in a row at Paul Bunyan Lanes.

Big usually rolls a score in the 170s. He did his "usual four-step delivery," when rolling the ball. However, on that night, he did something he hasn't done since his beginning in bowling in the 1940s. He had never caked his hands with rosin until his 298.

Did he find the magical ingredient?

"It did give more of a lift on the ball, but the next time out I shot my regular score," he said.

Only one person has ever nailed 300 at Paul Bunyan, so Big's round has put him above most. His advice in quest to bowlers' perfection: "Keep on bowling and bowl in a league, it's makes it more interesting and competitive."

Rayders down Rambler volleyball

The Rayder volleyball team began their quest for a league title by spiking Boyne City last week 15-13, 15-6, 15-3. It was the conference opener for both squads.

The first set was a bit of a struggle as the lead changed hands a couple of times, but once the Rayders staked their claim to the game's first round, they cruised through the last two sets.

The Rayders were able to break free from what looked to be a tight match because of solid defensive support from the back row as the Rayders easily returned serves and spikes.

"If you can't pick it up and pass it to your setters, then your team will have no chance of setting up spikes and scoring points," coach Brenda Bryan said.

Ann Spang, Amanda Eaton and Lisa Wheat were the headliners in the back row.

Offensively, Wheat led the team with five kills. Emily Murray and Eaton added two kills of their own. Carrie Blanchard and Wheat served three aces each, and Lyndsay Blechel had a nice game both serving and setting the volleyball.

The junior varsity team also beat Boyne City, but in more thrilling fashion. After splitting the first two sets 15-12, 3-15, the Rayders found themselves down 11-14 in the game's third and deciding set (unlike varsity, JV matches are best two out of three). With their backs to the wall, the Rayders reeled off five straight points to capture the victory.

Clutch serving by Mandi Webb and Taya Drost, who served during the game's final points, went a long way in securing the victory, coach Annemarie Statsick said. Also playing well were Lindsey Carland, Julie Swenor and Jill Ramsey.

The teams stay within conference competition this week with a home game against Kalkaska at 6 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 16.

Wrestling team swaps wins among members

The Rayder wrestling team can't be blamed for peaking ahead to this coming Saturday when they finally get to wrestle in front of a home crowd.

The Charlevoix Invitational, beginning at 10 a.m., will feature Charlevoix, Pine River, Elk Rapids, Cheboygan, Glenn Lake and Frankfurt.

It could make for an interesting day of wrestling as Charlevoix, expected to be out manned due to youth, has had a good bit of success this season. Each meet that coach Phil Christ takes his team to, a different athlete shines.

"They are all showing good promise, they're all coming around really good," he said.

James Pop and Preston Pitawanakwat have had their moments already this season, but Saturday at a tournament in Cheboygan, Luke Whitley gobbled up the superlatives.

Whitley, who usually wrestles in the 135 weight class was forced by tournament officials to wrestle in a higher weight class because he easily defeated all foes at 135. The next level is 140, but since the roster was full they bumped him up even another weight class to 145. Undaunted, Whitley medaled with a third-place finish.

Also medaling was Robert Tor-

Team bowls for dollars

The Charlevoix High School baseball team is raising money to go to Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., to a week-long baseball camp and preseason workout with coach Scott Kelly.

The trip costs $500 per player, which includes all expenses during the Saturday, March 29 to Saturday, April 5, trip.

A bowl-a-thon is being held at 2 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 23, at Paul Bunyan Lanes. Varsity and junior varsity players will be asking for pledges from throughout the community. Players will carry written identification as proof that they are actually part of the team and authorized to participate in the fund-raiser.

Jim Kanine dribbles for the basket Friday during Charlevoix's match against the Boyne City Ramblers. The Rayders lost, 55-45.

Varsity basketball team downed

Junior varsity team shines at 7-0

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

The Rayder basketball team had a tough week. Dropping three games left the Rayders with a four game losing streak and a 2-5 record overall.

The Rayders have been competitive, but dismal fourth quarters have proven to be their nemesis. They led Traverse City St. Francis by three points heading into the game's final stanza Jan 7. However 1-11 shooting doomed the Rayders with the Gladiators outscoring them 17-4 over that span for a 55-45 win.

Jim Kanine led the Rayders with 11 points, Josh Miller had 10 points and 5 steals, and Steve Carland and Matt McClellan mimicked each other's game with 8 points, 6 rebounds, and three assists.

The fourth quarter blues nipped the Rayders again on Saturday against Rogers City. The game was close, but the Rayders lost the fourth quarter 18-10 and ultimately the game 63-49. Ben Owens led the team with 12 points, Miller added 11 and Carland chipped in 10. Despite Owens' eight rebounds, Rogers City dominated the glass converting many offensive rebounds into second chance points.

Friday showed the Rayders' best effort as they faced Boyne City at home. Despite losing 60-47, and failing to outscore the Ramblers in any of the quarters, they scraped hard and with more scoring from the bench might have stayed in the game.

Although fourth-quarter scoring is down, coach Jim Kanine is complaining

"We have five guys practically in double figures, which is what you want," he said.

The starting five of Carland, McClellan, Owens, Kanine, and Miller all score between eight and 13 points a game. Kanine would like to see one or two of them step up and show the ability to score 20 points on a given night.

"We've been as competitive as we can," Kanine said. "We just can't finish in that fourth quarter."

Meanwhile, balanced scoring and pressure basketball has been the story for the Rayder junior varsity basketball team, which has opened the season with a 7-0 mark.

This past week they claimed three victims, defeating Traverse City St. Francis 58-46, Boyne City 60-38 and Rogers City 56-50.

"It's a real unselfish team," coach Todd Klinger said. "We've had eight different guys at one time or another score in double figures."

Skylar Handy led the charge against Traverse City with 16 points and his brother Spencer added 10. Eleven players tallied buckets against Boyne City. Collin Carr led the team against Rogers City with 11 points, followed by Skylar Handy and Tom Cunningham with 10 apiece.

The team can score in bunches, and twice this week broke open close games with a tidal wave of points. Traverse City provided little resistance during a 12-0 third quarter run, which bumped the Rayder lead to 20 points, and the Rayders began the second quarter against Boyne City with a 17-0 run turning the game into a runaway.

"We've been able to change tempo by going into our press," Klinger said. "It creates easy opportunities for us by putting pressure on them."

The Rayders hit the road Friday night with a game against Kalkaska. Junior varsity tips off at 6 p.m.

Cross country skiers rank well

Individual skiers on the cross-country ski team are placing high in area qualifiers.

Candace Vandergriff has won the first two national qualifying events. Sunday in Gaylord, she won with a time of 49:49, pacing the field by over a minute and a half.

"She just smoked the competition," coach Nick Baic.

There are six qualifying events. Skiers are ranked via accumulated points. The top 12 overall will make the regional team and participate in national events later this winter.

Vandergriff, who also won the first qualifying event of the season in Grayling in an event where four skiers finished within six seconds of each other, has put herself in excellent position to make the team.

Chelsea and Liza Gorkiewicz might factor in on the team as well.

Freshman basketball team wins second game

After struggling through a series of game cancellations, Brandon Bruce's freshmen basketball team got back onto the court Thursday with a 71-63 victory over Boyne City. Their record stands at 2-0.

Sean Stockman had 23 points, nine rebounds, Adam Wood scored 17, and Shay Hutchinson added 10 points, 12 rebounds, and five assists. The team next plays at Kalkaska Thursday, Jan. 16.

LEGAL NOTICE 210

MORTGAGE SALE - Default having been made in the terms and conditions of a certain mortgage made by Scott J. Sipe and Patricia A. Sipe, husband and wife Mortgagor, to Heritage Federal Savings Bank, now known as Standard Federal Bank, a federal savings bank, of Troy, Oakland County, Michigan, Mortgagee, dated August 30, 1993, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Charlevoix and State of Michigan, on September 7, 1993, In Liber 259, on Page 801, of Charlevoix County Records, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due, at the date of this notice, for principal and interest, the sum of Fifty-Six Thousand Six Hundred Seventy-Nine and 84/100 Dollars ($56,679.84);

And no suit or proceedings at law or in equity having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof. Now, Therefore, by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute of the State of Michigan in such case made and provided, notice is hereby given that on Thursday, February 6, 1997, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, local time, said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale at public auction to the highest bidder, Immediately inside the main lobby entrance to the County Building in the City of Charlevoix, Charlevoix County, Michigan (that being the building where the Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix is held), of the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount due, as aforesaid, on said mortgage, with the interest thereon at Seven and One-half percent (7.500%) per annum and all legal cost, charges and expenses, including the attorney fees allowed by law, and also any sum or sums which may be paid by the undersigned, necessary to protect its interest in the promises, which said premises are described as follows:

All that certain piece or parcel of land situated in the Township of Melrose, in the County of Charlevoix, and State of Michigan, and described as follows:

Lots 19 and 20, ORIGINAL PLAT OF THE VILLAGE OF TALCOTT (NOW WALLOON LAKE), as recorded In Liber 1, Page 47, Charlevoix County Records.

During the six months immediately following the sale, the property may be redeemed, except that in the event that the property is determined to be abandoned pursuant to MCLA 600.3241a, the property may be redeemed during the 30 days immediately following the sale.

Dated at Troy, Michigan, November 18, 1996.

LEGAL NOTICE 210

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE

Mika, Meyers, Beckett & Jones, P.L.C., is attempting to collect a debt and any information obtained will be used for that purpose.

Default has occurred in the conditions of a mortgage made by Tomalynn S. Suttle, a married woman, mortgagor, of 00819 South Wilson Road, Boyne City, MI 49712, to Old Kent Bank, a Michigan banking corporation, mortgagee, dated May 17, 1995, recorded in the Office of Register of Deeds for Charlevoix County, on May 19, 1995, in Liber 284, Page 912. Because of said default, the mortgagee has declared the entire unpaid amount secured by said mortgage due and payable forthwith.

As of the date of this notice, there is claimed to be due for principal, interest at the rate of 8.625% per annum and expenses on said mortgage the sum of $50,233.33. No suit or proceeding in law has been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and the statute in such case made and provided, and to pay said amount with interest, as provided in said mortgage, and all legal costs, charges and expenses, including attorneys' fees allowed by law, and all taxes and insurance premiums paid by the undersigned before sale, said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the mortgaged premises at public sale to the highest bidder at the East door of the County Building, 301 State Street, Charlevoix, Michigan, on Friday, February 7, 1997, at 10:00 a.m.

The premises covered by said mortgage are situated in the Township of Wilson, Charlevoix County, Michigan, and are described as follows:

Commencing at the South 1/4 corner of Section 5, Town 32 North, Range 6 West, thence North 00°11'20" East along the North and South 1/4 line 1390 feet for the point of beginning, thence South 89°55' West 1327.1 feet; thence North 63°02'40" East 1491.3 feet to the North and South 1/4 line; thence South 00°11'20" West along said 1/4 line 674.2 feet to the point of beginning. Being a part of the East 1/2 of the Southwest 1/4, Section 5, Town 32 North, Range 6 West. Subject to a 33.0 foot right of way for county road across the Easterly portion thereof.

The property is commonly known as 00819 South Wilson Road, Boyne City, Michigan.

Notice is further given that the length of the redemption period will be one (1) year from the date of sale, unless determined abandoned in accordance with MCL 600.3241a, in which case the redemption period shall be 30 days from the date of sale.

SCRAPBOOK

Early county jail tending remembered

By Marilyn Boss
Courier columnist

The day of my birth, March 4, 1933, my grandfather, Floyd W. Ikens, became the sheriff of Charlevoix County. The jail was built in 1916, and is the red brick portion of the present county building located at Antrim and State streets. Grandpa was sheriff from 1933 to 1955, a period of 22 years.

During those years, grandpa and grandma ran the jail by themselves. There were no paid deputies, and the county only owned one Oldsmobile car. Not only did my grandmother feed all the prisoners, she gave the driver's license tests to everyone in the county. Needless to say, she was busy.

As you entered the front door of the sheriff's office, you would be in a 14 foot square room. To the right was a huge steel door, which was the entrance to the jail section. As you went through the steel door, you would go straight ahead through another locked, steel door to the men's section. If you turned left after entering the first door, you would go up a stairway to the top floor, where the women were lodged.

The rest of the building was home to the Ikens family. Under the jail was a room which was used to lock in valuables. There was a wash room, boiler room and root cellar, also. The table in the center of the kitchen was usually occupied by county commissioners and officers coming over from the courthouse for a coffee break. The coffee pot was always on. In the summertime, Eddie Behrens was a motorcycle cop. He always dressed to the nines in a black jodhpur uniform and cap. He was a good friend and looked dapper in his complete outfit.

As a little girl, everything fascinated me. Grandma made oleo for the prisoners in a big wooden bowl, and what fun it was to watch it change from white to golden orange as she mixed it by hand. The kitchen counter had a window above it, which looked into the jail where the prisoners were. It had no glass, only bars, to pass food through each meal.

The prisoners could talk to her. They would bang on the steel door, which was closed most of the time, and she would open it to talk. The food was placed in tin containers which looked like long bread pans, with sections to place the three slices of bread, meat, potatoes, vegetables and dessert. The men drank their coffee from tin cups.

There was a man from East Jordan who was in jail very frequently for drinking too much. He played the mouth organ like a pro, and I would sit on the counter and sing along with his music. At the time, I was 4 years old.

Many nights people with nowhere to sleep would come to the jail, and Grandpa would put them up for the night, and let them go the next morning.

The Charlevoix jail was a strong one, and was used as an overnight stop for dangerous prisoners who were being transported from Marquette to Jackson, or vice versa. Many nights, my dad would be called down to the jail to help with these prisoners.

Sometimes the local inmates who liked Grandpa would snitch on someone planning a jail break. He would call in my dad, my uncle and sometimes Ted Coblentz, a part time deputy who lived down the street.

Grandpa was a big, tall man, about 6-foot-6-inches. He was gruff at times, but had a caring heart. He helped several boys in town, who had done wrong, get on the right path again.

He told the Charlevoix County Commissioners that he wouldn't use anything but a big Oldsmobile for a police car, even though the state police were using low-priced Fords. The commissioners always granted his wish, as it was the only car the county owned, and without the communication that we have today, he had to get down the road. Ninety percent of the time, he did the rounding up of criminals by himself, and when people saw him coming down the road, they got out of the way.

The times I spent at my grandma's house were different than most kids experienced, but they made a very exciting time for a little girl growing up.

Safety belt use on the rise

Although safety belt use is on the rise in Michigan, permitting police to stop motorists simply for failing to wear a safety belt would help increase belt use in the state, according to a University of Michigan Transportation Research Institute study.

"We'd get higher belt use and save more lives if the law permitted primary enforcement," said U-M researcher David W. Ehy. "However, current efforts to increase belt use statewide are showing success and should be continued."

In their annual study of about 8,900 drivers and front-seat passengers in Michigan's 28 most populous counties, Eby and colleague Carl Christoff found that more than two-thirds of motorists in passenger cars (70.8 percent, up from 66.8 percent a year ago), sport-utility vehicles (71.6 percent, up from 70.7 percent) and vans/minivans (67.6 percent, down from 69.1 percent) wear safety belts.

However, the safety belt use rate for pickup truck occupants — predominantly male — is, once again, less than 50 percent (47.7 percent, down from 49.3 percent).

Likewise, more women than men buckle up in all four vehicle types, with 76.7 percent of females wearing safety belts in passenger cars, compared with 63.6 percent of males, Eby says.

The most notable difference, he adds, is in the 16 to 29 year-old age group, where the estimated belt use rate is 21.1 percentage points higher for females (72.6 percent) than for males (51.5).

Bern Cannan chosen Citizen of the Year

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Bern Cannan almost missed his limelight moment. The chamber of commerce's annual meeting was scheduled for Friday night, and blowing snow was creating whiteouts on the roads.

"I decided it was common sense not to head in there," he said Saturday, the day after becoming Charlevoix's 1996 Citizen of the Year. "Then my wife convinced me otherwise."

Jo Cannan already knew that her husband was the recipient of a huge honor, a type of recognition he never sought or considered his style.

"Actually, I like to work behind the scenes," Cannan said.

His behind-the-scenes work is precisely what brought him to such status. The award is given annually a person who has contributed much to Charlevoix over their lifetime, said Charlevoix executive director, Jacqueline Merta.

"The recipient of this year's Outstanding Citizen award is a man who knows how to get things done," Merta said. "He is a wonderful example of a person using creativity, organization skills and self-motivation to improve the Charlevoix Community."

"This man has made a significant positive impact on Charlevoix and he's done it all in his retirement — some retirement," Merta added. "This man works for the community like he would work for a business."

Cannan and his wife moved to Charlevoix from Downers Grove, Ill., in June of 1987, about the same day he retired from Servicemaster as an engineer. They have three children and five grandchildren.

As a volunteer, Cannan has worked on special pro-

Middle school students monitored

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Lunch may never be the same at Charlevoix Middle School. Principal Dennis VanGuilder presented the school board with the new off-campus lunch policy.

Citing that the "neighborhoods have changed, the temptations have changed," VanGuilder's new policy will restrict all sixth- and seventh-graders from leaving school grounds during lunch hour unless they are picked up by a parent or guardian.

"Opportunities exist for students to go in directions not conducive to their best interests," he said, further explaining the new policy put together by the Charlevoix Middle School Improvement Team, a coalition of parents, the middle school staff and himself.

Before, only the sixth-graders had to abide to this policy, which goes into its expanded effect Monday, Jan. 27. Eighth-graders may still leave the grounds, but only with parental permission and obtaining a pass from the school's office. Next fall, all middle school students will abide by the new policy.

"You can't tell a student after a year and a half that you can't go downtown, so we feel a phase in would be best," VanGuilder said.

Technically the campus is closed, but in reality it still remains open. Any student may go home, or elsewhere for lunch, if his or her parent or guardian picks them up in person.

"We'll never get in the way of parents' right there," VanGuilder said. He went on to say the new policy is flexible in regards to those students who live within a couple of blocks from the school. However, arrangements must be made in advance for those students to walk home for lunch. Meaning,

Appledore stays for trial season

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Charlevoix will remain a schooner port, at least for one more year.

City council agreed to let the staff of the 85-foot Appledore sell tickets from a kiosk next to the chamber of commerce on Bridge Street.

The agreement, to all parties, is a trial basis.

"We can take it a year at a time," Appledore captain, Don Hicks, said.

The Bay Breeze Schooner Co., out of Traverse City, discussed the plan with the downtown development authority before bringing it to council.

City representatives had mixed reactions on allowing a business to use city property. However, they all voted in favor of a year trial.

"Who else can have a kiosk on city property if we put this one there?" Bob Timms asked his fellow council members.

Hicks told council that his company is unique in the way it draws tourists to Charlevoix. By moving the office location from the narrow doorway next to Whitney's, the company hopes to benefit from the city's foot traffic.

Events in brief

Charlevoix police car hit Monday

One of Charlevoix's police cars was hit Monday while investigating a minor accident on Petoskey Ave., near Mercer, according to police chief Dennis Halverson.

At 8:55 a.m., Sgt. Dale Meredith was stopped with the overhead lights running when a Jeep Cherokee driven by Helen Dillon of Charlevoix lost control on the icy road and hit the back of the patrol car.

The patrol car was jolted forward about two feet, Halverson said.

Neither Meredith nor the driver of the car that had previously hit the snowbank were injured.

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department was called to investigate the accident. Dillon was ticketed for speeding.

The police car is drivable, but is in need of repairs. The car is a 1994 Capris. The department also owns 1993 and 1996 patrol cars.

Lake Charlevoix ice not safe yet

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's is warning snowmobilers, fishermen, and other people who may be out in the middle of Lake Charlevoix to be cautious. There is open water in the lake near Mowrey's Point and about one mile to the west.

This open water is unusual at this time of year. And Sheriff George T. Lasater does not want people to be fooled into thinking the lake is safe for recreation.

"We've had a cold snap," Lasater said. "But don't let that deceive you — it still takes a while for ice to freeze to a point where it's safe."

Local man arrested for domestic assault

A Hayes Township man was arrested for domestic assault Sunday and put in the Charlevoix County Jail for an alleged assault on his live-in girlfriend, according to the Michigan State Police.

Douglas Gordon Montie, 37, is accused of loading a handgun, chambering a round and threatening to start shooting if the woman didn't tell him where she had hid two of his guns.

The victim told officers that Montie came home Saturday night intoxicated and abusive. She then hid the guns in the home before going to bed. Sunday morning, Montie discovered the guns missing and confronted the woman, police said. She refused to tell where the guns were hid.

Montie is then said to have loaded the handgun and began waving it around. The woman also told police that she had been shoved by Montie.

Montie has been previously arrested for domestic assault and battery in December 1995, police said.

Balanced budget evens out consumers' cost of living

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Sewer and water rates are on the rise. But no more than was projected last year.

Part of the city's 1997-98 budget includes adjustments in costs for city services and a slight decrease in mills levied on property.

Overall, residents should break even when it comes to the cost of living in Charlevoix, said city treasurer Rick Brandi.

A 3 percent increase in water rates means a bill hike of about 23 cents a month for seniors and 49 cents a month for the average consumer.

Seniors will pay about 24 cents a month more for sewer while the bill for an average user will increase by about 64 cents a month with the 3.5 percent increase. Senior citizens traditionally use less water and sewer in daily living.

Increases in the two services are expected to generate about $32,400 to help cover annual wage increases, maintenance and improvements to the systems. Brandi said that residents are charged enough to enable the funds to break even, not profit.

The annual increases are projected and are taken in steps to protect against a sudden doubling of rates that has happened in other area communities, Brandi said.

Also included in the $9.9 million city budget is a stability in electric rates. They are not scheduled to increase during the 1997-98 budget year. Residents faced a 4.5 percent increase in this area during the current budget year.

> "We've taken hit on income, but we're ending up Okay."
> — Mayor Josh Barnes

"We've taken hit on income, but we're ending up Okay," said mayor, Josh Barnes, noting the loss of Build Michigan funds that were used for major and local street upgrades.

The balanced budget, which will go into effect April 1, is $2 million smaller than the current one. The loss in revenues is actually a loss of funds for the downtown development authority because of its investment into Bridge Park. Brandi said a $9.9 million budget is average for Charlevoix.

For the coming year, the city plans to collect 13.326 mills, most of which goes into the operating fund. This is 1 mill less than was collected for 1996-97, which will mean a $20 savings for homeowners with a home worth $160,000 on the market.

An increase in property value is capped by state law for unimproved homes. Between the two, property with unimproved homes face a maximum tax increase of 2 percent.

Included in the budget is $1.7 million worth of city improvements, the most expensive being upgrading of the electrical system, water and street repair on Belvedere Avenue, and the purchase of new city equipment.

A public hearing is being scheduled for Monday, Feb. 17.

Remembering King's life can still enlighten today

EDITORIAL

We hope Monday's true celebration wasn't overshadowed by $40 million worth of inauguration frills in Washington D.C.

The birthday of Martin Luther King, Jr., Jan. 15, 1929, represents far more than remembering a great man who gave his life for civil rights.

We hope that our generation will, throughout this week, take time to remember or learn that civil rights is about more than where people sit on a commuter bus or whether they are allowed to vote.

Civil rights is about equality and respect for people. People, although different in color and background, are essentially the same. We all have a need for love, acceptance and purpose.

King didn't begin a hero of the civil rights movements, but a man who was raised amid good moral standards.

He wasn't a seasoned civil rights veteran when Rosa Parks defied the city ordinance in 1955 on segregated seating. As a young husband and pastor, he had lived in Montgomery, Ala., less than a year. Regardless, King stood up against the majority's ignorant belief that separate could ever be equal. King was a driving force behind a year-long bus boycott that awoke the nation to civil rights.

Reactions to King — like that of civil rights — were mixed. Some feared his radical idea of elevating blacks to the status shared by other races in the country. Others eagerly grasped hold of the hope that they and their friends could be freed from ignorant oppression.

In 1964, King became the youngest man to ever receive the Nobel Peace Prize and the first black American to become Man of the Year for Time Magazine.

King's dream caught on. And we hope that it never dies. For if it does, Americans can be as dangerous to each other as a power-hungry foreigner. Going through the motions of welcoming a president to the White House who already lives there should never overshadow such importance.

We look at genocide in horror. Americans run to the rescue in foreign lands. We should adopt that same reaction whenever someone is belittled because their harmless skin color, personal beliefs or culture is the source of persecution.

We must remember that such an atrocity occurred in the Land of the Free and the Brave. King is a perfect example of the bravery that it takes to peacefully fight for what's right, even when it's unpopular. Even though he used weapons that didn't kill, King's actions echoed those of our forefathers when they fought for people to be liberated from prejudice and control.

King was only 39 years old when he was assassinated in 1968. The violent death to such a peaceful man never did bring an end to the story the minister lived to tell. It only showed continued resistance to truth, continued fear of change.

Let's continue to embrace change when it means shedding societal norms that harm the innocent.

Letters to the editor

Community support appreciated

Editor:

The community support shown during our recent Harvest Food and Supply Drive was truly outstanding and heart warming. Area schools, churches, service organizations, social clubs, agencies, and individuals donated literally thousands of items (food, household supplies, toys, books, holiday gifts, etc.) to the Safe Home.

These gifts will allow our agency to provide shelter and safety to hundreds of abused women and their children from Emmet, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Otsego and Antrim counties.

We are fortunate and proud to be part of such a giving and caring community. On behalf of the Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan, Inc., many thanks to you all.

Sincerely, Jamie Winters
WRC Domestic Abuse Program Shelter Coordinator

Community volunteer recognized for valuable citizen

jects for Charlevoix Area Hospital, been a Junior Achievement consultant, served on the school district's curriculum council, helped make the elementary playground a reality, been a supporter of the community pool and a pillar of the Charlevoix Lions' Club. He has been awarded a Melvin Jones Fellowship award, one of the highest honors in the Lion's Club.

The 76-year-old has also been active on the Charlevoix Shade Tree Commission since June of 1993. He has videotaped all the city's trees and inventories them on his computer. Because of his efforts, Charlevoix received a special award for its city-wide tree survey, which also helped Charlevoix become the recipient of the Tree City USA award in 1993, 1994, and 1995, Merta said.

He also works with the Boy Scouts on their American Liberty Elm Tree Project. And has been the driving force behind the last two industrial fairs, creating the theme "Where in the World," to show Charlevoix where its products travel.

To Cannan, the countless hours he's spent volunteering is fun, not work.

"The minute anything stops being fun," he said, "it's time to leave."

Both he and his wife also spend time encouraging friends to get out of the house and experience the enjoyment of volunteering.

"We both try to do our share here," Cannan said.

On Saturday, Cannan had a new fixture to his house, a large aerial photograph of Charlevoix and the three lakes that helped draw him here. The picture is a reminder of the humbleness he feels to be considered Charlevoix's citizen of the year.

"There's so many people in Charlevoix that I see around me who are doing more," he said, especially since the award sets a standard of service for people within the community.

Even though receiving the award has been a pleasant surprise for Cannan, Saturday wasn't spent walking on air or getting royal treatment.

"I just went to the grocery store and I paid the same amount as I did before," he said.

Others lauded at meeting

The Charlevoix chamber of commerce's annual meeting brought recognition to several community residents.

"I don't think any chamber, community or, for that matter, any business could afford to pay for the expertise and involvement that we get free, and often take for granted," said outgoing chamber president, Tom Phillips.

Each year, the chamber presents three community awards: Ambassador of the Year, Outstanding Citizen and the President's Award.

Ambassador of the Year was given to Dr. Reid Freidinger, who has been on the medical staff at Charlevoix Area Hospital for 22 years. The award is given to a person who promotes the spirit of the chamber and its programs.

Freidinger was noted for helping start the business breakfasts and continuing to organize the programs. He served on the chamber board from 1992 to 1995 and has been on the ambassador committee since it was created in 1988.

"He has energy and enthusiasm for everything he is involved in," said incoming chamber board director, Lynn DeGrow. "What has always impressed me is that he truly believes in and promotes Charlevoix in his personal life."

The President's Award is given annually to an individual or business who has helped the chamber during the year under consideration to execute projects and/or events that benefit the greater Charlevoix area.

Phillips presented this award to Francis "Brownie" Flanders, the one person who has clearly continued to encourage the personal and financial support of himself and his company, he said. Flanders is president of CB North.

Each award recipient received a framed aerial photograph of Charlevoix, including outgoing chamber directors, Tom Phillips, Pat Donnelly, Tracy Sell and Chuck Center. Through election, they will be replaced by Jay Balasz, Dennis Crissman, Tim Petrosky and Dianna Phillips.

"Welcome aboard and best of luck to each of you," Phillips said. "You all can pick up your three-year supply of No Doz after the meeting."

Seniors earn high-dollar college scholarships

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Summer jobs for Bob Sommerfeld and Dan Pardee have turned into a college jackpot.

The Charlevoix High School seniors have been awarded full-ride scholarships by the Evans Scholars Foundation.

"They are both outstanding kids," said Howard Neilson, governor of the Golf Association of Michigan and a summer resident of Charlevoix.

The seniors are the second and third Charlevoix students to receive the prestigious scholarships, their predecessor being David Puhl. And with the cost of a higher education rising, the quest for scholarships intensifies.

Bob is the son of Beth Sommerfeld.

"It was a major relief for me and my mother," Bob said. Although the national honor society member was planning on attending the University of Michigan anyway, he was facing the competition of grants and loans — and years of post-college payments toward his education.

He plans to study business administration.

Bob is a member of the national honor society, French club and high school track and golf teams.

Dan is the son of William and Marilyn Pardee. Like Bob, he has spent his summers being a caddy at the Belvedere Golf Club.

Bob Sommerfeld

"We have been trying to get other scholarships through different schools and financial aid," Dan said. But the award allows Dan to go to Michigan State University — his first-choice school — to study engineering.

"I feel fortunate to get it," he said. "I will continue to work hard to live up to what they are giving me.

"Someday, I hope I can put back into it."

Caddies from around the country have become Evans Scholars since 1930. Since then, more than 6,400 students, men and women, have graduated as Evans Scholars.

Charles "Chick" Evans learned the game of golf as a caddy. He became the first golfer to win the U.S. Amateur and the U.S. Open championships in the same year.

"Because he insisted on preserving his amateur status, he directed that any money he received from golf be put toward caddy scholarships," Neilson said.

The scholarship is continued through a joint venture of the Golf Association of Michigan and the Western Golf Association. Students need not be golfers.

Dan and Bob, however, do step onto the greens as more than caddies. They are members of the high school golf team, with Pardee being named to the all-conference team for three years.

Dan Pardee

Their scholarships are potentially worth $40,000. They cover tuition and housing and are renewable each year, provided the students maintain at least a 2.4 grade point average.

At Charlevoix, Pardee carries a 3.5 grade point average and Sommerfeld a 3.68. They both should graduate in the upper 10 percent of their class this spring.

To qualify for the scholarship, the students had to work as caddies for at least two years, show financial need and show academic ability. They were interviewed by a deciding board at the Detroit Golf Club of Michigan Jan. 10.

The boys will be living in chapter houses at the college with about 50 other recipients of the scholarship. MSU and U of M are the two schools in the state that have chapter houses.

Lisa Borths, daughter of Bob and Cookie Borths, is one of five Charlevoix students named to the dean's list at Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo. Lisa is majoring in biology. The other students are: Heather Keller, daughter of James and Laurie Keller, who is majoring in physical education; Andrew Laucher, son of Jack and Sandi Launcher, who is majoring in biology; Kaylee Manker, daughter of David and Christine Manker, who is majoring in paper engineering; and Gretchen Scott, daughter of Elba and Cynthia Scott, who is majoring in pre-psychology. To be eligible for the dean's list, the students had to earn a 3.5 grade point average in at least 14 hours of grades class work.

Navy Petty Officer Third Class, Jason Clees, the son of Mike and Judy Clees of Charlevoix, recently returned from a six-month deployment to the Mediterranean Sea aboard the dock landing ship U.S.S. Gunston Hall. During the deployment, Clees visited Albania, France, Greece, Israel, Italy, Sicily and Turkey. Jason's wife is the daughter of Louise Hamlin of Charlevoix.

Amy VanGuilder was named to the fall 1996 dean's list at Calvin College. Amy, the daughter of Dennis and Dianne VanGuilder of Charlevoix, is majoring in communications. To earn a spot on the dean's list, a student must maintain a 3.5 grape point average for the semester and have at least a 3.3 grade point average accumulative.

Bethany Martinus, a sophomore at Adrian College, has been inducted into Phi Eta Sigma, the college's national freshman honor society. Bethany received a 3.5 grade point average to earn the appointment. She is the daughter of Stephen and Jennie Martinus of Charlevoix and a 1995 graduate of Charlevoix High School.

Rockliff M. "R.M." Sutton

Rockliff M. "R.M." Sutton, 83, of Charlevoix, died Jan. 17, 1997, at Boulder Park Terrace Nursing Home in Charlevoix.

Funeral was 11 a.m. Tuesday, Jan. 21, at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix. The Rev. Bruce E. Hamilton officiated. Burial will take place in Brookside Cemetery, Charlevoix.

Mr. Sutton was born Aug. 28, 1913, in Charlevoix, the son of Rockliff M. Sutton and Carrie Henderson. He attended Charlevoix schools.

He was a U.S. Navy veteran of World War II.

Mr. Sutton was a mason by trade and worked on the construction of the Mackinac Bridge. He was employed by Swanson Construction of Charlevoix, then by the Petoskey News-Review for 10 years, retiring in 1978.

He was an avid fisherman.

On Sept. 11, 1937, he married Arvilla C. "Billie" Yahr in Charlevoix. She preceded him in death on Dec. 31, 1992.

Survivors include four sons and their wives, Richard and Jean Sutton of Charlevoix, Arthur and Pat Sutton of Charlevoix, Donald and Aeelia Sutton of Petoskey, and Andrew and Betsy Sutton of Boyne City; two daughters and their husbands, Donna and Jerry Himebauch of Charlevoix, and Wanda and Howard Barraw of Central Lake; a brother, Burton Sutton, of Homosassa Springs, Fla.; two sisters and their husbands, Jessie and Harry Howard of New Port Richey, Fla., and Leona and George Lord of Harrison, Mich.; 18 grandchildren; 15 great-grandchildren; and two great-great-grandchildren.

Visitation was held from 7-9 p.m. Monday, Jan. 20, at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix.

William Ohle

William Hower "Bill" Ohle, 86, of Horton Bay, died Jan. 17, 1997, in Tucson, Ariz., while on vacation.

A memorial service will be held later this spring.

Bill was born Dec. 6, 1910, in St. Louis, Mo., the son of Ernest Linwood Ohle and Margaret Hower Ohle.

On Aug. 17, 1940, he married Margaret "Peg" Adams in Chicago.

He was the grandson of William Henry Ohle, one of the founders of Horton Bay who came to Bay Township in the late 1870s, operated a sawmill there, and constructed the present Horton Bay Store and Bay Township Hall, as well as other buildings.

Bill's father graduated from Petoskey High School in 1893 and pursued a career in teaching at Washington University in St. Louis, Mo. In 1973, in his father's memory, Bill donated to the Petoskey Public Library some 1,500 volumes of historical and biographical writings about Northern Michigan and the Great Lakes area. This material is considered one of the best collections of its kind in Michigan and is widely used for historical research.

Bill graduated from Washington University and served as an officer in the U.S. Navy during World War II. He spent most of his business career in Chicago, starting as a classified advertising salesman for the Chicago Tribune. He later joined the old Chicago advertising agency of Needham, Louis and Brorby and later transferred to the Leo Burnett Agency, from which he retired in 1970.

He then moved to Horton Bay where he had summered since early childhood. He organized the first Horton Bay parade in 1975 to celebrate the centennial of the town and continued on the parade committee until recently.

Bill's main interest was in local history and after retiring he wrote four books about Northern Michigan. He also authored many articles about local history for the News-Review's Graphic publication.

Bill was also interested in the future of the area and helped plan for the future by serving on the Bay Township Board of Trustees and the planning committees of Bay Township and Charlevoix County.

He is survived by his wife, Peg; son, William Adams (Christine) Ohle, of Bethesda, Md.; brother, Ernest Linwood (Martha Lee) Ohle Jr., of Tucson; granddaughters, Jessica (Brad) Traub of Fort Huachuea, Ariz., Adrienne (Edward) Ohle-Rodriguez of Aurora, Colo., and Rebecca and Sarah Ohle at home; also a great-granddaughter, Melaney Rodriguez.

The family suggests memorials be made to the First Presbyterian Church of Boyne City or to a local historical society.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Philip G. Schairbaum
First Congregational Church

One of my predecessors at the Congregational Church, Rev. Harold Kohn, once wrote the following lines in an essay titled "Growing Everyday:"

"In winter, when trees are stripped of their foliage, the bark on their trunks shows clearly how greatly trees expand as the seasons come and go. Botanists tell us a tree grows as long as it lives, daily adding breadth and height to its stature. Daily its roots draw sustenance from the soil, and daily it drinks moisture from the air and absorbs light and energy from the beneficent sun. Wind, rain, snow and ice contribute to its tough character. The Psalmist said of a righteous person, 'And he shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water.' The expression is apt, for a chief characteristic of a tree and of the life of faith is perpetual growth."

Growth is an important issue for all people. We are born to grow as physical beings, and we are born to grow as spiritual beings as well. Some would even say that without such growth, there really is no life.

The story is told about two small-town philosophers who were sitting on a park bench one day talking about growth. The question was posed: Does one grow from the head down or from the feet up? One said, "From the feet up, of course. I gave my grandson a new suit of clothes last year and the trousers were just the right length. Now they don't hardly reach his ankles. That proves people grow from the feet up!"

"That's ridiculous," said his friend. "It's obvious people grow from the head down. Just look at that group of people walking over there. All their feet are at the same level, but their heads are at different heights. That proves that people grow from the head down."

Actually, it seems to me that both were wrong. For we grow neither from the bottom up nor from the head down, but from the inside out. That's particularly true when we think about spiritual growth. The Apostle Paul put it beautifully when he wrote "Be strengthened with might through the Spirit of God in the inner person, that Christ may dwell in your hearts through faith; that being rooted and grounded in love, you may be filled with all the fullness of God." (Ephesians 3:16).

If our spiritual life is like that in these winter months, then we, like everything else that is alive and healthy in this world, will be growing into the people God wants us to be.

Arthur S. Bajos

Arthur S. Bajos, 74, of Charlevoix, died Jan. 17, 1997, at his home.

Funeral was held at 11 a.m. Monday, Jan. 20, at St. Mary's Church in Charlevoix, with the Rev. Thomas Neis officiating. Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery, Charlevoix.

Mr. Bajos was born April 2, 1922, in Hamtramck, the son of Stephen Bajos and Karolina Bosek. He was raised in southwest Detroit, and was a U.S. Army veteran of World War II.

Mr. Bajos worked for Hudson Motors in Detroit for three years.

On Sept. 9, 1944, in Detroit, he married Frances Marie Kruzel. After their marriage, the couple farmed in Petoskey for 15 years, then returned to Detroit, where Mr. Bajos was a tool and die maker, retiring in 1969. They moved to Charlevoix in 1978.

Mr. Bajos was a member of St. Mary's Catholic Church, and the Knights of Columbus Pierre de Charlevoix Council No. 7172.

Survivors include his wife, Frances Marie Bajos; one son and his wife, Edward and Laura Bajos, of Hayes Township; three daughters and their husbands, Carolyn and Frank Trulson of Naples, Fla., Theresa and Terry Johnson of Howell, Mich., and Virginia Barawskas of New Hudson, Mich.; three grandchildren, Eric Barawskas, and Zachary and Amanda Bajos; one sister and her husband, Lottie and John Duma, of Detroit; and three brothers and their wives, Chester and Mary Bajos of Livonia, Emil and Fran Bajos of Dearborn, and Henry and Lillian Bajos of Henderson, Nev.

The family suggests memorial contributions be made to St. Mary's School or to Charlevoix County Hospice.

Envelopes for memorials are available at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix, where visitation and a rosary were held Sunday, Jan. 19.

Check telephone messages for fraud

A new telephone scam deceiving people into calling high-cost numbers in the Caribbean is targeting users of pagers, fax machines, voice mail boxes and the Internet. Since September 1996, thousands of pager users have received urgent messages to dial a number in the 809 area code.

"When people call, they hear a long, rambling message that never connects to a real person," said Peter DeHaan, president of Michigan Message Center out of Petoskey.

"The scheme is the latest in a never-ending series of attempts by con artists to line their pockets by tricking unsuspecting people into dialing a recorded message that offers no real value," said Rich Petillo, AT&T corporate security manager.

> "When people call, they hear a long, rambling message that never connects to a real person."
> — Peter DeHaan, Michigan Message Center in Petoskey.

"It's not just pagers and answering systems that are affected," added DeHaan. "Fax-on-demand systems and electronic mail servers are also being infiltrated.

"The real problem with this scam is the cost of the call - about $25," said DeHaan. The 809 telephone number is actually a 900 number somewhere in the Caribbean.

In addition to the 809 area code, consumers should be wary of messages that prompt a return call to any of the following area codes: 242, 246, 268, 345, 441, 664, 670, 758, 767, 787, 868, 869 or 876.

These are listed by AT&T as originating offshore and are targeted as warnings for possible telephone scams.

BUSINESS

Job placement business expands beyond home

Effective Jan. 1, 1997, Northern Executive Temporary Services has opened an office at 101 W. Dixon Avenue in Charlevoix. The business phone number remains 547-1763, the new fax number is 547-5981.

Hours of operation are Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Owned and operated by Carla E. Themm and Laura Farmer of Charlevoix, the service began late in 1993. The business was run out of Farmer's home until company growth necessitated the need for a centrally located office. The company began with Themm and Farmer alone. It now employs 11 additional people.

Northern Executive Temporary Services provides professional and experienced secretaries and executives for both temporary and permanent placement. Placement can range from one week, to cover an employee vacation, to two years, to fill an executive position, to a permanent placement.

In addition to providing temporary and permanent placement, other services are provided directly from the new office. Services include over-flow typing, faxing, payroll, bill paying, bookkeeping and organization of business or personal business.

Slow going

Weather shut down many businesses and schools last week as the winter's most fierce storm hit Charlevoix Thursday and Friday. Drivers at the intersection of M-66 and U.S. 31 had to creep through white-out conditions as they made their way home.

Local realtor makes hall of fame

Steve Andreae, sales associate with Re/Max of Charlevoix, recently became the 47th Re/Max of Michigan affiliate to achieve Hall of Fame designation.

The award, which will be formally presented to him at the 1997 Re/Max International Convention in Nashville, is a prestigious honor that recognizes those agents who have helped well over 350 families with their real estate transactions during their career with the company. Andreae has assisted more than 500 families.

Andreae, a 20-year real estate industry professional, is past president of the Antrim-Charlevoix Board of Realtors and 1987 Realtor of the Year.

Currently, he is the Chairman of the Finance Committee and a member of the Grievance Committee. Other community services include being the past president of the Charlevoix United Way and current director of the Chamber of Commerce.

Andreae holds his CRS and GRI designations and is a seven time member of the distinguished 100 percent Club with Re/Max.

"I joined Re/Max in 1989 after 12 years in a traditional real estate company, Andreae said. "The Re/Max system provided the environment for my entrepreneurial spirit and propelled my career to new levels."

Andreae and his wife, Meg, reside in Charlevoix with their two children, Stephen and Elizabeth.

Re/Max of Charlevoix is affiliated with Re/Max of Michigan, the regional real estate franchiser for outstate Michigan. They currently serve the state with more than 79 independently owned and operated offices and 725 sales associates. There are more than 100 offices throughout Michigan.

Business in brief

Liquor license being transferred

The liquor license for On the Edge is being transferred to T.H.P.P Enterprises so the new restaurant can serve alcohol.

City council passed a resolution to help with the transfer.

New owners, Paul Carter and Helen Coon, plan to open a new restaurant this spring in the 100 Michigan Ave. hotel, The Edgewater Inn.

Just as Candice Vandergriff has grown accustomed to cross country running, she leads the pack here during a cross country ski race. The accomplished athlete has a chance at making the national championship on her skis.

Cross country runner gliding toward national ski competition

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Who would have thought that a young woman's dream would take her to Biwabik, Minn.?

Yet, it is with that northern outpost in mind that Charlevoix High School junior Candice Vandergriff trains. Along with her teammates, she braves cold winds, logging kilometer after kilometer on her cross country skis.

Candice

Biwabik is the site of this year's national championships for high school trail skiers. It's an event Vandergriff seems sure to qualify for. After making it to nationals the last two winters, she leads the pack of regional applicants by winning the first two of six qualifying events by a combined time of nearly two minutes. The top 12 after six races will make the Great Lakes regional team and drive to the Land of 1,000 Lakes.

Road trips like these are what sparked Vandergriff's interest in competing. Her skis have already taken her to Alaska for the 1995 nationals and to Maine for last year's competition.

"I had heard some of the seniors who ski talk about nationals being in Alaska, and that was a trip I wanted to make," she said.

It was to be her first year of competitive cross-country skiing. She admits that prior to that season, she and the sport had not been a good mix.

"I hated it," she said, recalling an early cross country journey with her mother from Schuss Mountain to Shanty Creek. "I started to cry, took my skis off, and just laid in the snow."

Her feelings were turned by a possible trip to Alaska. Vandergriff re-entered the sport and has been a natural at it.

Credit her time spent running. Vandergriff is one of the top runners on Charlevoix's highly successful cross country running team and the spring track team. Those experiences have played a factor in her skiing success, specifically the conditioning.

"It has given me the endurance," she said. "I'll get so tired it'll be hard to keep my technique, but I'll still finish my race."

A key to both running and cross-country skiing is the ability to pace oneself over a long distance. Again, Vandergriff is able to rely on her running experiences to strengthen her skiing.

"You don't want to burn out," she said. "If you go too fast your race is over in the first minute. You can have awesome technique, but still not be very good if you don't have the endurance or the proper pace."

Charlevoix's cross country team is a club sport. And many who take to the trails use the opportunity to train in the winter for their running. It is nothing more than cross-training, which Vandergriff sees as important because, "running in the cold really sucks."

However, skiing has become more than just training for the athlete's running. She's serious about winning, and can easily list all she needs to do to improve and be successful beyond Charlevoix events.

"Its one thing to go to nationals, but I don't want to get my butt kicked," she said.

> "You can have awesome technique, but still not be very good if you don't have the endurance or the proper pace."
> — Candice Vandergriff, senior cross country skier

In her first appearance in nationals she finished 51 of 53 competitors in the classic ski and 41 of 53 in the freestyle event, a style she described as similar to Rollerblading.

The next year she finished 32 in the classic and in the top half of the field in freestyle.

"It was depressing, those skiers were just so good," she said, recalling the events in Alaska. "It made me want to train more so I would be as good as them."

Junior Ben Owens dances between an Elk Rapids player and the bucket during the Jan. 14 game with the Rayders on their home court. Owens made seven points and nine rebounds, second only to senior Steve Carland, who tallied 16 points and brought the ball off the board for nine. The varsity team lost the game, 45-38, while the junior varsity won, 70-39.

Varsity trade off in recent games

The Rayder basketball team got on track Tuesday when registering their first league win of the season over Elk Rapids, 45-38. The game film will not be saved for offensive clinics, but defensively the Rayders held the Elks to single digits in three quarters.

The Rayders failed to maintain momentum and dropped a contest over the weekend to Kalkaska, 62-56. Once again, an inability to pull four quarters together on offense spelled defeat.

Steve Carland lead Rayder scorers with 11 points, Matt McClellan had 10, and Ben Owens and Jim Kanine each chipped in eight points.

The Rayders stand at 3-6 overall and 1-3 in Lake Michigan Division play. They travel this week on Tuesday to Petoskey and Friday to East Jordan. It will be a challenging week as the Rayders' foes enter with a combined 15-2 record.

JV remains undefeated

The Rayder Junior Varsity basketball team had another strong week overpowering two league opponents.

Eleven players scored as the Rayders rolled against Elk Rapids 70-39. The game's outcome was never in doubt as the Elks did not score in the games first five minutes and the Rayders leapt to a 35-10 halftime lead.

Kalkaska posed more of a problem, pouncing on the Rayders early with a 15-6 lead midway through the first quarter. However, facing their biggest deficit of the season, the Rayders roared back with their press to take a 22-18 lead after the first quarter en route to the 74-63 victory.

"Kalkaska was a good game for us," coach Todd Klinger said. "They challenged us throughout, the kids responded well, and once we took the lead we controlled the game with our pressure."

Collin Carr, Skylar Handy, Tom Cunningham and Brian Ward all scored in double figures to lead the Rayder rally.

Wrestlers home Thursday

The wrestling team hosts a home match at 6 p.m. Thursday at the high school.

Women's award to be given by Zonta club

Charlevoix Area Zonta announces their sixth annual young women in public affairs award for $500, which is given a young woman currently enrolled in a secondary school and living in Charlevoix County.

The award is designed to encourage women to pursue decision-making positions in their communities in order to impact the policies that affect the lives of women in the community and throughout the world. Applicants are asked to reflect on their lives, their commitment to their communities in which they live, and the role models that have inspired them to become involved in the community or a specific project or career.

Applications are available at the counselor's office in high schools in Charlevoix County.

Applications may also be obtained by calling Joan at 547-4822 during the day or 547-2474 in the evening.

Deadline for applications is Friday, Jan. 31, to the Charlevoix Area Zonta. The winner will be announced at the club's Feb. 12 meeting.

The recipient of the local award will have her application forwarded to the district, which also awards $500 to the district winner.

Schooner move approved

The schooner already takes about 5,000 passengers a year on Lake Charlevoix cruises. Hicks said the company wants 20 more passengers a day.

The kiosk that is hoped to draw the extra business will be in place before ship's season begins in June. It will be placed on steel pallets for mobility. The small building will look similar to the one stationed in front of the Acacia in Bridge Park, Hicks said. However, it won't be as tall.

With the kiosk going next to the chamber, the ship will also move. It will occupy a slip at the bottom of Mason Street, one block closer to the chamber than in the past six years. The schooner will be visible from the ticket booth. It will sit on the sidewalk south of the building and be about six feet in diameter.

City manager, Mike Wicsner, told council that the view of the Round Lake will be slightly blocked for cars heading south. However, the schooner company plans to install windows to every side of the Octagon or Hexagon-shaped kiosk.

The council could ask the company to move the kiosk at any time, or the owners could pull the business out of town if business doesn't increase.

"Nothing is guaranteed," Hicks said.

Lions help with school playground

As has been previously reported, the first phase of the project for new playground equipment at the Charlevoix Elementary School is in place and being enthusiastically used by young students.

To date more than $105,000 of the projected total price tag of $120,000 has been raised. The equipment for the next and final phase is scheduled for installation this fall.

The Lions gave $1,000 and put a challenge out to Charlevoix area service clubs to match their contribution.

In August the Charlevoix Lions also made a $1,000 pledge to the playground fund.

"Robyn Blosh and her fundraiser team are so very close, it's time to wrap up this campaign," Brendtro said. "So, we are reissuing our challenges to the service clubs and as an encouragement to everyone else to make their pledges to top off the $120,000 goal."

For more information, contact Robyn Blosh at 547-5782. Checks made out to the Charlevoix Elementary School Playground Fund can be sent to the Charlevoix Elementary School, Division St., Charlevoix, MI, 49720.

Principal supports keeping students at school for lunch

parents need to meet with the principal.

VanGuilder has not been the most popular man because of the new ruling. Some students feel their liberties are being stripped. He joked at the school board meeting that students have been frowning and ignoring him.

Twenty-one seventh-graders, though, are not ignoring him or the new policy. VanGuilder has received a petition with their signatures protesting the new policy.

"I commend them for the process they followed," he said. "I'll meet with them later this week to talk to them and make sure they know I appreciate their concerns."

VanGuilder estimates that some days during the cold of winter only a handful of extra students will be involved in the campus lunch, but up to 40 extra students on a sunny spring day will now be fed on campus. More students in the building is a positive, according to VanGuilder.

"If you feel what you do in school is good for the kids, then the longer you keep them in that school the better for everybody," he said.

More shade coming

When winter's temperatures fade and spring growth sprouts in Charlevoix, the city plans to plant about 130 trees.

According to Bern Cannan, a member of the Charlevoix Shade Tree Commission, about 75 various trees will be planted near the Carpenter Street ball fields, 16 Oaks in Bridge Park and along Petoskey Avenue, 84 trees in residential areas and about 30 Elms will be added to Elm Street.

The Elm began from seedlings as a project by a local Boy Scout Troop. They are now 8-9 feet tall.

Big Rock to start up

After more than 44 days of being shut down, Big Rock Point nuclear power plant is starting up this week.

Big Rock originally shut down Dec. 7, when a voltage control unit failed. The plant shut itself down at the time and employees replaced the unit.

Four days later, during standard start-up tests, the turbine was off balance.

Three pieces of a metal band from around the turbine blade were found in the bottom of the turbine casing, said plant public affairs director Tim Petrosky.

The turbine was disassembled and repaired.

The plant is expected to restart by the end of the week.

Rare lake freeze

Skating on clear ice part of history

In early February of 1915, Charlevoix experienced a prolonged cold spell that was accompanied by a dead calm.

The water of Lake Michigan froze like a huge slab of plate glass as far as the eye could see. It was so clear that people could see the bottom of the lake to the depth of 15 to 20 feet.

Ice like this had never been seen on Lake Michigan before, and it was a rare treat to skate on what seemed to be a limitless expanse of extremely smooth ice that only nature could produce.

Some daring souls ventured out almost a mile, and some had a race from the North Point to the South Point.

It was discovered that by putting an ear to the ice, distant cracking sounded like a sharp clap of thunder.

This winter phenomenon is unlikely to be repeated soon.

Skaters don their blades for a special treat on Lake Michigan in 1915. As area residents glided across the ice, they could see the lake's bottom because of an odd freeze that happened that year during a dead winter calm.

Foundation awards community grants

In four years, the Charlevoix County Community Foundation has grown to more than $4 million. The foundation now can put more of its funds to work on behalf of worthy programs and projects that serve the county.

Trustees recently voted to award 11 grants totaling more then $42,000 to a variety of nonprofit groups whose programs range form educational enrichment to healthcare.

Projects selected to receive foundation grants and the amount of their funding include:

— The Boyne City Foundation for Educational Excellence, $5,000 toward completion of the city's new recreation and athletic complex.

— Northern Lakes Economic Alliance, $2,500 to undertake a study of the region's affordable housing needs and plan for the future.

— H.A.N.D.S. (the HIV/AIDS Network), $700 to help hire a volunteer coordinator.

— East Jordan Care & Share Food Pantry, $1,500 to provide food to needy families.

— CHIP Counseling Center, $2,500 to conduct a treatment program for men who have been charged with domestic assault.

— Northwest Academy, $5,000 toward building renovations and a new band-room at the charter school.

— East Jordan Public Schools, $5,000 to undertake phase II of the community playground project, including installation of a basketball court, walking track, soccer field and softball diamond.

— East Jordan Middle School, $1,900 to help underwrite equipment and transportation costs for a new middle school ski team.

— Northern Michigan Planned Parenthood, $2,000 to initiate a new program about sexual responsibility aimed at adolescent males; and $1,000 toward the training of a nurse practitioner.

— North Central Michigan College, $15,000 to support the community college's capital campaign for a new student and community resource building. The grant will be paid in installments over the next three years.

The Community Foundation will consider grant requests again in March. Nonprofit organizations, schools, and governmental units that serve Charlevoix County are eligible for funding.

More information about the Charlevoix County Community Foundation is available by calling (616) 536-2440, or writing P.O. Box 718, East Jordan, Mich., 49727.

Cable battle won

War continues as committee seeks service alternatives

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

They're back.

The Nashville Network and Arts & Entertainment channels returned to Charlevoix televisions Friday after the cable company succumbed to customer outrage.

"Thanks to the overwhelming response of letters, it gave me a lot to pass on," said Sherrie Martin, TCI Cablevision's local general manager, of upper company management. "They got a good idea of what our area was asking for."

> "At least I think we're going in the right direction."
> — Josh Barnes, mayor

To get the channels put back on without abiding by the 30-day waiting period, Martin called every franchise holder in the area to get permission to return the stations to local programming.

City hall in Charlevoix received a call Thursday. And after the onslaught of disgruntled callers, city officials didn't hesitate to pass on permission to restart TNN and A & E.

"At least I think we're going in the right direction," said mayor Josh Barnes.

Animal Planet and the Cartoon Network were removed to make room for the favored channels. TNN can now be found on channel 23 and A & E on channel 31.

In order to accommodate the changes, TCI moved The Home Shopping Network from 31 to 43, which is where Animal Planet had been placed. TNN replaced the Cartoon Network.

Although the desired channels are back, Martin admitted that their return can't make up for all the confusion and frustration that has hit viewers.

"Hopefully, it will help," she said.

Local TCI representatives have taken most of the brunt for area outrage. Some cable customers, however, bypassed the local number and used 800 numbers to call out west.

Martin is glad for the company's reconciliation with northern Michigan customers. It's a move she's never seen happen locally.

Coaching climate

High pressure storms extend beyond the court, field and track

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

The Rodman style of winning — win at all costs — is invading our nation. And Charlevoix high school sports is not exempt.

Cross country head coach, Ken Plude has been part of the Rayders' most successful athletic program for years. His teams have accounted for seven state championships, numerous near misses, and back-to-back academic team championships. With all that winning, Plude is a happy coach, but he senses the Rodman trend within society.

His athletic director, Barry Anderson, senses the same sentiments.

"There is more of an 'I feeling' with parents and players instead of a team feeling with playing time and wins and losses," Anderson said, who has been involved with Charlevoix High School athletics for a quarter of a century.

The pressure to win is great, and much of it is manifested by coaches and players themselves. But there is also external pressure squeezing the coaches like an abused Charmin pack. In any district, and Charlevoix is no exception, stories about disgruntled fans and parents going directly to school board members and superintendents to demand removal of coaches is routine.

"It's scary as hell, and I don't know how to combat it," Anderson said. "I hope they are in a positive environment, but some may feel they're not because of parental pressure groups."

Charlevoix coaches are paid a percentage of the base salary for the district's entry level teachers and are weighted based on season lengths. For example, the head football and basketball coaches make 12 percent of the base $27,000, or $3,000, which increases in steps like teachers' pay. Next in line is wrestling at 10 percent, with all the rest, including junior varsity and assistants, settling in at 8 percent. According to Anderson, junior varsity and assistant pay takes into account time spent scouting the opposition.

Many would feel that pay for doing a fun job equates into a nifty bulge in the wallet. But coaching abounds with headaches and parlays itself into a full-time job. Combined with family, and the coaches real full-time job, the extra money does little to keep people within the coaches ranks. While most of the Rayders' programs have, on the varsity level, maintained long-term leadership, the district has seen a revolving door lately with some junior varsity and assistant coaches. Anderson is worried.

"It does concern me that the general trend is not to stay in coaching for a long period of time," he said. "For whatever reasons people aren't staying in it for that long."

The pressure to win combined with bowing to the wishes of everyone else has created a negative coaching atmosphere.

Football coach Roger Gowell said everyone is to blame for the pressure on today's teens to win and not just compete to the best of their ability.

"We as adults have put a pressure above and beyond what is necessary," he said.

To some extent he is referring to the movement which has athletes focusing on one sport all year. For Gowell, the beauty behind competing news," she said.

Even though local viewers are satisfied with this victory, the members of the city's newly formed cable committee aren't giving up their promise to investigate other options for Charlevoix area residents.

A meeting was held Monday to discuss alternatives to TCI service.

"We owe it to the people since we got this ball rolling," said council member Bernie DeVries. "We're going to at least check it out."

Barnes said some people are concerned that the next issue viewers could be facing is another price hike.

In 1987, council began an investigation on cable alternatives because of ongoing cost increases. Council member Bob Timms was involved in that research. Not as many options were available then as are on the market today.

"Council didn't want to spring for the $1 million plus price tag it would take for the wire system," Timms said.

Options discussed Monday include a wireless system, which would kill costs for wire and the labor involved in installing it, and buying the system now in place.

Timms said another advantage to the wireless system would be its ability to reach homes for 20-25 miles, enabling some country homes to have cable.

Costs are being collected on the various options and the committee will continue to meet. Its findings will be presented to the city council during a public meeting.

Leader dog training set to begin

An open house to initiate a 4-H Leader Dog program in Charlevoix and Emmet counties has been scheduled for 7 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 5, at the Charlevoix Elementary School.

The program will be jointly conducted with 4-H and Leader Dogs for the Blind of Rochester, Mich. Laura Smith of Charlevoix has agreed to serve as area coordinator and 4-H leader for the club.

The program consists of families adopting a puppy for about one year. During that time the puppy will become part of the family and will learn only a few basic commands. Once the puppy has gone through the one year period, the puppy is transferred down to Rochester for a designated school session. The puppy will be evaluated and if a passing grade is given, a match will be made with a visually impaired person.

During the open house, guests will have an opportunity to ask questions and learn how to raise a puppy for the program. The guest speaker will be a representative from the "Leader Dogs for the Blind" school.

Some agenda items to be covered during the meeting will be, how to raise the puppy, puppy selection, school history, health care and puppy socialization.

The program is free.

Those interested in attending should contact Laura Smith at 547-2916 or Charlevoix County Michigan State University Extension 4-H Youth Programs at 582-6232 for more information.

Events in brief

Pole barn burns on Ferry Road

A pole barn next to Mitch Cunningham's house at 12660 Ferry Road burned Saturday. Charlevoix firefighters were called to the fire about 10:21 a.m. It took 1,300 gallons of water from Charlevoix, East Jordan, and Bank and Charlevoix townships to douse the flames, said Charlevoix fire chief Doug Carver.

The cause of the fire is not yet known, however, firefighters do know that the blaze started in the rear of the pole barn, either under or next to the work bench. The biggest challenge in putting the fire out was working around an oxygen tank that was in the barn. The welding tank tipped and had to be handled carefully.

The barn is not a total loss, Carver said, but it will need a new roof. Firefighters were on the scene almost two hours.

Murder investigation continues

The Boulder police investigation into the murder of JonBenet Ramsey continues. There have been no arrests. A formal interview with the Ramsey family has not been scheduled. And police have not requested a polygraph examination of the Ramsey family.

There is a core group of 10-15 police assigned full-time to the investigation, according to Leslie Aaholm, public relations representative for the city of Boulder.

Police are not providing a public inventory of what tests have been completed. Any test results returned to Boulder police will only be discussed in court.

Gas leak causes car fire

A car fire about 6:55 a.m. Monday destroyed a 1984 Chevrolet Chevette and scorched paint on vehicles on either side of the parked car in the Midwest Manufacturing parking lot at 105 Stover Road.

Charlevoix fire chief, Doug Carver, said the fire was definitely caused by a gasoline leak.

About 50 minutes after arriving at work, Stan Oleniadzi heard that there was a car on fire in the parking lot. The fire was quickly extinguished, however, the car is a total loss.

"Everything combustible is gone," he said. "The steel shell is there, but that's it."

The window of a nearby car was also broken from the intensity of the flames.

Grange hosts hall dance

The Barnard Grange is holding a dance from 1-8 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 1, at the grange hall, located at the corner of Barnard and Klooster roads in Charlevoix. There will be live music with round and square dancing.

Old Eddie (right), played by senior Nicholas Bogart, is told by a nun to get ready for his first day of school as he remembers his good ole days in Catholic school. The high school's performance of The Patent Leather Shoes Really Reflect earned Charlevoix a first division rating Saturday at the Michigan High School Forensics District Championship.

Just like any athletic team, the seniors in performing arts at Charlevoix High School want to go all the way to state.

"We're ready to go back," said senior Nicholas Bogart, remembering Charlevoix's trip to state competition two years ago. "I know if we go to state, we can hold our own."

The young actors, actresses, musicians and lighting crew did hold their own during district competition Saturday. They earned a first division, one of three schools to do so. Regionals will be held Saturday, Feb. 8, in St. Johns.

The play is called The Patent Leather Shoes Really Reflect. It is a story about an adult writer who recalls his days in Catholic school. The uniformed team takes the audience through Eddie's growing pains, which include his first confession, sex education class, the first dance and being accepted to an all-girls' college.

Friday, the team was busy finalizing the play and working to cut 14 minutes off its length. Each second over 45 minutes during competition causes point deductions.

Buses and vans were packed with the students, their green stage uniforms and stage sets. By the trip home, they had earned top honors by receiving 252 out of 300 points.

Superior awards were given to Bogart for his portrayal of Old Eddie, and Becky Blissett, for her piano accompaniment through the production.

Excellent awards in acting were given to Mike Czerkes for his portrayal of Young Eddie, Ian Powell, who plays a priest and Kari Jo Boss, who plays Becky, Eddie's first love.

Following regional and possibly state competition, the performing arts group will perform the play for Charlevoix Saturday and Sunday, March 1 and 2, at the high school.

Landfill expansion put on hold for now

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Charlevoix County residents will always have to put out their trash, but soon may no longer be dumping their waste at Waste Management's Cedar Ridge landfill.

While relocating the landfill is nothing more than an idea in county commissioners' minds, the board will not accept Waste Management's request to expand on their present site.

According to the agreement between the county and waste management, it must be proven that there is less than 66 months of capacity at the landfill to be granted an expansion.

"I feel confidently that Charlevoix County has more than 66 months," county planner Larry Sullivan told commissioners at the Jan. 22 meeting. "Waste management has done nothing to prove that the county has less."

Based on Sullivan's report, the board approved writing a letter to Waste Management to inform them that until they can prove capacity crunch, thoughts of opening up the agreement to include expansion will not happen.

Waste Management apparently has not opened the lines of communication, perhaps waiting for a possible legislation change. Sullivan pointed out that in the new Democratic House of Representatives it is possible that legislation may pass that would not require county approval for such expansions so long as the waste company owned the

Cable company competition welcomed to town

EDITORIAL

The little people won! And, they aren't standing so short nowadays.

We want to congratulate every person who spoke up, struck up the typewriter or pen, and insisted that the cable company stop pushing its customers around.

Like viewers all over northern Michigan, and other areas of the country, we were appalled at the sudden removal of two of the area's most popular channels. The Nashville Network and Arts & Entertainment offered viewing pleasure for country music fans, racing buffs and lovers of historic biographies. They offer a break from nighttime soap operas and movies of the week.

Shortly after the New Year change, TCI representatives asked customers to send their concerns to a post office box in Petoskey, others were given an 800 number to call out west. News — in this case bad news — traveled fast. However, in interviews with the media, no hope was given that the channels would be returned.

Customers persisted.

They expressed anger over the rude manner in which the nationwide company made a channel switch and that Animal Planet and a cartoon station were replacing TNN and A & E. The Wall Street Journal reported Jan. 21 that TCI is the parent company of the two children's channels. Instead of looking at the long-term success of meeting customer needs, TCI's focus was fixed on finances generated by forcing two undesirable channels on viewers.

The actions of the cable company are inexcusable and not exclusively felt in northern Michigan. In Des Moines, Iowa, TCI took MTV off the air for the same reason our area was stripped of A & E and TNN. Teen rage was unleashed. The distant city's mayor wielded resident disgruntlement just as the local mayor and city council members have.

The Denver-based company doesn't have a clue about what people in Charlevoix or Des Moines want to watch on television, which has been evidenced by the biggest customer service blunder of the century.

At least top executives have recognized their error and humbled themselves into returning preferred programming before mass cable shutoffs occurred. They must have remembered that it's the monthly payments of all the little people that make their company go around.

Yes, viewers have won a battle. But the war isn't over. There could be a sneak attack down the road.

We encourage cities like Charlevoix to continue looking into cable alternatives. Since Charlevoix took a stand and announced its intentions to investigate contracting with another cable source or forming a municipal plan, other area cities have shown an interest in hopping on the bandwagon.

Let the wagon roll. TCI needs competition. It needs to know that customers should be respected and valued. Sometimes when a company gets too big, it forgets who the boss really is.

Now that people in Charlevoix and northern Michigan have been part of that reminder, we hope the momentum will continue in the form of looking for alternative cable. We hope the energy of the newly formed city cable committee isn't drained by the satisfaction of seeing TNN and A & E return.

TCI could, in the end, be the best choice for Charlevoix. But that can't be determined until the newly formed committee looks into other options.

Suggestions for district board on future schools

These comments were written by Jim Hisey, a member of the School Room Ad Hock Citizens Group, and submitted to district superintendent, Roberta Jackson.

Editor:

Regarding a sinking fund for major repairs: A sinking fund for major repairs is needed. That has been proposed and discussed since the first facilities report.

Retired superintendent, Dr. Gordon VanWeiren, and principal, Vane Smith, gave excellent leadership suggestions to the ad hoc group and the school board in November. Their comments were based on years of experience.

Copies appeared in the Charlevoix Courier and the Petoskey News-Review. The school board should have copies. VanWeiren continues in December, "... prepare construction specs." January, hold the election. February, advertise for bids. March, begin construction and occupy new facilities in September. He also cautions the board against "getting in the position of 'selling' the voters."

We recommend the board move with all haste to follow Dr. VanWeiren's logic, reasoning and action timetable for the sinking fund. Please act now, two months have already passed.

Regarding the land purchase: Tying this land to the sinking fund seems, to many, an

EDITH

EDITH GILBERT

One doesn't often have the chance to hear what really goes on behind the scenes at the Kennedy Center, but thanks to recent letters from soprano, Nancy MacArthur Smith, she vividly describes the ups and downs of the Washington Opera's production of "La Boheme." Nancy has frequently sung solos at the First Congregational Church in Charlevoix and she has a loyal and enthusiastic following.

In her first letter she writes, "these rehearsals are very different from any other rehearsals I've ever attended, including those in the Army Field Service Band. Opera rehearsals always begin right on time and we get a 10 minute break at the end of every hour. When you consider they are paying 60 chorus members $12 an hour or more, you can see why. In the army, the rehearsals were very dull. They didn't have to hurry because they owned us. In community theater, they're just plain disorganized. So I'm really enjoying these rehearsals. I like to work hard and fast."

"The second difference is the quality of singing. I love to hear the men sing! When the basses rumble out a marching tune, it's so rich I could eat it for dessert. And the tenors! They are so strong, so hearty! It's really a thrill to work with talent of this caliber."

"The third difference is the conductor. Alan Nathan really knows his stuff! He knows singing and he knows Italian diction. He is very picky. He'll often ask us to change the color of the tone or hold a note a fraction of a count longer. He drills us over and over again. He hears every error, no matter how slight. Nothing gets by him."

"Have I told you about my costume? I'm wearing a pale, blue taffeta, trimmed with lavender ostrich feathers. I wear a real laced corset, with a lace fichu in front. I have a little pillow with strings attached, so I can tie it around my waist to make a bustle. I have a beautiful, shiny petticoat, trimmed with a heavy flounce, elbow length white gloves, a wig and an ostrich feather hairpiece, and a matching cape, They even provide the shoes. And I get paid for the costume fitting!"

In another letter Nancy writes, "I met Gian Carlo Menotti last night at rehearsal. He wrote "Amahl and the Night Visitors", etc. He is officially the director of "La Boheme." He watched us do Act II, then made a few suggestions. We had a superb Italian conductor last night, who spoke very little English, but he sure knew his music. He got a kick out of holding the ensemble "fermata" with his fist, until the singers turned blue. What a thrill to hear those powerful voices pouring out like a waterfall! I am having the time of my life."

In Nancy's last letter she writes, "Let me tell you what happened closing night. The cast was ravaged by flu. The tenor was so sick that his understudy went on. When the baritone got sick as well, they had to import a singer from New York, who had just finished a Saturday matinee performance at the Met. They had to hold the curtain for half an hour to give him time to go through staging. Early in the first act, it became apparent that the tenor's understudy was sick, too. At the end of the act, he sang the famous high notes an octave down. In the second act, another tenor, who was playing a bit part, took over for the sick understudy. Once again, the women were the ones who endured. Not a single female cast member got sick!"

"As you know, Placido Domingo is the artistic director for the Washington Opera. He makes all last minute decisions and has the final say. One of his duties is to announce the changes in the program. When he stepped outside the curtain to make the announcement, he said amiably, "Hello, I'm Placido Domingo" and the audience laughed loud and hard. They knew who he was!"

"Earlier I saw Domingo in the hall, near the stars' dressing rooms. I said to my friend, "I wish I could get a picture of Domingo! I'll stand here and you get him in the background."

"My friend said "We're not supposed to do that. We're supposed to ask." Then we did ask and he kindly said "Yes." He put an arm around each of our shoulders and another cast member snapped the pictures for us. I haven't seen them yet."

To be sure, the next time we attend a live performance, we're bound to be reminded, and have a deeper appreciation for the energy, exertion and effort that goes on back stage behind that velvet curtain. And I'm also sure that Nancy will be delighted to show you the pictures of herself in her ostrich feathered costume with Placido Domingo, when you run into her this summer in Charlevoix.

Gift seats children

The Barnard Grange 689 has provided 10 new Evenflo infant seats to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department through the Infant Seat Loan Program.

This program has been popular since its origin in 1982. The program is structured so citizens may use an infant seat for up to 12 months with a $20 deposit, which is returned when the seat is returned.

Since delivery of the new restraint seats, the department has loaned out six of the 10 seats to citizens with out-of-town visitors, and also to those in need of an infant seat and not able to afford one at the time, said sheriff George T. Lasater.

Wedding

Schaller-Arnold

Arrangements of white snapdragons, stargazer lilies, carnations and ivy accented with tulle adorned the Petoskey United Methodist Church for the Sept. 14 wedding of Gretchen Kristine Schaller and Jeffrey D. Arnold. Floral arrangements lined the Communion railings and candelabras flanked the altar as the bride and groom spoke their marriage vows beneath a specially-designed arch. The Rev. Don Eddy performed the 4 p.m. double ring rites in the presence of 200 guests.

The bride is the daughter of Kirk and Elsa Schaller of Petoskey, and the groom is the son of Paul and Gwen Arnold of Charlevoix.

Escorted to the altar by her father, the bride wore a gown of tulle embellished with Venice lace and pink rose buds. The gown featured a lace bodice with clustered lace motifs forming short off-the-shoulder sleeves. The circular cut skirt scattered with lace and pink rose buds flowed into a chapel length train with a matching cathedral length veil. The bride carried an all-white cascading bouquet of gardenias, stephanotis, bridal roses and freesia accented with trailing green ivy and seeded eucalyptus.

Musical accompaniment was provided by several Interlochen musicians including a harpist, cellist, trumpeter, violinist and soloist, in addition to the Petoskey High School Madrigals.

Aimee Hills served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Amanda Moncur, Trisha Witty, Jennifer (Zulski) Burkhart, Julie Bauer and Elizabeth Storm. The bridal attendants wore two-piece off-the-shoulder pink lame duchess satin gowns, featuring scalloped necklines and slim skirts with satin covered button accents on the bodices. The sophisticated styling was complimented by opera-length chiffon gloves and pearl chokers. Each attendant carried a hand clutch bouquet of 18 open Laguna roses accented with seeded eucalyptus and lemon leaves tied and braided with tulle bows.

The groom's brother, P.J. Arnold, served as best man. Groomsmen were Jeff Skeel, Carl Rothenberger, Jim Mabee, Patrick Schaller, brother of the bride, and Marvin Witthoeft.

John Schaller, brother of the bride, and Pat Elliott helped seat guests.

Special out-of-town guests included the bride's grandfather, Tracy Andrews, of Brooksville, Fla., and formerly of Gaylord; the groom's grandparents, Harold and Elizabeth Arnold, of Syracuse, N.Y.; the groom's grandmother, Joella Williams, of Deland, Fla.; and Brenda and Wray Bucklaew of Clay, N.Y.

Following the ceremony, the bride's parents hosted a reception at Mahogany's in the Charlevoix Country Club.

The rehearsal dinner on Sept. 13 was given by the parents of the groom at the Little Traverse Bay Golf Club in Harbor Springs.

The newlyweds spent a two-week honeymoon in Hawaii on the islands of Oahu, Kauai and Maui.

Gretchen and Jeff are making their home in Charlevoix. Gretchen is a 1990 graduate of Petoskey High School. She earned an associate of arts degree in 1992 from North Central Michigan College, and a bachelor's degree in psychology from the University of Michigan in 1995. undesirable, unwanted and unsaleable tactic, which will severely jeopardize passage of the needed sinking fund. Besides, if pursued, it will compound what some of the board says is their lack of credibility. To some, it gives the appearance of more obfuscating the voters.

Moreover, there have been no facts presented regarding popular trends, although we have heard suggested growth. Also, there are historical numbers which point out that the school population is about 100 students less than 12 years ago and about 400 less than 25 years ago. So what do school projections show? What will be the future effect of parochial and charter schools?

With the middle school being improved, who can justify to the public the need to acquire and hold vacant land? Should the schools be in the land speculation business. Can they afford to be?

Put off seeking money for more land until you the school board, not your hired guns, prove the need.

Regarding remodeling the middle school: Under the leadership of Mr. Charlie Butcher, members of the ad hoc group and others decided to explore viable alternates to building a new school. Butcher recommends improving the present building at an estimated $5-6 million, much less than building a new middle school somewhere else. Plus, add the cost of land to put it on, reported at $175,000, and the additional $500,000 for adding water and sewer service to the chosen land.

Follow the lead of Mr. Butcher and let his suggestions be fine tuned in cooperation with a small group of local business leaders. Please don't take more time reaching a consensus on whether to rebuild or build a new middle school.

Charlevoix schools are not alone in trying to solve bonding questions. Just note how many near and not so near public school boards are struggling for answers. And yet, each board member, here or there, administrator, teacher, citizen is trying to do their best for the students and their schools. Everyone means well.

We think the action recommendations put forth here will help our school officials give our students and teachers a safe place to achieve in peace and happiness for years to come.

This report is solely the work of James Hisey and does not speak for anyone or any group. However, letters and comments are welcome.

Big Rock still down

Big Rock Point nuclear power plant was expected to be generating electricity by the end of last week. However, during a final test of the main steam valve, employees noticed an abnormality, said plant public affairs director, Tim Petrosky.

Even though the valve passed tests, management decided to investigate the problem and make repairs.

"We knew that it wouldn't pass tests during refueling, Petrosky said.

The plant is scheduled to shut down for regular refueling in April. However, the extended outage — now entering 50 days — could delay the outage because the fuel hasn't been used during the outage.

Obituaries

Mary Catherine "Mae" Coppens

Mary Catherine "Mae" Coppens, 72, of Charlevoix, died Jan. 24, 1997, at Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey.

Funeral was 11 a.m. Tuesday, Jan. 28, at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Charlevoix. The Rev. Thomas Neis officiated. Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery, Charlevoix.

Mrs. Coppens was born April 5, 1924, in St. James, Beaver Island, the daughter of James H. and Catherine (Allers) Gallagher. She graduated from Beaver Island High School in 1942.

On Aug. 14, 1943, she married John H. "Jack" Coppens in Pontiac. They made their home in Charlevoix during the past 30 years.

Mrs. Coppens was a member of St. Mary's Church, and the American Legion Leslie T. Shapton Post No. 226 Auxiliary. She was also a Rainbow Shoppe volunteer.

Survivors include her husband, John H., of Charlevoix; one son, John E. Coppens and his wife, Jacklyne, of Houston, Texas; three daughters, Suzanne M. Carlson of Palm Beach Gardens, Fla., Marianne Coppens of Charlevoix, and Cheryl C. Chism and her husband, Randal, of Traverse City; seven grandchildren; and brothers and sisters, Earl E. Gallagher and his wife, Mary, of Traverse City, Edith H. Burhans of Lawton, Mich., Dorothy McCann and her husband, Giles, of Jackson, Mich., and Norbert M. Gallagher of Rochester, Ind.

Memorial contributions are suggested to Charlevoix Area Hospital for the CAT scan. Envelopes for memorials are available at Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix, where visitation was held from 3-5 p.m. and 7-8 p.m. Jan. 27.

A rosary was recited at 7 p.m. Monday at the funeral home.

Harvey F. Hilliker

Harvey F. Hilliker, 94, of Ada, Mich., died Jan. 26, 1997, in Grand Rapids.

An interment service will be held in the spring.

Arrangements are being handled by the Winchester Funeral Home on State Street in Charlevoix.

Attention deficit education offered

Nearly everyone has heard the term Attention Deficit/Hyperactivity Disorder.

ADHD is "a syndrome affecting children, adolescents, and, rarely, adults characterized by learning and behavior disabilities." Symptoms include impairment in perception, language, memory and motor skills and a decreased attention span, and they are most often evident by the time the child reaches 7 years of age. These symptoms often subside over time.

Why is it important to be aware of what ADHD is and how it affects our population? About one in every 25-30 children is affected by ADHD in the United States alone. Three times more boys than girls are affected. A lack of understanding can lead to frustration.

It is important to be knowledgeable of this condition. What can you do to help? Are there medications or treatments that can be used? How are people diagnosed? These questions will be addressed by Cathy Avery, Ph.D., in a free community lecture from 7-8:30 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 26, in the Community Health Education Center in Petoskey.

Registration is required. Please call HealthAccess to register at 1-800-248-6777.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Lowell Anderson
Charlevoix Assembly of God

I once heard of a church whose youth group was called the J.C. Salt and Light Company. The "J.C." of course stands for Jesus Christ, and the entire title was not only intended to give them a unique name but was at the same time a statement of the purpose and philosophy of their ministry.

It strikes me as being significant that Jesus would define the purpose and function of his people, the church, in terms of salt and light. In the Sermon on the Mount (in Matthew 5:13-16), Jesus uses these two metaphors in reference to his disciples and their mission.

The significance of these two metaphors is in the fact that they describe a state of being rather than an activity.

Jesus places "being" above "doing." It is important that we recognize this truth and order our lives according to it.

While the metaphors of salt and light ultimately have implications about a Christian's lifestyle and activities, the fact remains that the essence of Christianity is in what we are, not in what we do. Christianity is more than living by a Biblical code of ethics and moral standards. While a person without Biblical ethics and morals could hardly be classified a Christian, it is more than that. Far more.

Someone has said, "Going into a garage doesn't make you a Chevy." Likewise, going into a church, or living a Biblically moral life, doesn't make you a Christian. What makes a person a Christian is a fundamental change in their state of being. The Apostle Paul picks up the metaphor of "light" in his letter to the Ephesian Christians and expands the vital truth that Jesus gave only in capsule form in the Sermon on the Mount.

"For you were once darkness, but now you are light in the Lord. Live as children of the light (for the fruit of the light consists in all goodness, righteousness and truth) and find out what pleases the Lord. Have nothing to do with the fruitless deeds of darkness, but rather expose them. For it is shameful even to mention what the disobedient do in secret. But everything exposed by the light becomes visible, for it is light that makes everything visible. That is why it is said: 'Wake up, O sleeper, rise from the dead, and Christ will shine on you.'" (Ephesians 5:8-14).

To accept Christ as savior and follow him as a disciple is to have a radical change in one's state of being, not just follow a religious code. It is indeed a "radical" change. Radical because it is compared to the transformation from darkness to light! From that change, and because of that change, Jesus Christ Himself radiates from the life of a Christian! Those who observe such a life realize that a person is a Christian both because of what they ARE as well as what they DO and the way they ACT.

"Let your light shine before men, Jesus said, so that they may see your good deeds and glorify your Father in heaven", Matthew 5:16.

District Health Department No. 3 takes on new name

Throughout northwest Michigan, anyone calling the health department today will hear a voice saying: "Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, formerly District Health Dept. No. 3."

The new name was adopted by the Board of Health recently in recognition of the changing nature of the agency and its role in Emmet, Charlevoix, Antrim and Otsego counties, according to a news release.

In 1930 Emmet and Otsego counties agreed to form a district health department. They were the state's third organizing group, thus being designated as District No. 3.

The new name, introduced Jan. 1, helps clarify that the agency is local, and accountable to a local board.

According to Gerry Chase, agency administrator, the former name lacked a geographical reference and caused many to view it as a division of the state health department.

Current services include immunizations, maternal and infant support services, nutrition services for pregnant and lactating women, infants and children, and specialized support services for children with special health needs.

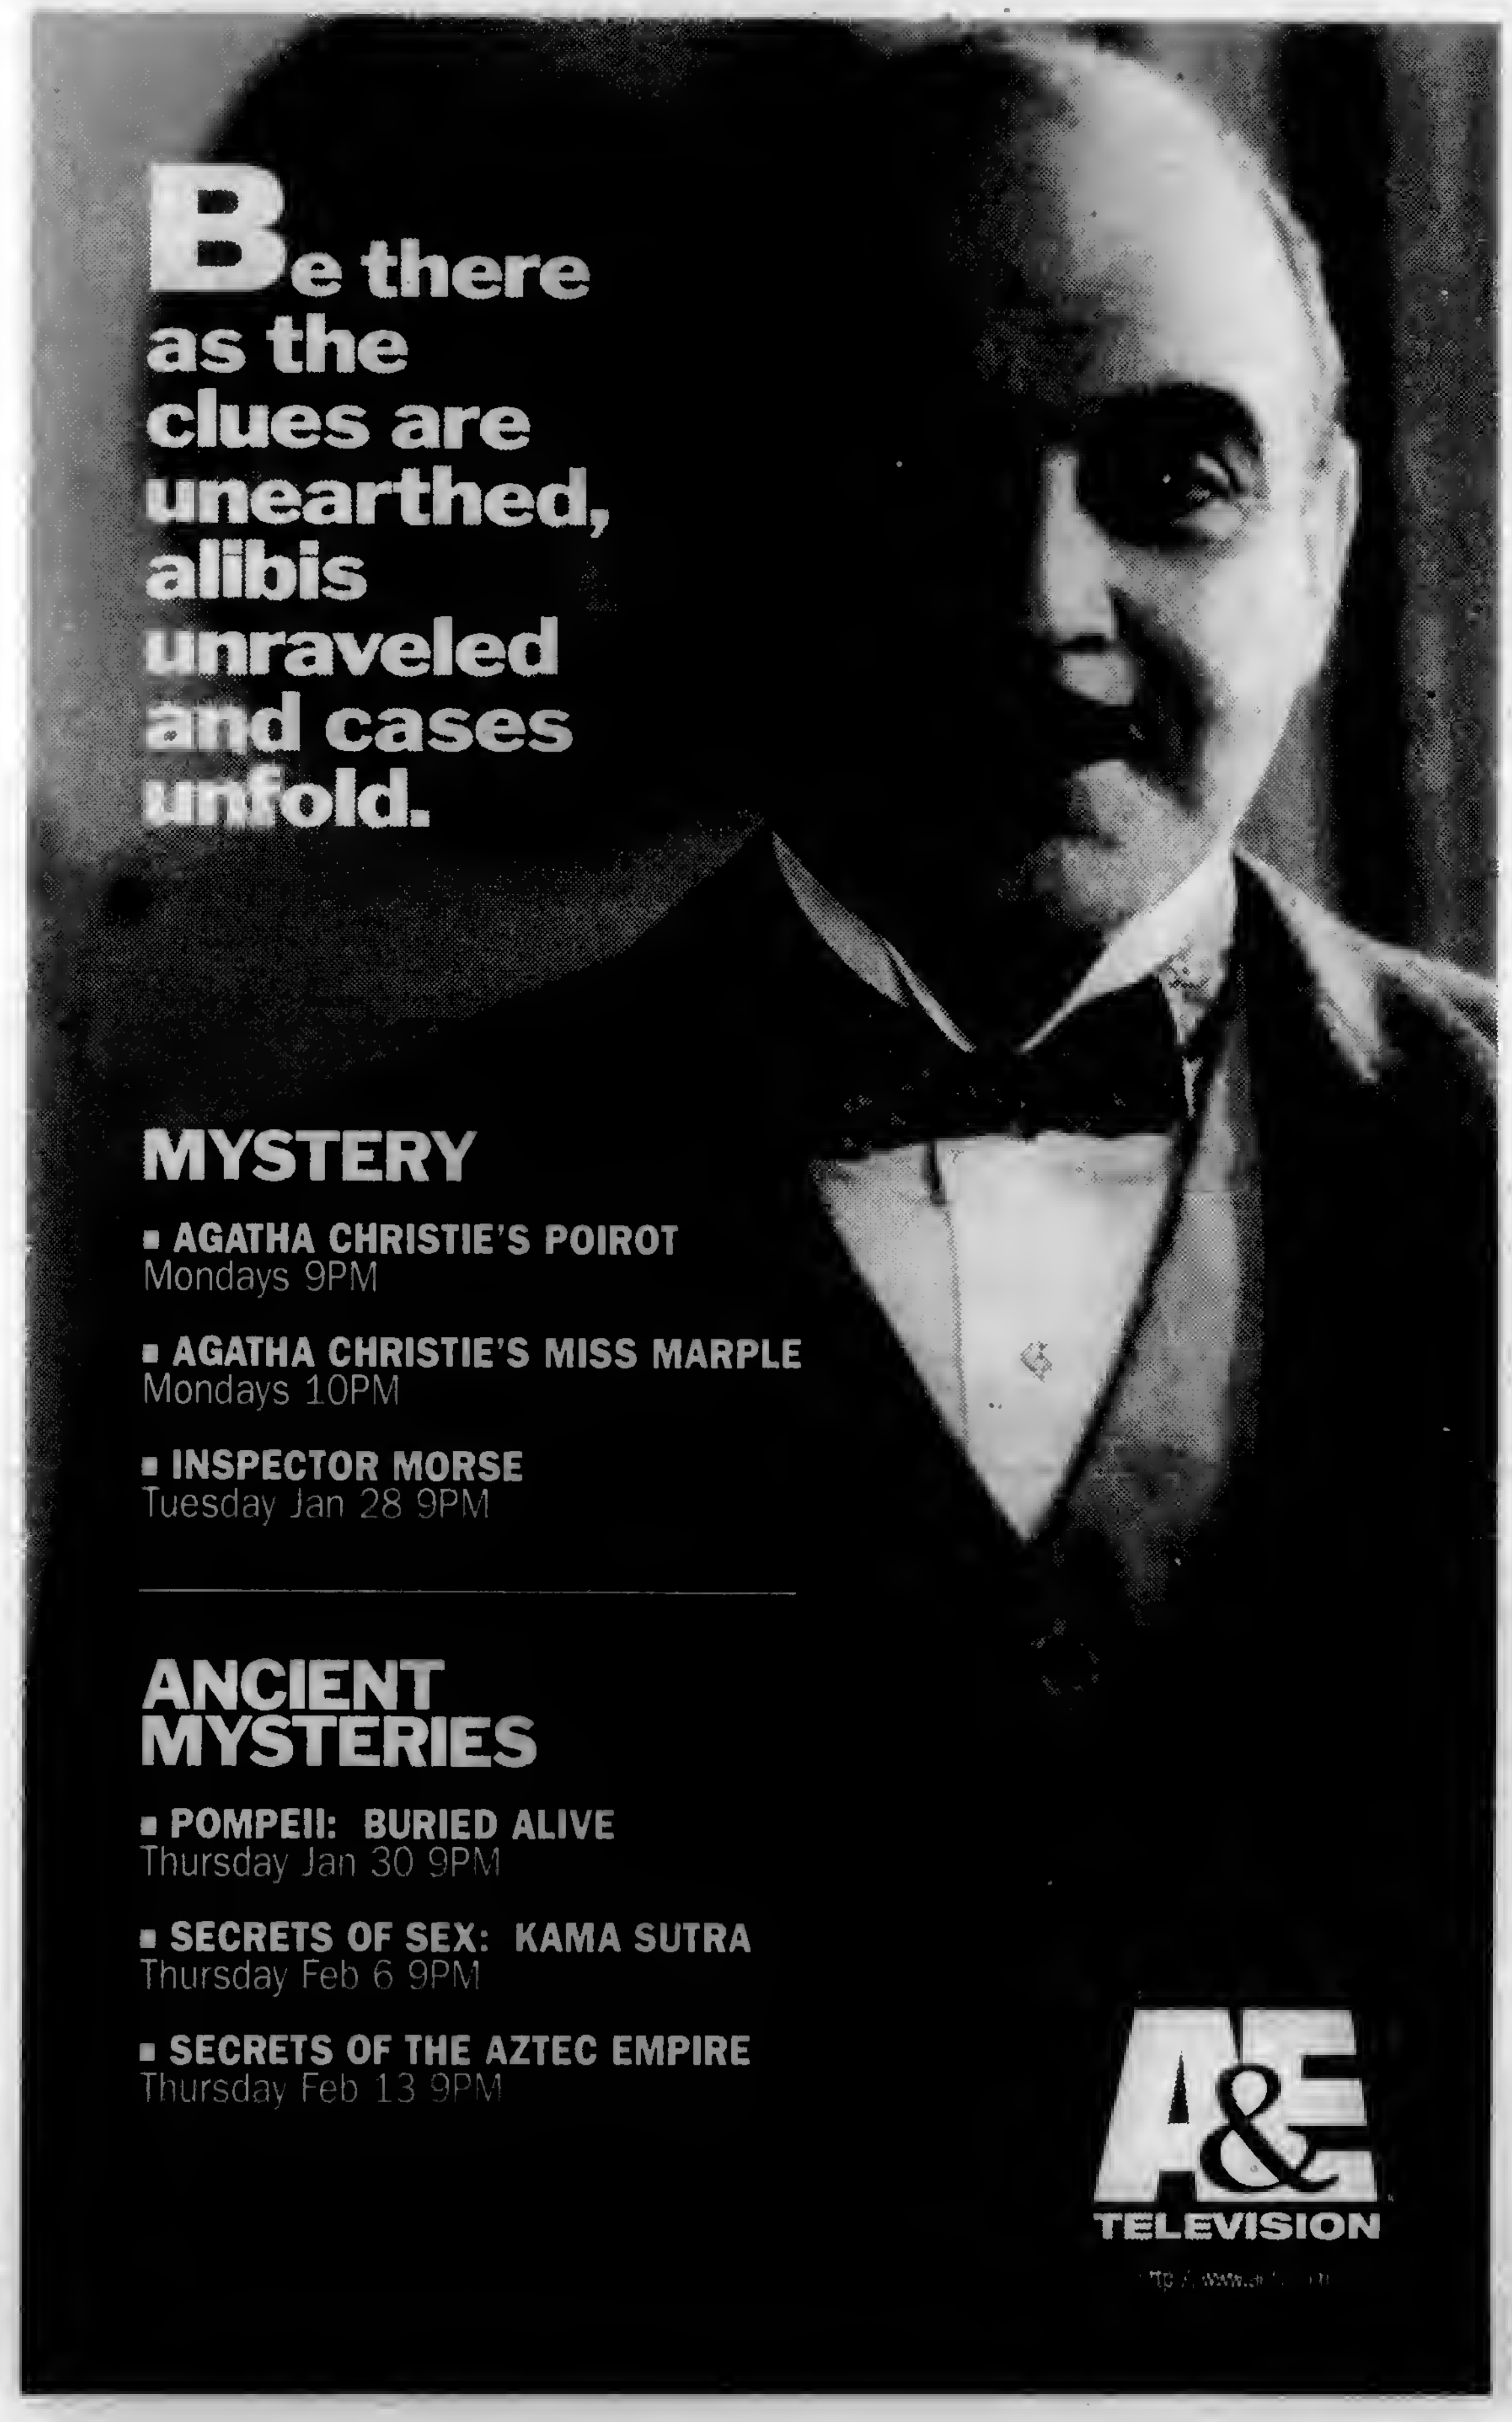
Another major focus of the agency is the prevention of infectious and communicable diseases.

Adult health services include home health care, personal care and hospice, vaccines to at-risk populations, and health screening and promotion to the elderly.

Also, it provides management services to the Living Room for adult daycare and oversees the TIPDON Program, which supports professionals and agencies addressing diabetes.

The agency's health promotion services include Womancare, which provides cancer screening and treatment services; HIV screening and support services; assistance to community coalitions addressing the issues of tobacco use; and adolescent health services.

Environmental health services include enforcement of local codes regarding on-site water and sewer systems, food service licensing, and a number of other services relating to protection from environmental health hazards.



Be there as the clues are unearthed, alibis unraveled and cases unfold.

-Business in brief-

Sears expansion complete

Joe Trojanck hosted the re-grand opening at Sears Saturday as expansion construction officially ended. There is now more showroom space for the Sears dealer store.

The store, which is located at 06585 M-66 has been open throughout construction and moved additional appliances in days before the Christmas rush ended.

Holiday shopping falls short of expectations

Michigan's holiday shopping season was better than the year before, but not good enough to meet retailers' high expectations, according to the Michigan Retailers Association.

Overall retail sales grew by 5 percent during the Thanksgiving to Christmas period. Retailers had posted a 2 percent gain during the 1995 holidays, which also had five more shopping days than the 1996 season.

"December sales didn't sustain the positive momentum of October and November, so overall holiday sales showed only modest growth," said Larry Meyer, corporate executive officer for the retailers association. "Clearly, retailers' high expectations for the season weren't realized."

Average weekly income increases in state

The average weekly wage for workers in Michigan rose by $9.76 in 1996, increasing to $591.18.

"Wages leveled off last year, especially in the manufacturing sector, causing the average wage for all Michigan workers in private industry to increase by 1.7 percent," Thomas Malek, acting director for the Michigan Employment Security Agency said.

The 1996 increase is the smallest since 1990, when the average weekly wage grew by $3.18 to $477.40.

The state average weekly wage is based on employment and payroll data collected from private Michigan employers for the 12 months ending June 30, 1996.

Coal barges not coming through channel

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

There won't be any coal ships squeezing through the downtown channel in 1997 unless a new company continues the legacy. Wolverine Power Supply Cooperative has shut down the Advance Steam Plant.

The coal has been shipped to Advance since it opened in 1953. It is burned to create enough heat to turn water to steam, which rotates the turbine to produce electricity.

On Friday, the plant's 19 employees were called into a meeting and told that most of them would not be returning for work. Severance packages were approved by the company, but details of the amounts are not being released, said Craig Borr, assistant general manager at the Cadillac headquarters.

"It's fair to say that it was a very fair package," he added.

After more than 40 years of service and million dollar upgrades in recent years, Wolverine is letting go of its Advance plant.

"It's a simple matter of economics," Borr said. "Presently, we can do much better buying power than we can operating that facility."

Wolverine is owned by six electrical distribution cooperatives, the local being Top O'Michigan. The plant is the wholesaler of electricity while Top O' Michigan is the retailer. Company officials are willing to invest at least $2 million into the plant to increase efficiency standards, according to a fact sheet provided by Wolverine Power. The plan has three coal-fired generating units.

Employees weren't entirely shocked as

In flight

Colin Carr soars over three Northmen competitors when going up for two on Jan. 21, during the Rayders game in Petoskey. The junior varsity team lost its first game of the season, 54-53. Both team's traded baskets. Petoskey put a run on the Rayders to open a 9-point, third-quarter lead, but the Rayders clawed back with a run of their own only to fall short when Skylar Handy's jump shot clanged off the front of the rim. Colin Carr had 18 points for Charlevoix, backed by the Handy twins' 12 each and Justin Thorpe's 14 rebounds. The team won over East Jordan Friday, 70-51.

Varsity team benefits by return of two players

The varsity basketball team is struggling through a stretch that has seen three losses.

The Rayders extended one of the league's top teams, East Jordan, more than expected before bowing 68-56. The Rayders led the game by a bucket going into the last quarter, and the game was still in reach as the quarter wound down.

However, three 3-point shots within 90 seconds leapt the Red Devils into a double-digit lead, and from there, they iced the game on the foul line, hitting 15 free-throws down the stretch.

For Kanine's club, contributions from those not present at the start of the season has him excited that the second half of conference play will provide more wins.

Matt Dennis, coming back from a football knee injury, led the Rayders in scoring with 11 points, five coming in the game's last stanza.

"He played his best game, so far, and he played in each quarter for the first time," Kanine said. "The points he scored in the fourth suggests he was still very fresh."

Sean Kimble has returned from a four-game disciplinary suspension, and as the team's best

Athletes expected to be specialists

Gowell, the beauty behind competing at a school as diminutive as Charlevoix is that students may play more than one sport. If that means his football players focus may haze away from the gridiron and toward skiing or running track, then so be it.

"To put high pressure for 12 months on a high school sport is unthinkable, but I guess I'm a throwback," he said.

As for pressure from parents it comes in two flavors. Win more than lose, and, perhaps more maddening for coaches, play my son or daughter a lot.

Volleyball coach Brenda Bryan feels coaches need to take those concerns with a grain of salt.

"As a coach you must realize that you might be that parent on that side feeling that same way," she said. "If somehow they can understand, then it's easier to handle."

However, that does mean granting all their wishes. After all that is why you are the coach.

"Everyone wants to see their child do well, but maybe they're not as good as some of the others," Bryan said, who has led Rayder spikers for the last 14 seasons. "The fact is whether they're out there for a long time or just a few minutes they made the team because there was something they were good at."

Why stay in the game if leading the team isn't as easy as it seems? For most, it's a way to give some of their own athletic experiences back to a new generation.

"It was a good positive experience for me in high school," basketball coach Jim Kanine said. "I figured it would be important for other students, and that they would enjoy it."

Bryan, a mother of two boys, has a different motivation keeping her in the coaching ranks. When hired by Charlevoix, she had never coached before and lacked any working knowledge of the sport. She promised herself she would do it on a trial basis and quit once the school found an alternative. A handful of presidential administrations later, she's still on the sidelines.

"It's nice to see the other side of kids," she said. "A lot of people might not like to coach girls but during volleyball. At times, I can think of them as my girls."

For Plude, he stays within the ranks to be anti-Rodman.

"You find out you can make an impact and see the confidence being built within a kid, watching that come alive is something else," he said. "That is what winning is."

Two teams left to recover from coaching loss

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

While most of Charlevoix's varsity programs are on solid ground with coaches entering or within their second decade of leadership, two programs have recently undergone turbulent transitions.

The boys' soccer and girls' basketball teams both have seen their head coaches leave following parental pressure.

Mike Dennis had coached varsity soccer since its inception four years ago. All appeared to be going well until parents concerned he was not interested in "pursuing a soccer dynasty in Charlevoix" began circulating petitions, asking for his removal.

According to Dennis they were perturbed that he was not participating and encouraging his players into the winter and summer recreation leagues, therefore failing to promote the sport of soccer.

Josh Block (far right) hands out uniforms last fall just days after getting hired to fill the shoes of former coach Mike Dennis.

"I questioned whether I should dictate to myself and my players that we spend 100 percent of our time on soccer," Dennis said. "I just don't think the basketball coach can do his job if some of his players must play in soccer games over the weekend."

After addressing these concerns with athletic director, Barry Anderson, Dennis felt secure in his decision. However, Dennis then saw a smear campaign begin against him.

Accusations that he was abusive to his players, feuded with football coaches, and that drug use ran rampant within his team were tossed around until Anderson asked for Dennis' resignation last February.

Dennis, a local pastor, defended himself and refused to resign. Accusations and pressure kept coming. The school board and athletic director offered no explanation as to why he was being asked to leave. The high school principal later wrote a letter discrediting the accusations against Dennis. Still he tendered his resignation in August.

"At that point, I felt if I did not resign, the same people would continue to hound me, he said. "With that being the case, it was not worth it."

Dennis remains hurt by the whole process. He still hasn't been told what was wrong with his coaching style to warrant removal.

Hank Wagner faced a similar situation this fall. After one season, he was forced to resign as girls' varsity basketball coach.

Hired just days before the season began, Wagner's team never recovered from the lack of preparation and struggled to an even .500 record. After back-to-back district championships, that record and a mere appearance in this year's district championship game was not enough for some fans.

Immediately a player's parent began circulating a petition for Wagner's removal. However, he Carrie (McDonald) Koeneman has been a true asset to the Irish Boat Shop since she started in 1990. She is a real team player and her skills have given her the opportunity to work in many areas of the boat shops operation. She is enthusiastic, hardworking and has been successful in all the positions she has held. In 1992 she became the manager of the gas dock and in 1994 she began working in the service area doing painting, varnishing and fiberglass repair. November 1995 found Carrie sharing her time with the accounting department as well as the ship store, and became famous as our resident computer systems troubleshooter! In October 1996 she became the ship store manager and has already made many exciting changes. We look forward to her continued success.

Basketball coach bids farewell

foresaw the problem coming.

After the second game of the season, Wagner received an unsigned, five-page letter shredding himself and his team. Among complaints was that he needed "to cut the fat out." Wagner and several team players are somewhat overweight.

Wagner, a teacher at the middle school, had planned to retire in a few years, and give "coaching as a civilian a try."

The headaches had him rethinking his future. Little did he know, his future had already been determined.

Anderson showed up in his classroom one afternoon a few days after the season ended and told him that he arrived with orders to get Wagner to resign. Worn down, Wagner tendered his resignation.

"He forced me to resign basically right there," Wagner said. "But I could have fought it, it was my choice."

Like Dennis, Wagner was given no warning that his firing was evident or that anything in particular, other than a perceived lack of wins, was wrong with his coaching.

In both situations, it appears parents went over the coach's and Wagner's heads to see coaching changes occur.

The coaching climate in Charlevoix seems to be dangerous, and that any whimsical complaint from a parent could result in a dismissal. Do the athletes who wear Charlevoix on their jerseys deserve more? Dennis feels they do.

"We need to let these kids be kids, and not put all this athletic pressure on them."

Planner suggests passing on landfill

land.

Waste Management still has about 80 acres of unused land on their Cedar Ridge site.

It was not mentioned if any new laws would be retroactive, but Sullivan said he was "keeping on top of this one."

As for relocation of the landfill, Sullivan suggested the board examine the five agreements with neighboring counties with the thought of re-evaluating and rewriting at least two of them.

Crawford, Presque Isle and Manistee counties use Cedar Ridge as a backup landfill and bring little waste to Charlevoix County.

However, in the contracts with Emmet and Antrim counties, there is language that suggests that they will someday be the receivers of the waste after Charlevoix's 10-year commitment.

Sullivan asked the board to rewrite the contracts for Emmet and Antrim counties to more clearly define Charlevoix County's responsibility in providing a landfill and "see if they're agreeable."

The present agreements are nearing expiration and the board seemed ready to pressure their neighbors into shouldering a bit of the landfill load.

When informed that Emmet county has stated due to geological reasons that they would not be able to find a proper site, board chairman Phillip Johnson guffawed, "You mean with all that open land up there they can't find a place anywhere."

Snap-on Career Seminar

Snap-on has a limited number of Sales openings in the Petoskey area

Now there are two ways to begin a rewarding career with a solid, proven leader in professional tools and equipment:

1. Franchised Dealer - If you are ready to make a solid investment in your future, consider the flexibility and earnings potential of a Snap-on franchise — ranked the #1 new franchise opportunity by Entrepreneur magazine for the third consecutive year in 1996!

2. Employed Sales Representative - If you prefer to "test drive" the franchise opportunity for up to one year while you receive a salary, commission on your sales and full health benefits, consider this unique apprentice program. Solid performance as a Sales Rep may also lead to easier down payment and financing terms should you successfully apply to purchase the franchise later.

Don't miss this opportunity to hear more about these and other career opportunities available with this industry leader in professional tools and equipment. Please make your plans now to attend our reception and seminar:

Wednesday, February 5, 6:30pm
Petoskey Holiday Inn
1441 US 131 South
Petoskey, MI

Attendance is limited. For reservations call 1-800-775-7614 today.

LEGAL NOTICE . 210

STATE OF MICHIGAN
DEPARTMENT OF ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY
SUPERVISOR OF WELLS

IN THE MATTER OF

THE PETITION OF O.I.L. ENERGY CORP. FOR AN ORDER OF THE SUPERVISOR APPROVING A UNIFORM SPACING PLAN AND COMPULSORY POOLING INTERESTS, IN PARTS OF BOYNE VALLEY TOWNSHIP AND WILSON TOWNSHIP, CHARLEVOIX COUNTY.

CAUSE NO. (A) 4-2-97

NOTICE OF HEARING

Take notice that a contested case hearing will be held before the Supervisor of Wells in the city of Lansing, Michigan, on the TWENTY FIFTH DAY OF FEBRUARY (Feb. 25) 1997, BEGINNING AT 9:30 A.M. EASTERN STANDARD TIME, IN THE DEPARTMENT OF ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY HEARING ROOM, THIRD FLOOR OF KNAPP'S OFFICE CENTRE, CORNER OF WASHINGTON AVENUE AND WASHTENAW STREET, LANSING, MICHIGAN. The hearing will be conducted pursuant to Part 615, Supervisor of Wells, of the Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Act (NREPA), 1994 PA 451, as amended, MCL 324.61501 et seq., the administrative rules, 1996 MR 9, R 324.101 et seq., and the Administrative Procedures Act, 1969 PA 306, as amended, MCL 24.201 et seq., MSA 3.560(101) et seq.

The hearing is for the purpose of receiving testimony and evidence pertaining to the need or desirability of issuing an order in the matter of the petition of O.I.L. Energy Corp., 954 Business Park Drive, Suite 3, P.O. Box 1073, Traverse City, Michigan 49685-1073. Petitioner seeks an order of the Supervisor approving a proposed Uniform Spacing Plan (USP), for development of the Antrim Shale Formation, pursuant to the applicable spacing order, Order No. (A) 14-9-94. Petitioner also requests to be named operator of the USP. The area of the USP is comprised of 1,684.07 acres. Petitioner has drilled seven (7) wells, plans to drill five (5) additional wells, and may drill a total of as many as twenty (20) wells within the area of the USP. Petitioner asserts it has been unable to achieve voluntary pooling of all interests and seeks compulsory pooling pursuant to Section 61513, Part 615 of the NREPA, of all unleased interests in the USP.

The area of the USP is described as the SE 1/4 of SE 1/4 of Section 30, all of Section 31 except the E 1/2 of SE 1/4, in Boyne Valley Township, T32N, R5W; and all of Section 35 except the N 1/2 of NW 1/4, all of Section 36 except the N 1/2 of NE 1/4 and the SW 1/4 of SW 1/4, in Wilson Township, T32N, R6W; Charlevoix County, Michigan.

You can obtain a copy of the written petition by requesting one in writing from Mr. Dennis Couturier, C.A.P. Land Company, 954 Business Park Drive, P.O. Box 1557, Traverse City, Michigan 49685, telephone number 616-933-3800. Take note that if you wish to participate as a party in the hearing by presenting evidence or cross-examining witnesses, you shall prepare and mail or otherwise deliver to the petitioner and Supervisor, not less than 5 days before the hearing date, an answer to the petition in the manner set forth in R 324.1204(6). Proof of mailing or delivering the answer shall be filed with the Supervisor on or before the date of the hearing. The answer shall state with specificity the interested person's position with regard to the petition. Failure to prepare and serve an answer in a timely manner shall preclude you from presenting evidence or cross-examining witnesses at the hearing. If an answer to the petition is not filed, the Supervisor may elect to consider the petition and enter an order without oral hearing.

Persons with disabilities needing accommodations for effective participation in this hearing should call or write Mr. Gordon L. Lewis, Geological Survey Division, P.O. Box 30256, Lansing, Michigan 48909, telephone 517-334-6959 at least a week in advance of the hearing date to request mobility, visual, hearing, or other assistance.

Workers bid jobs farewell

they learned of the plant shut down. Electricity hasn't been produced there since October. And according to Borr, they were previously told that the plant would be put up for sale.

Spectators may never see the coal ships inch their way through the channel between Round Lake and Lake Charlevoix unless a buyer decides to continue producing electricity. Borr said options to buy haven't been officially received yet, but there has been a variety of uses for the lakefront property expressed.

A sale lease back, where the company would sell the plant and then buy power from its owner, is possible, Borr said. However, other interested parties could have different plans for the land.

Prospective buyers have until the end of February to submit options. Tours of the plant will be held in the next few weeks.

Until the sale, four to six employees will continue working at the plant just for maintenance purposes, Borr said, and future coal shipments have been canceled.

Stats offer county peek

Compared to 1994, Charlevoix County's population has increased 6.4 percent since 1994, according to the Strategic Planners Alliance. The fastest growing areas in the county were Peaine Township, with a 41.1 percent increase and Chandler Township, with 12.6 percent. Boyne City, the largest community in Charlevoix County with 3,784 residents, experienced 8.8 percent growth since 1994.

Residents within the county are slightly older than the median age in Michigan of 32.6, with a median age of 34.7. The median home value is $53,600, which falls under the state median of 60,600. There are about 55 people per square mile, which also falls below the state's population density of 167.

Sports shorts continued

leaper has provided rebounding relief. His five boards along with Ben Owens' seven, and Steve Carland's six suggest that teams won't be able to dominate the Rayders on the glass as much as they could earlier this season.

The team travels to Harbor Springs Friday. Junior varsity tips-off the night at 6 p.m.

Volleyball teams tops East Jordan, readies for weekend match

For Brenda Bryan's volleyball team, the learning has been long-term as they try to deliver a conference championship. It beat East Jordan 15-7, 15-2, 15-9, winning the second in as many attempts in league play. Emily Murray served seven aces, Lisa Wheat nailed five kills and along with Jessica VanGuilder, Jamie Gowell, Amanda Eaton, and Lyndsay Blechel paved the way to victory. For Bryan the third set, despite giving up the most points, was the most satisfying.

"I tell these kids don't ever give-up a game even after you're up two sets, try to win each one," she said. "The kids are real serious, though, they don't want to lose a conference match."

The junior varsity squad is just learning what it's like to be under fire. Most are working through first experiences with higher competition, and lost their second game in three attempts to East Jordan 9-15, 5-15 despite good play from Jessi Whitley, Kristy Shindorf and Laura Schairbaum.

The team had hoped for more live tutelage, and had planned to play in the Indian River Invitational JV tournament Saturday. However, Mother Nature deemed that not necessary as weather prohibited the trip.

However, both squads will get their workout this week when playing Traverse City St. Francis on Thursday, Jan. 30, before traveling to Ellsworth Monday, Feb. 3., JV begins play at 6 p.m. The varsity squad also will participate in the Elk Rapids Invitational on Saturday.

Wrestlers shut out of area meets by ineligiblity, weater

Ineligibility continues to be a problem for the Rayder wrestling team. Coach Phil Christ's club has been stripped down to just three legal grapplers.

The number crunch forced them to bow out of all competition last week. That combined with weather cancellations, means no one has wrestled in the name of Charlevoix in more than two weeks.

"You have got to study. A lot of kids don't worry about first semester grades, and they screw around until they find out they're ineligible," Christ said, who hopes to have a team ready to tangle by the next scheduled event, a tri-meet at home with Kalkaska and Rogers City Thursday, Feb. 6.

Welcome words

Volunteer reading prompts friendship

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

When Rosemary Horton gets a glass of water, goes upstairs and shuts her bedroom door with the Charlevoix Courier, she reads for two.

A tape recorder captures the latest stories about neighbors, school board meetings, city government, obituaries and letters to the editor.

The weekly hour spent reading out loud is how Lucile Martin gets her local news. Rosemary gives her the tape on Thursday morning while the two volunteer at the community food pantry. That evening, Lucile will listen to the news as she works around the kitchen.

Lucile is technically blind. And deciphering newspaper print is difficult on her low-vision reading machine. Since her husband, Dr. Robert Martin's death last March, there's been nobody home to relay local news with the former Charlevoix teacher and librarian.

"I like to know what's going on in my community," the 81-year-old said. "I'm always interested in the viewpoints of other people."

Of special interest is school news. Lucile educated Charlevoix students for 23 years before retiring in 1979.

"Once a teacher always a teacher," she said.

Both Rosemary and Lucile spent their careers reading to children, instructing them in grammar, and hoping to pass on their appreciation for living line-by-line in poetry prose and stories. However, they never taught together. Rosemary taught in Ellsworth for 22 years.

As follow volunteers, the two have spent years handing food to needy families from the basement of the First Congregational Church. One morning Lucile happened to mention how difficult it was for her to manipulate the newspaper to get columns lined up on her machine, whch she also uses to write.

"It's not quite as difficult as doing laproscopic surgery," she said. But it was difficult enough for Lucile to stop reading the Courier and begin listening to books on tape.

Rosemary decided to begin recording the Courier. Between speaking written words, Rosemary interjects an opinion here and there.

Mt. McSauba closed by lawsuit

Manager busy in court

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

A civil lawsuit against two city employees has temporarily shut down the city's ski hills. And there's no guarantee that they will reopen before the annual Sno Challenge.

"Personnel are currently unavailable to prepare Mt. McSauba for use," said Charlevoix city manager, Mike Wiesner, in a memo to the mayor and city council. "We hope to reopen in the near future as soon as personnel are available.

"We are optimistic that this situation will not affect the Sno Challenge."

Mt. McSauba manager, Dale "Bo" Boss, and the city's recreation director, Dwight "Ike" Boss, are being sued by Tom and Sally Sikavitsas, of Charlevoix. A 12-day jury trial began Monday to determine if the men are guilty of "gross negligence" when the couple's 6-year-old son was injured

School board against Castle rezoning

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Art Reibel wants out of the concert business and into developing the 22-acre area that has been traditionally used for parking while Castle Farms rocked.

However, when approaching the Marion Township planning board about his request to rezone the agricultural property to commercial and marine industrial, he met with unexpected opposition.

Charlevoix schools superintendent, Roberta Jackson and school board president, Mary Lee Campbell, were on the scene to speak against his request for the land across the street from the Castle, on M-66.

To Reibel, the objections were out of line because neither woman lives near the site. To Jackson, her comments are a way of protecting the environment of the district's 117-acre land option and possible future site of Charlevoix's schools.

"I just have concern about the change of the property," Jackson said. "There's uncertainty of what would be placed on that land and that's where the schools will be built in the future."

Within commercial zoning, businesses such as the ones found downtown are permitted. She would not specify which potential business types she didn't think were appropriate to neighbor schools.

Reibel said the land's value lies in its rezoning. He's tried to get it zoned residential, however, it's failed to meet health department criteria because it doesn't perk, a water-content test.

Now he's looking toward building a strip mall on the front part of the land — similar to the one located across from Kmart — and use the rear acreage for boat storage, Reibel said.

The school district paid $4,500 to secure the option to buy the land within a year and a half. If the property is paid for hy June 30, the money already spent will be applied toward the $170,000 halance, Jackson said.

The hoard will be discussing whether and how to pay for the land by the end of June, even if it decides

Events in brief

Sno Challenge coming up

Charlevoix's Sno Challenge is scheduled to be held Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 15 and 16. This is Mt. McSauba's 40th anniversary and events will include: truck, snowmobiling, snowboard, ski and Thunder Tube races.

Fireworks will light the winter sky Saturday about 7 p.m.

A full schedule will highlight events in the Wednesday, Feb. 12 issue of the Courier, unless the event is canceled. (See page 1 story.)

Chorale rehearsals begin for Bach

Rehearsals of the Charlevoix Area Community Chorale will begin at 8:10 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 6th, in the fellowship hall of the Charlevoix First Congregational Church. The chorale, orchestra and soloists will be preparing J.S. Bach's "Passion According to St. Matthew" for presentation at 4 p.m. Palm Sunday, March 23.

Singers wishing to join with the group are invited to participate. If one has access to a score, bring it along.

For further information contact Ellen Addington at 536-7018.

Garden club looks at arrangements

"Arrangement Exhibition" will be the topic at the next Charlevoix Area Garden Club meeting at 1 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 11. The program will be presented by Lee Maldegen at the home of Keith Morris.

Maldegen will exhibit various arrangements that will be included in the club's August flower show. This meeting is designed to help members prepare for the event.

Anyone interested in joining the club should call Joan Knecht at 547-5072.

The Charlevoix Area Garden Club is a member of the Federated Garden Clubs of Michigan, District V. Membership is open to men and women. Prospective members should live in the Charlevoix area and be interested in gardening, flower arranging or related topics.

Quilting class offered through society

The Charlevoix Historical Society will open the railroad depot at E. Dixon on Lake Charlevoix to Watercolor Quilting classes during the month of March.

The introductory class on Wednesday, March 5, is free. A list of supplies will be provided for those wishing to join.

Classes will be limited to six students. Watercolor quilting is an abstract technique (similar to impressionistic painting) using two-inch squares. The finished product will be a wall hanging.

Classes will be held on Wednesdays, March 5, 12, 19 and 26. The fee will be $30, part of which will be donated to the Charlevoix Historical Society.

For more information or to sign up for classes call Florence Peterson at (616) 547-5002.

Big Rock Point back on line

Big Rock Point nuclear power plant returned to service at 1:27 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 2, after a 57-day outage.

The plant was shut down Dec. 7 when a voltage control unit failed. Turbine repairs were also performed while the plant was down. The work completed included testing and repairs to several major valves and completion of a test to verify the integrity of the containment sphere.

Reader shares outlook with Martin

"It sounds almost as if she's telling me the information," Lucile said, "as though she is sitting in the chair next to me.

"We have the same outlook on many things."

Both Lucile and Rosemary get more news now than before their partnership began. Lucile said she has newfound interest in births and obituaries, two sections of the paper she never troubled with when using her reading machine.

"It's one way I never miss the news," Rosemary said.

Although both Charlevoix women feel better informed, the friendship that has developed is the greatest benefit.

Instead of fighting through the frustration of reading, Lucile gains a warm feeling when hearing Rosemary speak to her.

"It's almost as good as a personal visit," Lucile said. "You feel a kinship to that person.

The affection flows both ways.

"There isn't anybody I'd rather do anything for than Lucile," Rosemary said.

CB North acquisition comes without price tag

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

By summertime, a new name will be in the town's banking game. Citizens Banking Corp., out of Jackson, is acquiring Charlevoix's CB Financial Corp.

In what appears to be the larger fish swallowing the guppy, Citizens Banking hopes to have the deal finalized by June.

According to financial data released by Citizens Banking, year-end assets totaled $3.5 billion. Combined with CB North's assets of more than $800,000, Citizens' holdings bump over 4.3 billion, making it the fifth largest bank asset-wise in the state.

> "If they want to survive here, they better be sensitive to the community's residents and businesses."
> — Francis Flanders, CB North board chairman

Citing that it is "a trend in the industry to consolidate," CB North Chairman of the Board, Francis Flanders, further explained that he foresees nothing but positives for local customers.

"Banks are expected to be on the leading edge of technology," he said. "The larger banks can provide services that smaller banks can not."

Flanders expects to see services expanded to include home banking from a personal computer, telephone banking, and wider assortments of investment, trust, and loan options.

CB North has a reputation of being giving to the community. Flanders sees no reason why the bank won't continue to be active in supporting Charlevoix.

"They are small town bank orientated," he said. "They, too, have a reputation of being sensitive to the needs of a small town."

A listing of Citizens Banks includes agencies in "metropolitans" such as Centerville, White Pigeon and Columbiaburg. However, this will be its first foray into northern Michigan. To date, the closest they've come is Grayling, Gaylord and Standish.

"If they want to survive here, they better be sensitive to the community's residents and businesses," Flanders said.

No price tag exists in such a purchase. Instead an exchange of shares defines the transaction. For every share of CB North stock; Citizens will trade for 1.489 shares of its stock.

The acquisition is still in preliminary stages. Presently, Citizens is still performing background checks into CB North to make sure the product matches with what corporate leaders' eyes are seeing. The next steps involves CB North's and Citizens shareholders approving the deal. After that, the acquisition must pass through a regulatory commission within the department of commerce of the State of Michigan. Since both banks are state licensed, the process is a bit quicker, but with government moving with the speed of a lemonade sipping summer day, it still will take until June before the takeover is officially complete.

Since the banks share the same initials, Flanders joked that not only will customers not notice the change, but that the sign may not even change.

Staff cuts in new school budget

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Superintendent Roberta Jackson, citing a loss of students from charter schools, makes "downsizing" a legitimate term in the district's vocabulary. She presented the board of education a reduced five-year budget plan.

Among a handful of notable items in the budget is a bulk payment of $170,000 for the purchase of the land off of M-66. Realtor costs are inculded. The option agreement calls for a one-time payment of the entire sum by June 30, 1997, to apply the $4,500 downpayment to the balance.

A 10 percent reduction in supplies, textbooks, and equipment are planned for the schools, with an additional 15 percent cut in middle school funds because that's where the district loses many of their students.

New Courier kids strive for seasoned coverage

EDITORIAL

Kids at the Courier.

Since the paper experienced a change of staff in 1996, we've been referred to as the bunch of kids who put out the local paper.

Yes, we are young, and our faces are still fairly new to many Charlevoix residents. Rather than let the mystery continue, we would like to introduce ourselves to make customers more comfortable when contacting us.

We will begin with the first face most people see when they come into the Courier, Teri Wilson. She is a former city employee and now sits at the paper's helm as office manager. Teri helps customers with subscriptions, is in charge of the classified and club pages, answers the phone, prepares billing sheets and types stories into the computer. She is a Charlevoix native, a Rayder grad, a volunteer firefighter and active in recreational sports.

Teri mothers the other office members through the many demands that "the kids" face each week as we put out the best paper possible. She started at the paper last July.

Next, we'll introduce the person who asks Charlevoix to support their local paper while getting their names before readers through ads, Kim Taylor. As advertising manager, Kim is frequently in contact with store owners and managers. She designs the advertisements and works to promote Charlevoix through highlighting sporting accomplishments and running special promotions, such as the Girl Scout and Boy Scout pages.

Kim sails with the Charlevoix Yacht Club, however, this year she organized club dinners because of her soon-to-arrive daughter, now known as Cora. She is married to John Taylor, a local Rotarian and co-owner of Preferred Title Co. She started at the paper in 1995 and was temporarily replaced during maternity leave.

Next we'll introduce our youngest member of the newly formed family, Jamie MacMillan. As our part-time reporter, Jamie spends much of his time covering school issues and sporting events. He is the newest staff member, having started in October. He is a graduate of Indiana University and also freelances sports stories for the Harbor Light, in Harbor Springs, where he still resides. Jamie is originally from Ohio, but has spent his childhood summers near Burt Lake, where his family owns a summer home.

Jamie is a general assignment reporter, who covers school board meetings, county government, business and sports stories and gathers court reports for On the Record. He also takes photographs.

Lastly is editor Janenne Irene Harrington, who was first known as Froats before entering into marital bliss in November. Janenne lives in Charlevoix with her husband, David. She began working at the Courier in May of 1996 and has become a Rotarian with the local club.

She is in charge of designing the paper on computer, deciding what will and won't make it into the space provided, editing stories, general reporting on city events, taking photographs, establishing and working with columnists and writing editorials.

Although we all have our specific duties — which keeps us hopping — the staff covers for each other during lunch breaks or other absences from our posts. The team, which has taken time to establish and build, has benefited the paper and Charlevoix as a whole. We meet periodically to discuss community concerns, activities and editorial topics.

We cannot fail to remember the behind-the-scenes people who help get the paper out through final proof reading, composition, billing and upper management.

We hope our readers can rest easy knowing that even though we are a young staff, we are committed to covering Charlevoix with an ethical, fair and somewhat seasoned approach.

Letters to the editor

Parents should be ashamed of childish behavior

Editor:

I would like to comment on the article "Basketball coach bids farewell" in the Jan. 29 issue.

As I was reading over this article I came upon the part of an unsigned, five-page letter written to Mr. Wagner, stating to "cut the fat out." Then Mr. MacMillan was kind enough to explain to us readers that several of the team players are somewhat overweight.

What a piece of trash for someone to write. No wonder the letter was not signed, that takes courage and we seem to have a lot of cowards here in this town.

We adults, or at least we call ourselves so, behave in such a manner like this and it is always the children who get slapped in the face. I for one am tired of it, very tired.

No child joins any sport and in front of a crowd of people tries to play their worst or lose a game. No coach wants to lose a game. Especially here in Charlevoix because they will be reminded of it to their grave. That is, unless we can chase them out of town first.

We adults need to move on, graduate high school at last and leave the past behind. I wonder how many people realize the academic ability that we have on the girls' varsity team? We have excellent students, future doctors, lawyers and more. I cannot wait to see what these girls accomplish in the next four to six years!

The sad part is that when they leave Charlevoix, they will not return because we have left such a bitter taste in their mouths. I know a lot of you will beg to differ, but there is life beyond Charlevoix, which, by the way, we also refer to as "Charlevoix the Beautiful????" I do not see much beauty here lately.

Anyway, back to my point, these girls may stay away and not let us benefit from their skills and wisdom. That will truly be our loss folks, a situation that we have created ourselves. To you girls, I apologize, I am truly sorry for all these problems you have had to bear. I must say I am very proud of all of you. You have weathered this storm with your chins up and never gave in. You have performed much better than any of us adults. Once again, I am proud of you. You girls deserve better than this!

Rainbow Shoppe makes year-end donations

Editor:

Another year for the Rainbow Shoppe has proven to be most successful. Our year-end outreach to needy organizations amounted to approximately $25,000.

Of that, $5,000 was extended to the Charlevoix Senior Center building fund; $3,000 to the Charlevoix Ministerial Association, $2,000 each to the elementary school playground project, Charlevoix Hospital's fund-raiser for a cat scanner and the Kairos Prison Ministry.

An additional, $1,000 each was given to Petoskey's Nehemiah House, Youth for Christ, Habitat for Humanity and the Charlevoix Teen Center. Checks for $500 each were given to Crisis Pregnancy Center, Camp Quality and Northern Michigan Hospital Chaplaincy. These contributions were over and above our regular monthly outreach.

Our monthly recipients were the Charlevoix Food Pantry, Charlevoix Ministerial Association, Teen Center, Matthew 25, Charlevoix Senior Center, Youth for Christ, East Jordan Christian Coffee House and the Grandvue Chaplaincy. Some of these received $100 and others $50 a month.

There were other non-profit organizations that we have helped, but too many to list.

In 1996, the Rainbow Shoppe of Charlevoix contributed over $60,000 to needy organizations. We, on the board of directors, think that's quite outstanding.

Thanks to the community for their prayers, volunteering, donating and purchasing. Our outreach program could not have been possible without your help, of which we are most grateful.

Thank You,

Rita Orlowski, Vice President of the Board of Directors of the Rainbow Shoppe

Pre-school screening set

There will be a three-year-old Developmental Screening Clinic for all Charlevoix County children entering kindergarten in the fall of 1998. The clinic will provide parents with information regarding normal child development, an opportunity to interact with parents of other three-year-old children and to have the child informally screened to identify any potential learning difficulties.

The screening will be held Wednesday, March 19, at the Community Reformed Church of God in Charlevoix.

The child's birthday must be between Dec. 1, 1992, and Dec. 1, 1993.

The clinic is free and sponsored by the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District.

Seniors watch history be made during inaugural parade, ceremony

By Lisa Wheat
Charlevoix High School senior

"I, William Jefferson Clinton do solemnly swear to uphold the constitution of the United States..." These famous words were heard by 17 Charlevoix High School seniors as they stood outside the capitol building in Washington D.C. for the inauguration of President Bill Clinton.

The trip entailed three days and two nights in the nation's capitol. After flying into the Baltimore Airport Sunday, Jan. 19, the group spent the day viewing the many attractions in D.C. Among these were the Jefferson, Lincoln, Vietnam and Korean memorials.

Inauguration Day began with a walk through the city to find a place to view the Swearing-In-Ceremony. Lining the streets of Pennsylvania Ave. were four-foot high posters with pictures of aborted fetuses, placed there to attract the president's attention as the parade passed by.

After learning about special interest and lobby groups in government class, it was beneficial for the seniors to see them in action.

Although the group was too far back to see the president in person during the swearing-in ceremony, they were able to view him on a large screen and to hear his acceptance speech.

While watching the Inaugural parade, seniors Kelli Skiba and Meg Spang got a glimpse of the First Lady. Later, the group was able to

Morris-Tinter

C. Elizabeth Morris, of Ann Arbor, and John M. Tinter, of Berea, Ohio, were joined in marriage Dec. 28, 1996, at St. Joseph Catholic Church in Andrian, Mich. The Rev. James W. Lothamer performed the double ring nuptial mass.

Elizabeth is the daughter of Mrs. Charles Morris and the late Charles Morris, of East Jordan. John is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Tinter, of Ohio. The bride was escorted down the aisle by her mother, who wore a floor length, long-sleeved, forest green velvet sheath.

The bride wore a traditional satin gown in white, with hand beaded alencon lace inserts, seed pearls and clear sequins. The dress was off-the-shoulder and had long, fitted sleeves and a cathedral length train. Her veil was held in place by a white, satin head piece, decorated with seed pearls and white, satin roses. She carried white roses and dargenias with trailing ivy.

For rehearsal, the bride-to-be wore her great-grandmother's wedding gown of more than 100 years. It was also decorated with Irish lace from her other great-grandmother.

"Trumpet Voluntary" was played by organist, Sister Annette Glendening. Soloist Michele Rathbun sang "Grow Old With Me," "The Wedding Song," and "Hymn of Joy" and "What Child Is This?"

The maid of honor was Teri Faust, sister of the bride.

Bridesmaids were Debbie Baldwin, Pamela Threet, Cheryl Schafer, all sisters of the bride, Maura LaGreca, sister of the groom, and Michele Rathbun, the bride's best friend. Junior bridesmaid was Betsy Lou Faust, the bride's godchild and niece. They each wore emerald green, taffeta, strapless dresses with fitted bodices and floor-length skirts. Off-the-shoulder, rhinestone jackets were worn. They carried white, red, pink and burgundy tipped white roses, carnations and alstroemeria.

Best man was Daniel Tinter, brother of the groom. Groomsmen were Brian Heine, Chuck Rex, Charlie Morris, Joe LaGreca and Brian Tinter. Junior groomsman was Stevie Threet.

Ushers were Randy Faust and Jewel Threet.

A reception was held at the Lenawee Country Club in Adrian. It was hosted by the mother of the bride.

Rehearsal dinner, hosted by the groom, was held Dec. 27 at Zelda's in Adrian.

A wedding trip was taken to Puerto Rico and St. Lucia with a windjammer cruise through the British Virgin Islands following.

The couple plan to make their home in Berea, Ohio.

Elizabeth is a flight attendant with Northwest Airline and a licensed paramedic. Jack is co-owner of Fuelpoint Corp., a construction company dealing with installation of gasoline tanks in Ohio.

Middle schoolers want lunch time getaway to remain

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

A historical week wrapped up at Charlevoix Middle School as, for the first time, a majority of the students could not leave campus on their own recognizance during lunch hour.

Sixth- and seventh-graders cannot leave campus unless picked up by a parent or guardian, and next year the campus will be closed for all grades. Middle school principal Dennis VanGuilder saw a smooth transition after the first week.

"It's been business as usual," he said. "I've heard no negatives from kids or parents about the change."

However, he must not be talking to all the students, as a quick tour through the cafeteria unearthed many disgruntled youth.

"It was a privilege to be able to go out to lunch," seventh-grader, Marcy Bennett, said.

Jessica Nortley put the whole situation into perspective.

"Sixth-graders are excited to be here, and the eighth-graders get to go to Washington," the seventh-grader said. "It was a treat for the seventh-graders because we don't have anything else nice."

Nortley added that growing up she couldn't wait to enter the seventh-grade because then she would be able to go out for lunch.

Amy Kurtz likened the ability to go out and eat as an everyday move that relieved much of the school-day stress.

"We have a full day of classes, it's nice to go out for an hour," she said.

Some students feel they were left out in the cold in the decision making process, and expressed concern that their behavior while off campus is being misrepresented.

"How do we know that we're not being punished for something charter school kids may be doing," Anna Hochhalter said.

"I never saw anything that was wrong," Bennett said, of accusations that students were obnoxious at some restaurants and were smoking in alleyways.

Still the policy seems secure and VanGuilder can't wait until next fall when he doesn't have "to worry about any of our kids coming and going."

He did say that there is a strong chance that students who miss their meals at Subway may still get their subs. He is negotiating with Subway management to somehow bring in premade sandwiches or at least the ingredients and have cafeteria employees go to work.

> "Sixth-graders are excited to be here, and the eighth-graders get to go to Washington. It was a treat for the seventh-graders because we don't have anything else nice."
> — Jessica Nortley, Charlevoix seventh-grader

"We've closed campus, and if the kids would like subs from Subway and they meet state and federal guidelines then it's worth pursuing," VanGuilder said. "I owe it to the kids to give it a try."

However, VanGuilder still won't have complete student satisfaction if he comes through. As Elissa Wood said, "I'd rather go downtown to get it, than stay here."

Glen S. Swisher

Glen S. Swisher, 88, of Norwood Township, died Wednesday, Jan. 29, 1997, at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

He was born June 14, 1980, in Thompsonville, Mich., the son of Warren and Mary (Hambly) Swisher.

On Jan. 12, 1929, he married Alma Sumner in Toledo, Ohio. they moved to San Francisco, Calif., in 1930, where he was employed as a welder at the Naval Ship Yard. Later, he was a parts manager at the Chevrolet dealership in the San Francisco area.

He was member of the Clayton Valley St. John Lodge No. 756 & AM in Concord, Calif.

Glen and Alma moved to Norwood Township in 1971. Glen enjoyed animals; gardening, especially raising raspberries; and helping others.

He is survived by his wife, Alma; one brother, Donald Swisher, of Thompsonville; and several nieces and nephews.

There will be no visitation. A memorial service will be held in the spring.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Charlevoix County Humane Society.

Arrangements were handled by the Hastings Funeral Home in Ellsworth.

Earl E. Levenhagen

Earl E. Levenhagen, 89, of Manitowoc, Wisc., died Wednesday, Jan. 1, 1997, at Holy Family Memorial Medical Center after a battle with cancer.

The funeral was held Saturday, Jan. 4, at the Pfeffer Funeral Home and Holy Innocents Catholic Church. The Rev. Father David Zimmerman officiated and burial was in Evergreen Cemetery in Manitowoc.

Mr. Levenhagen and his wife came to Charlevoix in 1967 when the Medusa Cement Plant opened. He worked at the plant until his retirement in 1970, when he returned to Manitowoc. While in Charlevoix, he was member of St. Mary's Catholic Church.

He is survived by his wife, Elsie, two daughters, three step-daughters, one stepson, one sister, a brother, and many grandchildren and great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his first wife and a son. He is also survived by many friends in both Manitowoc and Charlevoix, many of them his fishing and hunting buddies.

Day of prayer and unity scheduled

The Charlevoix Ministerial Association is sponsoring a Community Service of Prayer and Unity to be held 6 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 6, at the Charlevoix St. Mary's Church.

Charlevoix's area churches will be coming together for an ecumenical celebration.

Leaders from the following churches will be participating: St. Mary's, Community Church of God, Assembly of God, Community Reformed, First Congregational UCC, Christ Episcopal, East Upright Church of God, and the United Methodist, as well as community choirs and musicians.

The theme and text for this year's celebration is: "Be reconciled to God," 2 Corinthians 5:16-21. Churches across the country celebrate with the same theme and same text.

Community youth activities will also be held. The junior high will meet at the Charlevoix Teen Center/B.A.S.E.S. on Lincoln Street and the senior high youth will be meeting at the Community Church of God on Hurlbut Street at 4 p.m.

Fun, fellowship and unity will be the theme of these activities as well. Then the youth will head over to St. Mary's Church for the worship service.

This service is designed to celebrate our unity and pray for unity across our land. The public is cordially invited to attend all the activities.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

Perhaps you heard of the family who celebrated a birthday in a very special way this week. Twin 3-year-old girls and their 6-year-old big brother made homemade birthday cards for their Dad. What sets the act apart is that their Dad had passed away the year before from cancer, and their Mom's way of keeping his memory alive in their hearts was to help the kids make their cards, attach them to helium filled balloons and let the kids launch their balloons heavenward so their cards would reach Daddy.

Well the twins' cards cleared the front yard and lifted skyward without any difficulty, but the boy's became tangled in a cable TV line in their front yard. The little guy was heart broken and crying. Mom said he could make another card tomorrow and they would try again. But the boy said his Daddy had to get the card in heaven on the same day his sisters' cards got there.

With his tearful words ringing in her ears, Mom went in and got on the phone and called the power company. Couldn't you send a line men over to untangle the card? Well we'll see if we can spare one. In the meantime, the school bus came and Mom had to watch her crying son go off to school. When he was gone, she got back on the phone with the power company, "after all it's your lines," she said and got really insistent that they come help her son get his father's birthday card off to heaven.

At last they did send a man and when the boy got off the bus that afternoon, mother and son went to a clear place without any overhead wires and launched his card a second time so it did indeed get on its heavenly journey in time for Daddy's birthday.

The point of this story is a very simple one. You never can predict when an opportunity will come up for you to make a difference in someone's life. I wanted to cheer for the Mom who had thought of such a sweet idea, but I also can't help but think of the lineman who answered the call and how he could not help but be affected when he realized the full impact of what he was being asked to do. There are far too many things in this world that destroy the happiness and hopes of our families, and he had the chance to give a little something back.

What about you and I? Jesus said that even a cup of cold water given in his name could make a difference to a hurting soul. Too often we think that to make an eternal difference, it has to be something big or dramatic. If you really look at Jesus' ministry, yes there were dramatic moments, but more often than not it was the little things that turned people's lives around.

What a difference a real listening ear can make. The burden suddenly doesn't seem as heavy when you receive a word of encouragement. The whole outlook on a day can change from a note or a call that says someone is praying for you that day. You know what those little acts of kindness have meant to you. Pass them on to others. You never know when something you might take for granted will influence another person's life forever.

Vida M. Richardson

Vida M. Richardson, 93, of Charlevoix, died Jan. 29, 1997, at Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey.

Funeral was 1 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 1, at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix. The Rev. Bruce E. Hamilton of the Community Church of God officiated. Burial will take place in the spring at Brookside Cemetery.

Mrs. Richardson was born May 23, 1903, in Marion Township, Charlevoix County, the daughter of Albert and Cora (Wetzel) Black. She attended Marion Center School and graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1920. She then attended Ferris State College.

On Dec. 6, 1958, she married Cecil Richardson in Charlevoix. He preceded her in death on Nov. 11, 1982.

Mrs. Richardson was a bookkeeper and had worked for Wood Brothers Hardware and Booth Fisheries, both in Charlevoix.

She was a member of the Charlevoix Senior Center, and a member of the Church of Christ, Scientist, Charlevoix.

Mrs. Richardson enjoyed gardening and traveling.

Survivors include one sister, Marguerite B. Davis, of Petoskey; two stepdaughters, Elizabeth Meadows and Beverly Smith, both of Charlevoix; 11 grandchildren; seven great-grandchildren; one niece, Donna Snell and her husband, Paul, of Rochester N.Y.; and several great-nieces and great-nephews. She was also preceded in death by a stepdaughter, Marilyn Drenth; granddaughter, April Meadows; three brothers; and two sisters.

The family suggests memorial contributions be made to the Charlevoix Senior Center. Envelopes for memorials are available at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix, where visitation was held from 5-7 p.m. Friday, Jan. 31.

Shirley Jean Lashmit

Shirley Jean Lashmit, 50, of Charlevoix, died Jan. 29, 1997, at Munson Medical Center in Traverse City.

Funeral was 2 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 2, at the Barnard United Methodist Church. The Rev. Bernard Griner officiated. Burial will be in Norwood Cemetery.

Mrs. Lashmit was born March 26, 1946 in Cheboygan, Mich., the daughter of Jonas and Ruth (Snider) Burkhart. She was raised in Pellston and graduated from Pellston High School in 1964.

On March 6, 1965, she married John E. Lashmit in Petoskey. They made their home in the Charlevoix area for the past 31 years.

Mrs. Lashmit worked as secretary for the Charlevoix Senior Center for 10 years. She also worked at the Belvedere Club for the Brewster family.

She enjoyed gardening, feeding birds and bowling. She was a member of the Street Legends Car Club, and the Young at Heart Bowling League.

Survivors include her husband, John E., of Charlevoix, one son, John M. Lashmit and his girlfriend, Barbara Brodin, and her children, Billy and Bethany Brodin, all of Charlevoix; two daughters, Ruth Ann Lashmit of Charlevoix, and Jana Lashmit and Randy Gunter of Alanson; one granddaughter, Shanna Lee Gunter; her parents, Jonas and Ruth Burkhart, of Pellston; one sister, Lois Lashmit and her husband, Elmer, of Petoskey; four brothers, Lawrence Burkhart and his wife, Cindy, of Alanson, Gerald Burkhart and his wife, Diane, Don Burkhart and his wife, Theresa, and Ken Burkhart and his wife, Karen, all of Pellston; and her best friend, Joan Jolliffe, of Charlevoix.

Memorial contributions are suggested to the Charlevoix Senior Center. Envelopes for memorials are available at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix, where friends may called from 7-9 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 1.

Blanche Ruth (Boss) Kuhn

Early pioneer Blanche Ruth (Boss) Kuhn died Jan. 4, 1997, at the age of 95. Blanche was the last remaining descendent of the William A. Boss family of Ellsworth.

Great-grandfather Boss entered Michigan by way of Cathead Point near Grand Traverse Bay at the age of 16 with his father and sisters. They crossed the bay on ice and settled in Ellsworth. Grandpa Boss opened the Ellsworth General Store in 1903 and operated it until 1925. He donated several parcels of land to the city of Ellsworth. One such parcel was the Boss Cemetery, now known as the Ellsworth Cemetery.

Other children of the William A. Boss family included Helen (Nell) who was instrumental in opening the Charlevoix hospital; Ben, Banks Township and Antrim County Clerk for 50 years; Edward, known for Ellsworth Ox feasts; William and George.

Blanche left Ellsworth and worked in Detroit after graduating from Petoskey High school. She met her future husband, John Stewart Kuhn, and they were married in 1930. They established their home in Midland, Mich., and lived there for 35 years. Following John's death, Blanche moved back to Ellsworth. The past nine years, she has lived with her daughter Helen in California.

Blanche is survived by daughters Helen E. Treend, West Hills, Calif., and Sidney Bell, Sarasota, Fla.; seven grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Dedications may be sent to Banks Township Historical Society at 6387 Ellsworth Road, Ellsworth, Mich., 49729, c/o Myron Postmus, Treasurer.

A memorial service will be held on May 24, 1997, at the Ellsworth Cemetery, with reception following.

Local arrangements were made by Hastings Funeral Home in Ellsworth.

City appointments passed

Dan Barron was reappointed to the Downtown Development Authority Monday by city council. His current new term expires March 31, 2001.

Also, John Kurtz was appointed to the compensation committee. His term will expire Dec. 31, 1998.

A seat on the board of review has opened with the recent resignation of Shirley Roloff, who now serves as county commissioner.

Seniors see Kennedy's, soldiers' graves in D.C.

attend a student Inaugural Ball where a live band performed in celebration of the Inauguration of the 42nd President of the United States.

The following day, Tuesday, began with a trip to Arlington National Cemetery. The students saw the graves of the millions of soldiers who have served America. At the cemetery, the group witnessed the changing of the guards at the tomb of the unknown soldier and saw John F. Kennedy's grave.

Upon leaving the cemetery, the students visited the Holocaust museum. In the museum, they were appalled to find articles of clothing the Jewish prisoners actually wore, Jewish belongings that were found in their abandoned houses, and other memoirs of the Holocaust. Before taking off from the Washington National Airport, the group took a trip down Embassy Row and saw the National Cathedral.

"Going to Washington D.C. is a unique experience. It is not something you get to do every year," said senior Annie Scott. "Being there gives a sense of pride in yourself and what you stand for."

Equalizaion Ratios as shown are the percentages of assessed valuations to true cash value as determined by a survey of individual assessments. The Multipliers are those necessary to bring the Ratios to the required 50% of estimated true cash value.

The Multipliers as shown are tentative and subject to change as the result of possible adjustments by individual assessing officers. Assuming that no adjustments are made, the Multiplier may be applied to each individual valuation.

Note: THESE MULTIPLIERS REPLACE THOSE OF 1996 AND ARE NOT AN ADDITION TO OR SUBTRACTION FROM THEM.

Standard Federal offers instant bonds

When Ralph and Lorraine Valin are visited by their grandchildren from Romeo, Mich., they can take them into Standard Federal Bank and buy them savings bonds on the spot.

Most institutions can only accept an application with appropriate funds and forward the registration data to the Federal Reserve Bank for issuance. About three weeks later, purchasers receive a bond in the mail.

Although the Valins know that Standard Federal is the only bank in Michigan that is an agent for the Federal Reserve Bank, allowing it to issue bonds over the counter, their grandchildren probably don't. But the children leave the bank with their certificates in hand.

The Valins believe in supporting their country through the purchase of U.S. Savings Bonds. Bonds are available in $50, $75, $100, $200, $500, $1,000, $5,000 and $10,000 denominations or face amounts. The purchase price is 50 percent of its face amount. For example, a $100 bond costs $50. Bonds can be purchased from Standard Federal Bank with appropriate funds (cash or withdrawal from a Standard Federal account).

A savings bond is a contract showing that money has been loaned to the Treasury of the United States in exchange for certain benefits. Some benefits are for federal income tax purposes. Interest may be deferred until the bond is cashed or reaches final maturity. And since Jan. 1, 1990, interest earned may be excluded from federal income tax when eligible education expenses are paid by the owner for higher education of themselves, a spouse or dependent. Maximum income and other limitations apply.

Standard Federal Bank operates a network of 182 banking centers in Michigan, Indiana, Ohio and Illinois. Its local office at 101 M-66 East.

New general manager joins Big Rock team

Kenneth P. Powers has been named plant general manager and joins plant manager Patrick M. Donnelly at Consumers Energy's Big Rock Point nuclear plant.

Powers will be responsible for all site activities, including plans to decommission the plant. Donnelly will continue to be responsible for the day-to-day operation of the plant.

Kenneth P. Powers

Powers brings 30 years of experience in nuclear related activities to his new position. Following graduation from the GMI Engineering and Management Institute in 1967 with a bachelor's degree in industrial engineering, Powers joined the U.S. Navy as a nuclear submarine officer and later served as a senior ship superintendent in charge of overhauls and refueling. In 1971 he joined the Bechtel Corp. as a project engineer. His work included time as start-up manager at the Limerick nuclear plant in Pennsylvania and the Seabrook nuclear plant in New Hampshire.

Powers later served as plant manger of the Peach Bottom nuclear plant in Pennsylvania and the Sequoyah nuclear plant in Tennessee.

He joined Consumers Energy in 1994 as the general manager of engineering at the utility's Palisades nuclear power plant in Covert, Mich. His most recent assignment was as general manager of nuclear services at Palisades.

"Ken Powers' broad industry perspective, combined with his proven track record, will assist the Big Rock Point team in tackling the future challenges of operating Big Rock Point to the end of license in an uncertain regulatory, political and competitive climate," said Robert A. French, Consumers vice president of nuclear operations.

Powers and his wife Suzanne will move to Charlevoix in March.

Rayders undefeated in conference play

The Rayder girls' volleyball team has a 15-2-2 record overall after trudging through much of its season. Thursday, the team defeated Traverse City St. Francis in a tight match that ended 15-2,13-15, 15-9 and 15-6. They place the best three of four matches.

Monday, the team defeated Ellsworth in a non-league game, 15-6, 15-13 and 16-14. The Rayders had to come from behind in two games.

The team is undefeated in the Lake Michigan Division volleyball race.

Equadorian student discovers snowy cross country trails

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

This might be a weather report that Charlevoix senior Hugo Jimenez may be interested in. Partly sunny, temperatures in the mid 80s, with lows dipping into the 70s.

That's the weekend forecast in Hugo's home country of Ecuador, where as you traverse closer to the coast evening temperatures will cool down into the 50s.

Hugo, a foreign exchange student, shrugs off the heat and embraces the frigidness of northern Michigan's winter, by far the coldest winter he said he'll ever have to live through.

How is he surviving? Easy, he's cross-country skiing. Rekindling memories of the Jamaican bobsledding team, Hugo has been racing for Charlevoix in a sport that is impossible for Ecuadorians to do at home.

"It's a completely different sport for me, I wanted to try something different," he said. In Ecuador the top sports are soccer and basketball, which he said he can play upon returning home.

"To me he is doing what the whole foreign exchange program is all about," cross-country ski coach Nick Baic said.

A novice to the sport, Hugo says he's discovering new muscles and set his first goal to just finish a race.

"I want to cross that line," he said, "after that I can worry about a place."

He's raced in only two events. The first one, a five lap race saw him stop after three laps because most of the racers had crossed the finish line. His second race proved more successful, until he fell at the base of a downhill. Unfortunately he could not get out of the way and the skier behind him fell over, breaking the other skier's pole. At that point, sportsmanship — a quality that can't be coached — took over.

"I felt like it was my fault, because I could not get out of the way," he said. "So he could finish the race, I gave him my pole and told him to meet me at the finish line so I could get it back."

Hugo is attracted to the mental edge it takes to ski cross-country. He convinces himself that he's not improving when the urge to stop begins permeating his thoughts.

> "I felt like it was my fault, because I could not get out of the way. So he could finish the race, I gave him my pole and told him to meet me at the finish line so I could get it back."
> — Hugo Jimenez, foreign exchange student

The high school senior also likes to challenge himself off the course. Taking courses like physics, calculus, and chemistry, he plans to enter the University of Ecuador next year to study engineering and another foreign language, perhaps German or French.

"To communicate in another language increases the possibilities to communicate with more people," he said. "There are more things to see if you know another language."

Another hope for Hugo is to bring friends from Charlevoix down to Ecuador. He said he can't wait to see their reactions when he takes them to the ocean. They may react the way he did when he first saw snow. He was ecstatic when he saw his first flurries. Friends warned him after a couple of months and six feet of snow he would grow sick of it. So far, though, he only has one complaint.

"When I have to shovel the deck, I turn around in a couple of minutes and it's full of snow again."

With plenty of winter left, Hugo has more on his to do list. He wants to sled as much as possible, ice skate, downhill ski and ice fish.

"Sitting on a bucket, waiting for a fish it sounds real cool."

Spoken like a misplaced Eskimo.

Hugo Jimenez enjoys his first season under northern Michigan's falling flakes. He's joined the Rayder cross country club with many of the friends he made while a cross country runner last fall. The gang heads out to assistant coach, Paul Gelderblom's house frequently to train on his homemade trail.

Basketball teams lose to Harbor Springs

You'll have to excuse the basketball teams' desire to wipe clean their memories of their recent road trip to Harbor Springs.

Arriving into town with the bright prospect of two victories, they left a little tattered and torn after dropping both games.

The varsity squad fell behind by 11 points in the first half, and could not recover, losing 69-45.

The junior varsity team seemed destined to start the evening out on a winning note, staking themselves out to a 15 point halftime lead, only to see Harbor Springs cut that deficit in half in the third quarter and wrestle away the lead in the last minute of the game. Harbor won 66-63.

"It was a heartbreaker to lose, but you've got to give Harbor Springs credit for hanging in and battling," junior varsity coach Todd Klinger said.

Colin Carr lead the Rayders with 12 points, Spencer Handy added 10, and Justin Thorpe grabbed 8 rebounds.

For the first time all season, the Rayders' press was attacked with efficiency as the Rams were able to break the pressure numerous times.

"We had trouble pressing them," Klinger said. "We could not get the steals and turnovers we usually get, and we could not set the tone."

The junior varsity's record stands at 10-2.

The Rayders next travel to Boyne City Friday night and to St. Ignace Saturday. The St. Ignace game is the remake of the game canceled on Jan. 4. Junior varsity tips off all games at 6 p.m.

Ski challenge coming to Boyne Mountain

The Sixth Annual Kahlua Michigan Ski Challenge will be held at Boyne Mountain Resorts on Saturday, Feb. 22. All races will take place on Boyne's Superbowl slope.

Active Michigan skiers and snowboarders, ages 21 and older, are encouraged to enter. Racers will compete in four divisions: Gold, advanced; Silver, recreational racers who have some Nastar or similar racing experience; Bronze, seniors; and Pro.

Women and men will each compete on slalom and giant slalom courses. Best combined times in both events will determine winners in each category. An awards ceremony and reception will follow after the day's activities.

Injury lawsuit could cost city insurance more than $1 million

The Sno Challenge is Charlevoix's annual winter festival and traditionally sports events such as truck, snowmobile, snowboard and inner tube races. It is currently scheduled for Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 15 and 16.

The lawsuit is against the Bosses, however, they are covered by city insurance. If won by the Sikavitsas family, it could cost more than $1.6 million, which is the estimated amount of income loss Dustin could lose over his adult lifetime. The lawsuit specifically states that the plaintiffs are seeking in excess of $10,000, said firm partner, Dick Joseph.

Opening comments from opposing attorneys painted two different pictures for a jury of four women and two men Monday.

Ike and Bo, uncle and nephew, are accused of mishandling Dustin Sikavitsas following an injury on the ski hill. Dustin was 6 years old when he fell on the face of the hill and was then run into by another young skier. His skull was fractured in multiple places when the other child's knee hit it.

Dustin's injury is not being contested by the defense. Long-term effects and whether they were caused by Ike and Bo's actions are being argued. The boy, who is now 11, is diagnosed as having Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder, which manifests through a lack of focus and high energy.

According to Michael Corcoran, who represents the Charlevoix family for Pointner, Joseph & Corcoran, Dustin received additional injuries because the Bosses failed to strap him to a toboggan before taking him down the rest of the hill, left the child "moaning and thrashing about" on a picnic table for 30 minutes without calling an ambulance or the parents, didn't administer oxygen, a step he called critical during head injuries, and failed to either be adequately trained in First Aid or having someone at the hill who was.

> "The defendants didn't care."They buried their heads in the snow and gambled with Dustin's future."
> — Mike Corcoran, plaintiff's attorney

"No matter how big or how good you are, you can't change the facts of this case," he said, pointing out the expertise of the defense attorney from Plunkett & Cooney, a firm based out of Detroit and Petoskey. "Dustin's brain will never work the same as it did before this evening."

"The defendants didn't care," Corcoran said. "They buried their heads in the snow and gambled with Dustin's future."

However, defense attorney, Gretchen Olsen, said that Dustin's situation is in no way the fault of Bo and Ike Boss. She painted a different picture that showed Dustin as having no signs of serious injury until about an hour after arriving at the hospital.

She asked jurors to wade through what was presented to them by plaintiff's attorneys: Does it make sense, is it important and do you believe it.

"Make no mistake, there are going to be an awful lot of red herrings in this case," she said, stating that much of the information will be planned to evoke emotion or lead jurors from the bottom line of what is being considered.

According to defense, Dustin only had "slight swelling" on his forehead when Bo examined him on the hill. Boss then cradled him in his arms and had a volunteer drive that all-terrain vehicle to the lodge.

"The bouncing was no worse than in a sled," Olsen said. "One way or the other, you have to go over the snow."

Olsen told jurors that many witnesses will be called during the trial, many of them medical. She said that all but one have stated during depositions that even if all the plaintiff's alleged lack of procedures would have been done, it wouldn't change Dustin's condition today.

> "Make no mistake, there are going to be an awful lot of red herrings in this case."

For gross negligence to be charged by jurors, they will have to find Bo and Ike Boss guilty of "conduct or a failure to act that is so reckless that it demonstrates a substantial lack of concern."

Strip mall not supported by board

to renovate the middle school and not build new.

"Down the road, 20-30 years from now will the district need the land, I believe so," Jackson said. "The question is, will it be available then."

The new land is being planned to hold three new schools. The thought, for Reibel, is nothing more than another board pipe dream — a dream he doesn't want interfering with his development. The owner of Castle Farms said he is buying the 25 acres adjacent to the potential school land from the Reibel Trust for private, individual development. However, his battles with zoning aren't over.

After neighbors and school representatives had their say at a Jan. 7 Marion Township Zoning and Planning Board meeting, a vote was taken to recommend the township council not support Reibel's request.

According to meeting minutes, the board considered the Marine Industrial zoning spot zoning because there are no other similar plots of land in the area.

The Marine Industrial request to the rear of the property allows boat building and storage, and primarily lends itself to lakefront, said township planning chair, Tim Matchett.

Area land is mostly being developed as residential. However, the Castle land across the street is zoned commercial. The request for rezoning to two different land uses was presented as one request and had to be either approved or denied as one request.

"Given the concerns of surrounding residents, the board didn't feel it was a good use in that particular neighborhood," Matchett said. "Regardless what his intents are presently, once the land is rezoned, those potentials go with the land."

Reibel will meet with county planners next, who will also form a recommendation for the Marion Township Board.

School girl hit when crossing street

A Charlevoix student was hit by a truck on her way to school Friday.

Amanda Larson, 13, told police she couldn't see the 1995 Dodge pickup coming when she crossed the road at Mason and Bridge streets, Charlevoix chief Dennis Halverson said.

After she was knocked to the ground downtown, she got up and ran away.

The driver of the truck, Gordon Standfest, 46, of Williamsburg, drove to the sheriff's department to report the accident.

City police contacted the emergency room and the schools to find the student. She was taken to Charlevoix Area Hospital, where she was checked over and released.

The driver told police he could not stop by the time he spotted Amanda in the road. He was not ticketed for the accident.

"It appears as though the child did not look both ways before crossing the street," Halverson said.

Debate sixth at state

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Charlevoix high school sent their most convincing arguers down to the state debate competition in Flint over the weekend.

Juniors Rhonda Williams, Danica Kilander, and Katie Golski joined sophomores Michael Czerkes and Kristina Potter to form the team.

They debated the topic of juvenile crime, and tied for the final spot in the semi-finals with two other teams. However, they failed to advance on tie breaker points, finishing in sixth place overall. Still the weekend was a success, according to debate coach Connie Ford.

"They did quite well for a young team," she said. "It's nice to know you can have comparable scores with some of the larger schools."

The team was thrown a curve ball during the competition when another team debated what Ford called a "counter plan." Usually a team will debate an affirmative response along with presenting their plan while another will try to discount what was just said. However, a counter plan is when the other team agrees with what was said, but presents a different plan.

"That really threw the kids because you don't expect to see that, but they still did quite nicely," Ford said.

They left town determined to win, but despite falling short, the reviews of the weekend remain high.

"We had so much fun, we just had a blast," Kilander said. "We are the sixth best team in the state."

Budget reduced

Total expenditures range from a low during the 1997-98 fiscal year of $9,765,310 to a high during the 1996-97 period of $10,461,520.

The district will be spending an average of $264,000 more than incoming revenues each year.

The figures coming out of Jackson's office call for a reduction of staff by 12 people. It is hoped these reductions will come through natural retirement, but the possibilities of a lay-off lingers.

"We have staff that we're not replacing," district treasurer Judy Boss said. "We have to have fewer people to get to that point or those figures would read a whole lot worse."

This week budget meetings continue. During the next board meeting on Feb. 17, a public hearing on the budget will be held and board members will determine what, if any, revisions they would like to make. A final vote on the budget won't happen until the following meeting on March 3. Both meetings begin at 7:30 pm and will be held in the high school study hall.

"This will bring us in line with the revenues we expect to be receiving," Jackson said while introducing her budget. "I urge the board to take seriously our recommendations, or to come up with other recommendations to reduce costs."

Sheriff appoints new staff for current term

Sheriff George T. Lasater was sworn in for his new four-year term Jan. 28 in the 90th District Court room. He was re-elected in November. Also, sworn in were Don Schneider as undersheriff, officer Babette Meggison as jail administrator and deputies Patrick Avery and James Owens as sergeants.

The invocation was made by Charlevoix County Jail Chaplain, Jerry Polk.

Schneider has been a deputy sheriff for 15 years. During that period, he has proven himself to be a respected and loyal officer who has never refused an assignment and no matter how difficult the assignment is, he has worked diligently until the mission was accomplished, Lasater said.

"I'm pleased to have him as my right-hand person and know that the citizens of Charlevoix County will say, 'George, you made a good decision.'"

Meggison has been with the department for eight years as communications/corrections officer and has proven herself as a leader and diligent employee, according to the sheriff.

Avery and Owens were both promoted to shift sergeant.

"Pat is a true example of a success story within the sheriff's office," Lasater said. "Pat was a sheriff's office cadet while still in high school."

Avery has served as a volunteer on the sheriff's auxiliary and was hired as a communication/corrections officer in 1984. He then transferred to the main office where he has functioned as both communications/corrections officer and a deputy sheriff for 5 years.

Lasater went on to say that Owens brings to the sergeant's position maturity, experience, loyalty and respect from his fellow officers.

Norwood's early docks welcomed lumber ships

By Nancy Ritsema
Courier columnist

Entrepreneurs at Norwood, once a wilderness of unharvested cedar, hemlock, and hardwood timber, built its big dock and sawmill in 1866. The dock brought settlers and sawmill workers to the land and sent millions of board feet of lumber to Chicago and Milwaukee over the next 30 years.

Lucius Pearl oversaw the big dock's construction. Log cribs built at old Antrim City were floated three miles north to Norwood's dock site. The cribs were filled with rocks loaded onto a scow, or flat-bottomed boat, and sunk into position for the dock.

Log pilings, which would support the dock, were driven through the middle of the cribs into the lake bed. After more than two years, the dock, which extended well over 100 feet and into 30 feet depths of Lake Michigan water, was completed.

A boardwalk was built on a stone foundation and stretched from the dock and up the beach hill to the sawmill's company store. Folks going to and from ships enjoyed a dry boardwalk hike to the village. The crumbling boardwalk foundation can still be seen winding up the beach hill near Lake Street.

In the early years, Norwood's dock was a scheduled stopping place for wood burning steamers Sunnyside, General Paine, Ella Burrows, and others that chugged up and down the lake. Ships stopped just long enough to "wood up" with a fresh supply of hardwood fuel and then continued on.

The big dock's storehouse was a building of importance and activity. Norwood pioneer Earnest Harris wrote that in 1866 and for many years after, his grandfather sent two or three barrels of apples and other food treats from southern Michigan to their family. The barrels were sent overland to Chicago and then shipped by boat to Norwood. Barrels were stored in the dock storehouse until the family picked them up.

> "Everybody used the old boathouse, but no one took responsibility for it. And that is probably why it fell into disrepair and was finally washed away into the lake."
> — Ethel Coeling

In the spring of 1869, the Charlevoix Sentinel reported the story of thieves who broke into the Norwood dock storehouse hoping to find booty. The thieves made off at night in a small boat with three trunks belonging to two ladies from Traverse City who were on their way home from a trip out east. The only "booty" the thieves got was three trunks packed with ladies' corsets, camisoles and dresses!

On any clear night a century ago, Norwood villagers saw the pleasant gleam of four lighthouses warning passing ships away from land. Kerosene lanterns in the lighthouses were lit at sunset each day and extinguished at sunrise by the light keepers during the Great Lakes' shipping season.

The lights from Old Mission Lighthouse, Cat Head, or Grand Traverse Lighthouse, built in 1851, South Fox Island Lighthouse, and Beaver Island Lighthouse could be identified on the far horizons off the Norwood shore.

Today, only Grand Traverse Lighthouse on Leelenau Peninsula beckons across the waters. The other lighthouses are no longer in use.

Close to shore, protected by a curve of land now part of Norwood Township Park, locals built a boathouse and a new small dock in the early 1900s. Norwood's big dock and sawmill had disappeared a few years earlier. Violent storms took out the dock and fire destroyed the mill.

"Everybody used the old boathouse, but no one took responsibility for it", 76-year-old Ethel Coeling recalls. "And that is probably why it fell into disrepair and was finally washed away into the lake."

As a girl, Ethel, who loved the water and boats, frequented the family's Norwood cottage with her parents, the Bill Coelings.

Mr. Bellinger also spent summers in Norwood in the 1930s and used the boathouse to store his fishnets. He was an ardent fisherman and early mornings he and his boat were off shore gill net fishing.

"I was about 10 years old at the time," Ethel said, "and I was always hanging around the boathouse in hopes of a chance to go fishing with Mr. Bellinger."

"Out on Lake Michigan hauling in nets was great fun," Ethel laughed. "Especially when fisherman Bellinger caught a slew of crayfish in his nets instead of fish. He was a staunch Republican and called the unpalatable crayfish 'darn Roosevelts.'"

"Every fall, after plenty of good fishing, the Bellingers loaded their car with dozens of glass jars of fish canned by Mrs. Bellinger, and headed back to Cincinnati, Ohio."

Today, photos remind us of Norwood's big dock and the busy commerce it supported over a 100 years ago. Villagers still fondly remember the old boathouse and fisherman Bellinger heading out into Lake Michigan for his daily catch of fish.

Judge gives high school senior second chance

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

The Charlevoix youth involved with drug trafficking was sentenced to probation, fines and random drug testing.

Shawn Kimble, 17, sat holding his Rayder varsity jacket Friday morning before 33rd Circuit Court Judge, Richard Pajtas, called him to the podium.

The high school senior had admitted to taking part in an August drug sale in the bathrooms at the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce. He pleaded guilty to two counts of delivery of marijuana on Jan. 3. Each charge is a felony punishable by up to four years in prison.

> "Tell me how your basketball team would be doing if all you guys were smoking dope every weekend."
> — Judge Richard Pajtas, 33rd Circuit Court

Kimble and his court-appointed attorney, Gordon Boydston, sought mercy from the court in requesting Youthful Trainee status because of Kimble's age and lack of criminal or juvenile record.

"He immediately went to the police and cooperated with the investigation," Boydston told the judge.

Kimble turned himself in a few days after three downstate youths were arrested after making a drug sale to two confidential informants.

"He made a mistake and he recognized it," Boydston said.

Pajtas gave Kimble a chance to express his own remorse before passing down sentence. He did so.

"Since the incident, I have turned my life around," the Charlevoix High School basketball player said. "They were dumb choices. It's been over six months since this incident, since I touched it, or alcohol."

The judge asked Kimble why he quit doing drugs, a habit that the teen-ager told court officials had been a part of his life since he was 14 years old.

"I'm confident I don't need it," he said. "It's no longer a part of my life."

Kimble went on to tell the judge that using drugs wasn't worth the consequences he was facing. Pajtas asked the young man if he didn't consider the effects that doing drugs had on his life.

"What was your life like when your mind was going around in a fog all the time," Pajtas asked. "Tell me how your basketball team would be doing if all you guys were smoking dope every weekend."

Kimble told the judge they would be doing "horrible" under

McSauba court case continues

The civil court battle between two city employees and Tom and Sally Sikavitsas will continue through this week. The jury trial was scheduled to run for 12 days, with interruptions for other court hearings.

The Sikavitsas are suing Dwight "Ike" Boss and Dale "Bo" Boss, Jr., alleging gross negligence surrounding an injury their 6-year-old son, Dustin, received while skiing at Mt. McSauba in 1992.

The lawsuit originally involved the City of Charlevoix, which was excused because of governmental immunity. However, the Bosses, as city employees are covered by the municipalities insurance.

The trial is scheduled to end Thursday, Feb. 20.

Testimony for the plaintiffs run through today. Defense begins calling witnesses Thursday, Feb. 13.

The verdict will be reported in next week's issue.

such circumstances, noting that it slows down reaction time.

Pajtas told Kimble that he was additionally concerned that he had "peddled this stuff to other people."

"You affected other lives as well," the judge said.

"There's no excuse for my actions," Kimble went on. "I'm asking for another chance. I can't go back and change it. But I can go forward and never do it again."

Special prosecutor, Maria Barton, for the Straits Area Narcotics Enforcement team, said she had no objection to Kimble receiving Youthful Trainee status, which allows a lighter sentence and essentially a second chance without imposing prison or long-term jail time.

Before making a final decision, the judge told Kimble that he recognized that his participating in the transaction was minor and that the other three defendants, all 17-years-old, were sentenced to jail and state prison.

Kimble stood as a lookout while the drugs exchanged hands. He was paid $5 for doing so.

"You have a tremendous potential if you are sincere," Pajtas said.

Kimble was sentenced to two years probation, and three months in jail as "additional incentive" to abide by the court's directives. The jail time was held in abeyance and will only be imposed if Kimble violates probation.

The youth was ordered not to possess drugs or be in contact with anyone who does. He must also submit to random drug testing and searches, pay $240 for his court-appointed attorney, $480 in probation oversight fees, $350 in court costs and complete 50 hours community service .

"If I get a dirty urine back, I'm going to sign an order and you're going to serve 89 days," Pajtas said. "I hope I never see you in this court room again."

Charlevoix trails committee to meet

Top Of Michigan Trails Council will host its second meeting for Charlevoix County residents interested in helping develop a recreational trail from Charlevoix to Petoskey. The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 18, at Charlevoix City Hall, 210 State St.

Top Of Michigan Trails Council is a local non-profit organization working to develop a multi-use recreational trail system in northern Michigan. The Trails Council works as a coalition of recreation interests — bicycling, hiking, in-line skating, snowmobiling, equestrian, and cross-country skiing — together establishing recreational trails. One of its 1997 goals is to establish a Charlevoix Trail Committee to work on trail development in Charlevoix County.

"Our first meeting brought together a good cross-section of Charlevoix area residents, with a variety of recreational interests," said trails council executive director Jennifer Srigley. "Now we're going to work together to figure out what kind of recreational trail is desired and where it should go."

Misinformation given in Ramsey reward

Boulder Crime Stoppers officials have announced a $100,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and indictment of the person or persons responsible for the murder of JonBenet Ramsey Dec. 26, 1996. Earlier reports stated that an award fund has been established by the Ramsey family for $50,000 and by a national publication in the amount of $50,000.

"This information is incorrect," said Brad Harvey, co-chairman of the nonprofit, Crime Stoppers organization. "We have been working with the Ramsey family's attorneys for the past several weeks as they worked to establish a foundation which will be responsible for the funds.

Meanwhile, Boulder police have sought assistance by the Shreveport, La., police in locating the author of an anonymous letter sent to Boulder police last week.

The letter was postmarked in late January in Shreveport. It contained potentially significant information. The letter was one of 600 received by the department regarding the Ramsey case.

School schedules a make-up day

Charlevoix public schools will have a snow makeup day Friday, June 13. If another snow day occurs prior to Thursday, Feb. 20, the makeup day will be on Friday, Feb. 21.

Auxiliary offers safe boating classes

The U.S. coast Guard Auxiliary is offering a Safe Boating Class from 7-9 p.m.each Monday and Wednesday from March 3 through April 23 at the middle school.

Subjects being taught are: Choosing a boat, lines and knots, equipment, boat handling, waterway signs, rules, power systems, piloting, marine radio, weather and boating, and trailering.

Tuition and materials are $25.

Adults may register by calling Dan Miller at 536-2121 or Jeanie Kilgour at 547-0983.

Live theater comes to Charlevoix students

The Michigan Opera Theatre will perform "Nanabush" to Charlevoix elementary students Thursday, Feb. 13. The performance at St. Mary's School begins at 9:15 a.m. with Charlevoix elementary students seeing the program at 10:30 a.m.

"Nanabush" introduces young audiences to Michigan Indian legends through the many exploits of the popular character, Nanabush. A local Native American artist, Arnold Shawanoo Walker, painted the drums used in the state-wide production.

The performance is presented by the Crooked Tree Arts Council through the generosity of a private donor who supports educational programming in the Charlevoix area.

The dinner theatre will be held at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 19, at the Perry Hotel in Petoskey as a benefit for the arts council. The fund-raiser is a joint effort of Stafford's Perry Hotel and the Michigan Opera Theatre.

The program being presented is "From Hollywood to Broadway."

Chefs at the Perry will serve a dinner highlighted by sauteed chicken breast served with a wild morel mushroom sauce. Dessert is a Beggar's Purse, a puff pastry, wrapped fruit baked with a caramel sauce.

The evening's dinner and entertainment cost $35 per person and reservations are being accepted by the Crooked Tree Arts Council at the Virginia M. McCune Community Arts Center in Petoskey at 347-4337.

Nursery school registration Thursday

Charlevoix Kid's Corner Nursery School is holding registration for the 1997-98 school year at Thursday, March 13, at the First Congregational United Church of Christ.

Alumni families can register children at 6:30 p.m., followed by congregation members at 6:45 p.m. and the general public at 7 p.m.

A nonrefundable $25 registration fee will be collected during registration. The nursery school offers two- and three-day classes for 3- and 4-year-olds.

For more information, call 547-1177.

Dinner to benefit local famiy

There will be a benefit ham dinner, with all the trimmings, held for the John Lashmit family from noon-3 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 16, at the Charlevoix Senior Center with a $6 donation at the door.

The Senior Center is located at 06906 Norwood Road. This benefit is co-sponsored by the Barnard Grange and the Charlevoix Senior Center.

County planners recommend against Reibel's rezoning

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Art Reibel isn't waiting for his third strike.

After Charlevoix County planners voted Thursday to recommend against rezoning 25 acres across from Castle Farms, he began looking for another approach.

"If it's denied, we'll be in circuit court within the week," he said, of the township's last chance to rezone the vacant land from agricultural to commercial and marine industrial.

On Jan. 7, Marion Township planners also voted to recommend that the township board not permit the rezoning. Following Thursday's meeting, Reibel said he doesn't expect the township board to override the two recommendations. Besides, he said, many of the officials' decisions involve personal feelings.

Reibel has been sued by the township six times in its attempts to shut down rock concerts at the Castle. He's sued the township once.

They could be facing off again.

"I would prefer to sue," Reibel said. "I prevail."

He argues that because the land is taxed as commercial — stemming from its occasional use as a parking lot for concerts — and that it has been used for commercial purposes since before township zoning took effect, he should be granted his request.

Reibel planned to develop the parking lot on M-66 into a commercial strip mall along the 1,069-foot highway frontage and build pole barns for boat storage on the rear two-thirds of the land.

"It's reasonable," he told planners, noting that it was the only decent use left for the land since it has been denied as housing lots because it's too wet. "There's no other practical use for this property. And there's a definite need for boat storage in this area."

Planner, Peggy Midener, said she's concerned that the businesses that would occupy the strip mall

City looks at new park

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

City zoning restrictions may lead to a new park falling into the city's lap.

Waterfront Properties, a developing firm, had hoped to build a home overlooking Lake Charlevoix and Pine River Channel. Waterfront currently owns the land, which is adjacent to the local Coast Guard station and would be a continuation of Chicago Club homes.

The property, however, is 16,000 square feet. Zoning restrictions calling for a 50-foot setback from the lakefront and 25-foot side yard setbacks have created a situation where developers, in city planner Gerry Harsch's words, can only build on a "seven-foot string of land."

Waterfront asked and were promptly denied variances on the restrictions, failing to meet the qualifying criteria.

The Coast Guard currently has a clear view down on Lake Charlevoix and chief Maneul Travers cited its importance in faster response to dangers and weather tracking.

Mt. McSauba hosts annual Sno Challenge

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Let the fireworks fly.

Charlevoix's Sno Challenge will proceed as planned.

City recreation director, Dwight "Ike" Boss, and the many volunteers that it takes to put on the winter bash are busy with final preparations for the event that will occupy Mt. McSauba with beefed up trucks, snowmobiles, skiers and snowboarders Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 15 and 16.

An ongoing court case involving an 1992 ski injury at the hill threatened the annual festival as both Boss and his nephew Dale "Bo" Boss, Jr., found themselves sitting in court during a 12-day jury trial. The city-owned facility was temporarily shut down because of a lack of time to daily prepare the ski hills and check equipment, Ike Boss said.

However, Bo Boss will be working seemingly endless days and nights to prepare the hills for the Sno Challenge, and the celebration of Mt. McSauba's 40th birthday.

"He will hardly be getting any sleep between this weekend and next weekend to pull this off," Ike Boss said.

Countless volunteers are also finalizing plans for two days worth of events and a fireworks display almost twice the size set off for last summer's Venetian Festival.

Four main groups pitch in to organize the snowmobile races, truck climbs, thunder tubing and concessions.

"We almost gave up three years ago because it became so overwhelming for our staff to run it," Boss said.

Overwhelming could be defined by races that fill an entire weekend and truck clubs from Indiana and Wisconsin planning to bring up to 200 trucks and their teams into Charlevoix.

Community lawsuit costs more than dollar amounts

EDITORIAL

Even when the verdict for the lawsuit between two Charlevoix families is read, there will be no winners.

Tom and Sally Sikavitsas are suing Dwight "Ike" Boss and Dale "Bo" Boss, Jr. for alleged gross negligence in operation of Mt. McSauba and in responding to the skiing accident their 6-year-old son had in 1992.

Charlevoix residents are battling it out before six jurors in a trial that's scheduled to last until Thursday, Feb. 20. Attorneys for the Sikavitsas are using colorful words to paint a picture of the Bosses as untrained, uncaring men. Lawyers for the defense are calling and cross examining witnesses to show that the 11-year-old boy was not additionally harmed by the actions of the city employees.

In all that's happening, there's only one consolation. At least the community as a whole hasn't been made a victim by the cancellation of the annual Sno Challenge. This would have denied business owners the winter economic boost they are due. Outdoor enthusiasts who compete in the numerous races each year would have gone without. And the firefighters' fund-raiser of selling concessions at the winter festival would have left their coffers the same.

However, there are more victims than one first realizes in a case like this. Regardless of what is read after the jurors deliberate, everyone involved has lost something that's far more valuable than money.

Bo and Ike Boss stand to have their reputations permanently damaged. They have each committed more than 16 years spending cold winter nights at a ski hill that is invaded by rowdy kids who have yet to find fear. Ike has dedicated his life to teaching students and coaching athletes.

The Bosses are covered by city insurance. But that insurance can't reach into their lives and return two years worth of living on the edge since the complaint was filed and the case arrived in the courtroom.

Even if they are found innocent, the Bosses will have endured a draining battle that involved more than a local family.

Tom and Sally Sikavitsas are losing the respect of the community as they charged ahead with allegations that turn the blame for a horrible accident on the men who run Charlevoix's main winter attraction.

Even the attorneys will suffer, even after billable hours are collected. Some of them live in this small town, too. And they will live with severed relationships from those who didn't believe in their stand.

Amid all the loss, there is one thing every person involved in the case stands to gain — a seed of bitterness, which has already grown into a root called blame that is cutting through alternative solutions, small-town friendliness and courtesy.

Letters to the editor

Parents should examine where they cast blame

Editor:

After reading the articles in the newspaper regarding the accident at Mt. McSauba, one question sticks in my mind — where were this child's parents? It seems Mom and Dad have held everyone accountable for their actions except themselves!

They have placed blame on the City of Charlevoix, the Boss Family, even the other young skier involved. All of these parties are accused of being negligent. But the true negligence falls with the parents.

After skiing night after night at Mt. McSauba, it is easily ascertained that Bo and Ike Boss (or any other staff member for that matter) have only the skiers' best interest at heart. But as they are not this child's primary care giver, I can certainly understand how they might not have realized the seriousness of his injury. Nobody knows a child like his parent. Indeed if Mom and/or Dad had been at the ski hill that night, they could have realized that in fact their child needed immediate professional attention and sought care immediately.

I am unfamiliar with all of the laws regarding liability in instances like this. However, I am familiar with the unwritten laws of parenting, and I truly believe that the wrong people are being put on trial!

Student spells out reasons for McSauba to operate

Editor:

Mt. McSauba should stay open for three good reasons.

1. The other ski mountains (Nub's Nob, Boyne Mt., ect.) are just too far away. Also the price they charge may be too high for some people.

2. The Sno Challenge is a big thing for some people. They enjoy watching kids ski in the races or watching fireworks and trucks race up the hill. Even some people come from different places to watch the Sno Challenge.

3. Money will be lost for the city and parents who have kids renting or taking lessons. They are paying for the rentals or lessons even though their kids are not there.

Also the parents should be held responsible for watching their own kids, especially if they are young.

Sincerely,
Erika Loucks, 6th grade

know that without the support of the membership, especially Eugene Tower, president, there would have been little chance for two young men from a small town in northern Michigan to be given much consideration, in spite of their qualifications.

I guess that my question is why doesn't the Belvedere Club get credit for putting their hearts and money towards the betterment of Charlevoix? Does the anti-Belvedere attitude still exist?

Consider why the no votes prevail

Editor:

As a taxpayer and as one who has the best education of our children as a priority, I have to respond to the commentaries of all who have repeatedly voted "NO" on school issues.

I taught first grade in the middle school from 1955-1966. I was a Reading Specialist in the brand new Elementary School from 1966-73. In 1996, I went to some of the meetings provided by the superintendent and school board for the public to discuss school needs, ideas and proposals. These were responded to by architectural, engineering and construction experts. I have talked to many people during the past year and find the following reasons are why we have "No" voters:

1) Dislike of the superintendent. "I will not vote "Yes" until the present one is out and gone." I do not know what your personal relationships are with Roberta Jackson, but no one can fault her for the way she provided us with an excellent plan for our children. The community had ample opportunity to learn of the need in 1996 and present their pros and cons then. Are we having difficulty accepting our first female superintendent?

2) "Ivy League Schools don't tear down old buildings." Of course not, but their alumni are the first to reach into their pockets and insist that their students have the best new buildings, facilities and faculties. The older buildings are converted into libraries, museums, and other suitable uses. I know because my son is a professor at one.

3) "The previous teacher, guidance counselor, or principal didn't teach or treat my child properly." Many of these people have been dead for years and your children are doing all right. Is this just an excuse?

4) "The board didn't create a sinking fund." The board did have a sinking fund and managed it wisely by coming up with a plan that will give Charlevoix children the best possible education. The real estate the middle school sits on will be worth several millions for condos, offices, or businesses and the money can go to offset the cost of the new school.

This could be viewed as a fat sinking fund. Our architects and engineers have looked at possible ways to expand and remodel the middle school, and have said repeatedly that remodeling is more expensive than building new.

5) In spite of everything you hear over and over again "The middle school can be remodeled." I haven't taught in that school for over 35 years and here are some of the problems that still persist today and did not meet state regulations even then.

a) For 41 years there has been a crack in the cement and tile floor between the two floors. Three to five hundred children running and jumping on the second floor puts a strain on the building that 12 to 15 people in an office or condo would not.

b) How would you like to teach in a first floor classroom when 30 or more pupils in the room directly above you are scraping their chairs and walking around and there is no soundproofing between the two floors?

c) The play space is terribly inadequate, and still would be even if you tore down the two adjacent houses. It is also very dangerous. All morning delivery trucks whirl in and out of the playground, delivering milk and groceries for the cafeteria. Children, intent on their games have been protected so far from serious injury thanks to teachers.

d) The band room is completely under the gym. There is no window or outside light and no ventilation. Seventy five to 100 children huffing and puffing on their instruments pass their cold and flu germs at an alarming rate. Inadequately built, their ears are at risk, too. The teacher's health also shares these hazards. How can we keep excellent professionals in a situation like this?

e) Portable classrooms have been the only place some teachers have taught for 23 years. I don't know how we have been able to keep good teachers there, but we have. The children rush outdoors in rain and zero degrees and roast in the warm days. I don't want any more of my tax dollars going into portables or underground caves.

The middle school has bright commercial possibilities but the best architectural minds have told us it is cheaper to build new than to bring this building to acceptable standards.

6) For the people who come to Charlevoix only in summer, I understand their vote. It's tough to pay school taxes in two places, especially when you probably have no children in the Charlevoix schools or your other place of residence. We used to have two homes and we had to choose, and we chose Charlevoix. Florida and Arizona taxes for schools are much less. The educational status of their schools and students is much less, too. However, Charlevoix has torn down Parkside at a cost of $500,000 and two blocks farther down on Bridge Street has paid $5,000,000 to $6,000,000 to make another park "for a better glimpse of Round Lake." This will make your time here more enjoyable. Round Lake is a treasure, but our greatest treasure is our children. Pretend your school tax helps us make Charlevoix more beautiful for you — it does!

7) "School taxes are too high." If Charlevoix could retain the taxes it collects, our situation would be very different. Your quarrel is with Gov. Engler and the state legislature — not the school board. Our school millage monies go straight to Lansing and are pro-rated over every child in the state of Michigan. Charlevoix gets less than it collects.

8) Finally, our superintendent and school board have brought us the best and least expensive solution for our school needs. They are better qualified to do this than newspaper critics. Critics didn't take on the responsibility to run for the school board or were defeated at election time. We elected them. We gave them the responsibility. Now let's get behind them and carry out their plans — that's democracy!

Someone voted and paid for your education and mine, and they didn't have Social Security to help either.

There is an old Chinese saying, "If your plan is for one year plant rice, for 10 years plant trees, for 100 years educate men." Kuan'tze

Please rethink your priorities and vote "YES".

Respectfully submitted,
Esther F. Bleha

EDITH

EDITH GILBERT

My questions to you is simply this. Do you think life has become smoother in this electronic age? Or was life simpler before Alexander Graham Bell asked Watson to come here?

Former Charlevoix resident, Jean Griffin, writes from Quincy, Penn., "I am computer illiterate, so I skip the Cyberscope page in Newsweek that deals with Internet, and I don't know a PC from an OCR, so I can't carry on an intelligent conversation with our computer-programmer son-in-law."

Still she wonders, "whatever happened to the time when a hard drive was the commuting distance into town? An Apple was to eat, preferably a Macintosh; and if you bit off more than you could chew, that was megabyte! To be IBM compatible meant to get along with infants, brothers and mothers-in-law, and a megahertz was an "owie" requiring a giant-size Band-Aid. I remember when a ram was a male sheep, or a sign in the zodiac; and chips used to go with fish.

A mouse was to catch and the trap did the clicking, not the mouse. A pentium is the precursor of the Pentagon for all I know, and I thought a Web and Net were for snaring bugs and butterflies. An Anti-virus program, to my way of thinking, consisted of inoculations against a human epidemic, not a rescue disc for endangered files. I considered hardware to include hammer, nails and cup-hooks; and 486 was our area code at one time."

She writes with good cheer that many of life's "Windows" have opened and shut since she and Ray left Charlevoix.

Another senior citizen and long-time resident, Susan Boal, suggests I share "A Look Back At Christmas" with my readers. She adds, light heartedly, that the list for Santa Claus was "put together by one of my high school chums, for heaven sakes!"

This chum suggests various methods of contact: International mail, E-mail, voice mail, fax, Internet page, telephone, cellular phone, megaphone, pager and Indian smoke signals.

She writes, "I chose to call him (Santa) on the telephone, not knowing how he was equipped, but thinking he must surely have one. E-mail was overloaded. My pager is not two-way. He really doesn't have a post office; that's just kid stuff."

She's told, "We're sorry! Your call did not go through. Would you please try your call again?" (Buzz, buzz, buzz, busy).

"We're sorry! Your call cannot be completed. Please check the number and re-dial." (Heck, I just did! Buzz, buzz, buzz, busy).

"You have reached the North Pole. Please hold. (Music, Jingle Bells).

"All of our representatives are busy. Please stay on the line. Your call will be answered in the order received. (Music, Silent Night).

"Your call is important to us. It will be assisted by the next available representative." (Very long wait).

"Thank you for calling Santa. Please select from the following options, or hold for operator elf assistance."

"If you know the extension, please enter it now. Push one for toys. Push two for sleigh departure and arrival times. To repeat this message push star. For further assistance, please hold. (Music, Rudolph the Red-nosed Reindeer).

"Thank you for calling Santa. If you have a touch tone phone, please enter your social security number and your zip code. Thank you. How may I help you?"

"I have a request for Santa, please, and I have been a good boy all year. May I speak to him personally?"

"Santa is very busy at this time, as you will understand. He is supervising his workers in the toy shop, and must soon feed and harness his reindeer. May I take your message? Pause. I'm sorry, my pen is frozen. Please wait. There is no one else available to come to the phone at this time. Please wait for the beep and record your message. Zing. Zing. Zing. BEEP."

Would that Santa could give us back those good old days when our local telephone operator, Maude, would tell us what movie was playing at the local theater, who's barn was on fire, and what the score was of the high school basketball team!

1. Goes into more Charlevoix homes than any other newspaper?
2. Supports the community editorially?
3. Provides a forum for citizens to express their views?
4. Documents the history of the community?
5. Provides glimpses into our community's past each week?
6. Is the only newspaper devoted to the interests of the Charlevoix community?
7. Provides in-depth reporting of local issues?
8. Has served the community for over 110 years?

If you answered "Charlevoix Courier" to all eight questions you scored 100%. The Charlevoix Courier does all of these and is proud of its tradition of service to the community. We, at the Courier, know the importance of a community having its own newspaper and we will continue to serve the area.

Engagement

Sutton-Wurst

Deborah Sue Sutton and Randall Wyatt Wurst announce their engagement. A May 31, 1997, wedding is planned at the Community Church of God in Charlevoix.

Deborah is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sutton, of Charlevoix. Randall is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bergmann, of Charlevoix, and Mr. and Mrs. Donald Wurst of Petoskey.

A graduate of Charlevoix High School, Deborah is also a graduate of the Petoskey Beauty Academy and is employed at Buday's Sound Advice in Charlevoix.

Randall is a graduate of Charlevoix High School and Lake Superior State University. He is employed with the city of Charlevoix.

Performing arts group gets standing ovation at competition

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Everything but points fell into place for Charlevoix's performing arts team when it competed in the regional tournament Saturday in St. Johns.

"The performance was perfect, we got a standing ovation," coach Connie Ford said. "We got the best response from an audience since we started, then it was like 'oh, what happened?'"

Scoring 242 out of a possible 300 points, the crew missed advancing to the state meet. Only St. John's High School scored high enough to advance.

Ford seemed puzzled as to exactly what the Rayders were marked down on, but as far as performing a play in front of an audience, they could not have done better.

"I wish we had a tape of it, so the kids could see how well they did," she said.

Performing "Do Patent Leather Shoes Really Reflect Up?" the Rayders did score a handful of individual honors.

Nicholas Bogart and Kelli Skiba won superiors for directing; Heather Gotshall won excellence for assistant directing; Becky Blissett earned superior in music; Jess Wood a superior in choreography; and Kari Jo Boss won a superior in acting.

Boss's superior is just one of eight individual acting awards handed out. This seemed a bit odd to Ford.

"It became a technical meet, rather than a show meet," she said.

Despite not advancing, the weekend proved both educational and entertaining as the students from Charlevoix were able to be in the audience for every other school's play except for the one staged just before theirs.

"It's part of the program to see and learn what others are doing, it's just as important to be part of the audience," Ford said. "This weekend was more than being an actor or a technical person. It's an evaluation to see what other schools are doing."

The crew will give public performances of their play Saturday and Sunday, March 1 and 2, at the Charlevoix High School gymnasium.

Hundreds of trucks join challenge

According to Ike Boss, this is the only race of its kind in the United States.

"You just don't go out in the middle of the field and do it," Boss said, noting the need to groom in tracks and be prepared to get trucks off the hill if they break down.

Although the festival isn't a money maker for the City of Charlevoix, it does inject finances into area businesses during the off season.

"It's an important shot into the economy," Boss said.

In addition to the annual events, Mt. McSauba is being remembered for its early beginning. It opened in 1956 and was the first resort in Michigan to offer lighted night skiing. McSauba will host the two-day festival, that's once again grown beyond what one day can take.

"It's gotten so big that we just can't do it all in one day," he said. "It's kind of like sunshine in the middle of the dreary winter. The fireworks are the sunshine."

This Blue Heron has found a place of rest within the St. Clair Lake-Six Mile Lake Natural Area. The 10.8 acre area could be named the Blue Flag Iris Preserve.

Natural area to be named after Iris

The one-quarter mile of river frontage on St. Clair Lake-Six Mile Lake, in South Arm Township, could be named the Blue Flag Iris Preserve.

The natural area is one of the longest undeveloped stretches in the 56-mile Chain of Lakes, which includes Ellsworth, Six Mile, Torch, Bellaire, Elk Lakes and finally empties into Lake Michigan at Elk Rapids.

Although no formal name has been selected, a committee in charge of raising money to pay for the property is considering naming the preserve after the Blue Flag Iris because of the abundance of the flower in late June.

A recent purchase agreement with Grand Traverse Regional Land Conservancy and long-time Ellsworth business, Drenth Brothers, Inc., brings 1,350 feet of river frontage and adjoining land totalling 10.8 acres into the preserve plan.

The three-year purchase agreement will be closed in Oct. 2000.

The area is a "nature's lover's paradise," according to JoAnne Beemon, head of the natural area committee.

"Our committee refers to this new property as the Blue Flag Iris Preserve, since they grow there in such abundance, and they're so striking against mature cedars along the shore," she said.

The small group of environmentalists has so far saved 156 acres of Upper Chain of Lakes wilderness from encroaching development.

The newest acquisition is home to a natural spring that bubbles out of the ground, and a popular habitat for green and blue herons, ducks, and grebes, Beemon said.

The effort to retail the natural area began in 1991, with the focus being the Sinclair River — a winding waterway that joins the lakes for which the preserve is named.

St. Clair and Six Mile lakes are two of the northern most links in the Upper Chain of Lakes, which is connected where it loops into the southwest corner of Charlevoix County.

The effort is far reaching.

"This is an important step in ensuring the integrity of the wetlands and shoreline system, and that helps protect water quality throughout the entire chain," said Douglas Koop, Grand Traverse conservancy director.

Donations to the preserve should he earmarked for the SCL-SML Natural Area and mailed to the Grand Traverse Regional Land Conservancy at 624 Third St., Traverse City, Mich., 49684.

For more information, call JoAnne Beemon at 547-4820 or Doug Koop at (616) 929-7911.

Bernadina Chemello

Bernadina Chemello, 92, of Charlevoix, died Feb. 5, 1997, at Boulder Park Terrace Nursing Home in Charlevoix.

Funeral was 11 a.m. Monday, Feb. 10, at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Charlevoix. The Rev. Thomas Neis officiated. Burial will be in Norwood Cemetery.

Mrs. Chemello was born Feb. 22, 1904, in Sanzenone, Italy, the daughter of Pietro Delgrandis and Giuditta Pellizzari.

She moved to Canada from Italy. She lived in Chicago, Ill., and then in Northville for nine years. For the past 23 years, she made her home in Charlevoix.

In 1922, she married Giuseppe Chemello in Sanzenone Italy. He preceded her in death in 1941.

Mrs. Chemello was a member of St. Mary's Catholic Church in Charlevoix. She loved the north country, especially Charlevoix, and enjoyed flowers and gardening.

Survivors include three daughters, Elsa Guidi and her husband, Luigi, of Charlevoix, Marcella Kroonzi and her husband, Garry, of Novi, and Angel Niemen and her husband, Mike, of Troy; and four sons, Sam Chemello and his wife, Carol, of Livonia, Luigi Chemello and his wife, Olivia, of Phoenix, Ariz., Joe Chemello and his wife, Anita, of Killen, Ala., and Guy Chemello and his wife, Zita, of Livonia. Mrs. Chemello is also survived by 20 grandchildren and 17 great-grandchildren.

The family suggests memorial contributions be made to the Charlevoix Area Hospital. Envelopes for memorials are available at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix, where visitation was held from 9-10:30 a.m. Monday, Feb. 10.

Victor G. Spaniolo

Victor G. Spaniolo, 80, a retired newspaper publisher, died Feb. 5 in South Bend, Ind., of leukemia.

Mr. Spaniolo, who devoted most of his career to editing and publishing newspapers in Michigan, retired from the newspaper business in 1972 after serving as general manager of the Niles Daily Star.

Born in Charlotte, Mich., Mr. Spaniolo was the sixth of nine children of Italian American parents who immigrated to the U.S. in 1900 from southern Italy. For many years, the family operated a fruit and produce business in Charlotte and Lansing.

His newspaper career began following graduation from Michigan State College in 1939, where he had been a campus correspondent for the Detroit Free Press. After serving for a year as graduate manager of The State News, the Michigan State student newspaper, he joined the Michigan Farmer in Detroit in 1940 and later worked briefly for the Big Rapids Pioneer. From there he moved to Port Huron in 1941 where he was a general assignment reporter at the Times Herald. In subsequent years he was state editor at the Muskegon Chronicle, the managing editor of the Greenville Daily News and a reporter for the Battle Creek Enquirer.

In 1949, he purchased the Charlevoix Courier, which he published until 1952 when he and his younger brother James W. acquired and became co-publishers of the Cassopolis Vigilant. During the 17 years in which they published the Vigilant, the newspaper became one of the most successful small weeklies in the state. In 1958, they also acquired the Edwardsburg Argus.

As a weekly newspaper publisher, Mr. Spaniolo was well known for his strong support of his community, including the local schools. In 1969, the Vigilant and Argus were acquired by the Niles Daily Star, and Mr. Spaniolo was asked to assume responsibility for both his former newspapers as well as the Daily Star. Throughout his publishing career, he also was an active member of the Michigan Press Association.

Following retirement, Mr. Spaniolo was involved in a number of community and commercial projects. He was also a founding member and later chair of the Board of Directors of The State news at Michigan State University. In addition, for more than a decade he served as the chair of the Board of Directors of Westgate, a mental health facility located near Cassopolis.

Although he was diagnosed with chronic leukemia in 1983, he maintained an active schedule until the last few months.

He is survived by his wife of 53 years, Eleanor Fox Spaniolo as well as two sons, James D. of East Lansing; Thomas of Dallas, Texas, and two daughters, Margaret of New York City; and Virginia of St. Paul, Minn., and four grandchildren.

He also is survived by two brothers, Michael of Lansing and James W. of Holt, and two sisters, Lena of Grand Rapids and Virginia of Muskegon.

Deeply devoted to his family to whom he was a prolific letter-writer, he cherished his Italian heritage and had a life-long love of newspapers.

In lieu of flowers, the family asks that contributions be made to the Children's Leukemia Foundation of Michigan (Southfield, Michigan) or the Victor G. Spaniolo Journalism Scholarship Fund at Michigan State University.

The public is welcome to attend.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By Dale Ostema
Charlevoix and Greensky Hill
United Methodist Churches

What is one of the greatest obstacles seekers find when it comes to believing in God? Certainly high on anyone's list would be any real or perceived disunity among believers.

I am reminded of the story of two porcupines who found themselves in a blizzard and tried to huddle to keep warm. But because they were pricked by each other's quills, they moved apart. Soon they were shivering again and had to lie side by side once more for their survival. They needed each other, even though they needled each other.

We are all, from time to time, guilty of needling each other while forgetting that we need each other. The church, like any other body, is not immune to that problem. Jesus' prayer for his disciples was that "they all might be one" (John 17:21). This "oneness" is love which is bigger than anything that might divide us. We give thanks for a God who helps us know that love in all its fullness. How else can such a diverse body as the church even have a chance of unity?

With all of this in mind, I invite you to the Service of Prayer and Unity at St. Mary's Church this Sunday evening at 6 p.m. Sponsored by the Charlevoix Ministerial Association, this is a time to celebrate the blessing of loving and being loved by the same gracious Lord and God.

Zoning board of appeals denial questioned in circuit court

A house and the coast guard as next-door neighbors may not be a good match.

"We tend to make a little bit of racket," he said.

Instead of bowing to the decision of the city's zoning board of appeals, Waterfront has taken the issue to court. It is appealing the case in circuit court, where action is pending.

Charlevoix mayor, Josh Barnes, has offered an alternative solution: Sell the land to the city for a park.

Many specifics must fall into place, however, before a new park is christened. Residents shouldn't expect to visit a park this summer.

For starters, the courts could overrule the zoning board of appeals and grant Waterfront the variances. Barnes would be shocked if that happened.

"They would need variances on every single side except on the north, and I can not picture that happening," he said.

Should litigation continue throughout the judicial system, Waterfront may not want to sell anything, however, according to Richard Joseph, attorney for the developers, a sale appears likely.

"We are happy to work with the city to enable them to acquire this piece of property," he said.

The land could be paid for through a matching grant provided by the Michigan Trust Fund, money the DNR collects from oil drilling in the Pigeon River State Forest. It can only be used to fund grants to improve and buy land for recreational purposes.

In order for Charlevoix to qualify, they would have to revise their recreational plan. The potential to purchase this piece of property is being added to the plan, which was due to be updated anyway. City council has approved the updating of the plan.

Before the grant could be approved, foundation would send an appraiser to value the land at a cost which would both be covered by the grant and suitable to the seller.

"Recreation and tourism is big business for this community," Harsch said, noting its value.

Barnes and Harsch offered little specifics on what kind of park the land might become, other than that it would not be much more than a place to fish, picnic and just enjoy the view.

"To watch boats, this is the ideal place," Barnes said, while taking the time to explain why the city's best interest lies in having this land as a municipal park.

"Everyone today, from the U.S. government to Charlevoix, sees why we should keep lakefront open to the public," he said. "Access must be provided."

Planners consider Urban Sprawl

would duplicate the services already offered in town. Also, with a historical site like Castle Farm across the street, a strip mall would be a "blatant misuse of that land" and a detraction from the Castle's value.

County planner, Larry Sullivan, recommended that the board not back the rezoning. Of the reasons he listed, the planners stood by five of them and voted against changing the approved use of the parking lot. Officially, the request was turned down because:

— Adequate commercial zoning exists in Marion Township, and although the land is used for commercial purposes, it can be proven under utilized.

— Neither the property proposed for rezoning nor the property located in the general area is well suited for an on-site septic system.

— Rezoning the property to commercial would promote further strip development, which is not envisioned as the type of development desired by planners for the county.

— "Extending sewer to this area would further encourage and perpetuate urban sprawl," and — Marion Township does contain an area zoned marine industrial and additional uses should be located in that area.

"That whole 1,069- by 400-foot area could be completely covered by a building," said county planner, Sandra Stanley. "It could be one huge mall."

Hoskins expands to handle sister plant's business

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Mark Willet, Hoskins Manufacturing Co.'s plant manager, needs some elbow room.

"Right now, we're all tripping over ourselves," he said, during a plant tour. He won't have to wait much longer for more space, as Hoskins is undergoing a major renovation that will add on 28,000 square feet of manufacturing space.

Hoskins' face-lift was actually a two-step process. The first part was an increase of 3,600 square feet of office space. Willet and other company executives have already set up shop in their new offices and await completion of the manufacturing expansion.

Willet expects the new space to be up and running within six weeks.

The added space will go a long way in improving the reach of Hoskins, a company whose business focuses on heat resisting wire, ribbons, coils, and heat controlling thermacouples that bring them clients such as Rival Cookware, Honeywell, Champion Sparkplug, and Toastmaster/Toastwell.

"The element that glows when you run your toaster," Willet pointed out, "there's a 90 percent chance that's our material."

Already able to produce 20-30,000 pounds of finished goods a week, by springtime Hoskins, according to Willet, will be able to more than double its output. The increased production with new equipment has brought a new efficiency and self-sufficiency to the company.

"We used to depend on our other plants, but now in Charlevoix we will be a complete stand-alone facility," Willet said.

In the past, a Hoskins product made in Charlevoix would, for a variety of production reasons, need to be shipped to plants in Mio, and New Paris, Ind., for completion. However, the New Paris plant will be closing (a major spur in the saddle for Hoskins Charlevoix to expand). With the added space and equipment in Charlevoix, products no longer will be shipped around the Midwest for completion.

"The trucking part was killing us, our products had more miles on it than anything else," Willet said. "Now we do it straight from here with no trucking."

There is another benefit to the changes at Hoskins. In order for Hoskins' products to shine, a process called acid pickling was used to scour off acids that blackened the product. This was either done in Mio or New Paris. But two new, more high-tech furnaces enable products to reach their metallic shine without leaving the Charlevoix plant, and also without using the acid-pickling technique and the dangerous acids that go along with it.

"By eliminating the acids, we're getting rid of not only a high-cost step but are becoming a lot more environmentally safe which is what we are after." Willet said.

Top O'Michigan gets board member

William E. Korthase of Boyne City has been appointed by the Board of Directors of Top O' Michigan Electric Co. to fill the director vacancy created by the death of his father, William G. Korthase.

William G. Korthase, also of Boyne City, was a dairy farmer who served as a Top O' Michigan director for 15 years before dying of cancer Aug. 16, 1996. His death came just a few days after he was re-elected to another three-year term on the board.

His son, William E. Korthase, was appointed to serve until August 9, 1997, when the electric cooperative's customer-owners will vote at their annual business meeting to elect a director to fill the two-year unexpired term.

"I am very excited about the opportunity to serve on the board and represent the members of Top O' Michigan," Korthase said.

William E. Korthase operates insurance agencies in East Jordan and Boyne City. He is president of the East Jordan Rotary and the Boyne City Foundation for Educational Excellence.

Korthase was raised on the family farm on Korthase Road in Charlevoix County. He graduated from Boyne City High School and attended North Central Michigan College in Petoskey until he started work as a tree-trimmer for Consumers Power Co. In 1974, he started Korthase Tree Service, Inc., which was chiefly engaged in clearing right of ways for Top O' Michigan and its wholesaler, Northern Michigan Electric Cooperative (Northern later merged with another generation and transmission cooperative to become Wolverine Power Supply Cooperative). He sold his tree service in 1979 and became manager and part owner of Boyne City Lanes.

In 1984, he sold his interest in the bowling alley and started an insurance business in East Jordan. In 1992, he purchased the East Jordan Agency and, in 1995, purchased an insurance agency in Boyne City.

William E. Korthase

Korthase and his wife, Debbie, have two daughters. Andrea attends the University of Michigan and Brianne is a junior at Boyne City High School.

Up in FLAMES: Local landmark a total loss

(Right) An aerial truck was called in from Petoskey to ventilate the roof. Smoke billows out of the sky lights in the greenhouse area as the fire moves up the house toward Burns Street.

Petoskey Avenue fire destroys floral shop

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

D'Ann Rothenberger isn't an ambulance chaser. But when she heard that "Grandpa's house" was aflame, she drove to the corner of Petoskey Avenue and Burns Street.

Expressions Unlimited, a business now operated out of the house, was fully engulfed in flames Tuesday at 306 Petoskey Ave. as Rothenberger watched the long-time Charlevoix house go.

"It's sad," she said, "but it looks so much different now."

> "I just don't want to see it tomorrow. That's when it's most sad."
> — D'Ann Rothenberger

Many people have owned the home since Dan Schwartz, Rothenberger's grandfather, lived there. And many more gathered along the streets to watch firefighters do their jobs.

The fire was reported at 8:30 a.m., about 20 minutes after the owner, Ron Taepke, left to make a flower delivery.

Nobody else was home, fire chief Doug Carver said.

The fire started in the basement and moved to a work area in the back part of the main floor, Carver said. The department is still investigating the cause of the fire.

Before the roof caved in, volunteers were in the upstairs with hoses while Petoskey's aerial truck sprayed water from overhead. The ladder truck was originally called in to cut a hole in the roof for ventilation, however, by the time it arrived from the neighboring town, the roof was too unsafe for that strategy.

Don Meggison, city councilmember and former volunteer firefighter, watched as the colorful smoke told him of the house's condition.

"That's the color of the stuff you want to see," he said, pointing toward white billows. "That means it's got water on it. Yellow means it's hot, ready to go."

About 30 firefighters from the City of Charlevoix, Charlevoix Township and Petoskey worked to contain the flames. Carver estimated that 50,000 gallons of water was used to douse the fire. The last flame flickered out about 11 a.m.

There were no injuries from fighting the flames. And firefighters remained at the business until late Tuesday cleaning up and watching for a restart.

The building is a total loss.

"I just don't want to see it tomorrow," Rothenberger said. "That's when it's most sad."

School employees respond to belt tightening and fewer jobs

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Like a moving art gallery, the superintendent's proposed budget was paraded to staffs of all three district schools last week.

The presentations were informal question and answer sessions, with district treasurer Judy Boss on hand to address concerns.

The top concern revolved around the budgets calling for a reduction in seven district employees, three to be faculty members. It is hoped that the remaining reductions will be made through 12 retirements foreseen in the next five years.

"The teachers didn't care for that, nobody likes to cut personnel," middle school principal, Dennis VanGuilder, said. "Is there a way we can do this without cutting staff? They're the ones who interact with the kids."

However, Boss explained that with declining student enrollment, the district has to do long range planning in regard to staff and has issued a challenge to each teacher, "to take a look and see what they can do differently with resources available to them."

She did say that the district is not amid a budget crisis, but that a foreseeable one can be avoided with proper planning. The school still has more than $1 million in its coffers.

"This is not a crisis, but it will be in three years," she said. "It is our responsibility to keep Charlevoix schools financially sound, that's why we look at it beyond just one year."

VanGuilder's school seems primed to take the largest hits in this plan. Across the board, a 10 percent cut in funds for supplies, textbooks, and other materials is in the works. The middle school will see an additional 15 percent hacked out because they've experienced the highest loss of students, about 40 in the past year.

VanGuilder likened the cuts to "telling a kid he can't have candy because supper is coming."

While making the point that "we're all in this together, we're a K-12," VanGuilder wants more information to prove to him that his building deserves the extra slashing. He would like to see a breakdown of how much it costs to educate a single student in each of the schools.

"Does a high school student cost more to educate because it's a higher powered curriculum or is it the other way around because more supervision might be needed at an elementary school?" he asked. "Whenever there is a budget crunch and you've got to make cuts, you don't want to look at the other buildings, but you can hardly help it."

High school principal, Gary Grundman, acknowledged the proposed cuts in supplies, but said he would work to make sure whatever tools are needed to educate students still remain available. That might lead to not being able to take a field trip or attend a conference.

"We will not short-change the programs, he said. "Our instructional programs come first."

High school classes are not expected to be cut altogether, however, sections may be axed.

At the elementary school, direct thoughts about the budget were less an issue than a reiteration that class sizes be reduced.

Principal, Dick Swenor is pleased the school board is "gearing their thoughts" to keeping a teacher to student ratios at 1:20 for kindergarten through second-grade and 1:25 for grades 3-12.

He said shrewd and creative decisions will have to be made in the next few years to continue to improve education with the tight-belted budget.

"The budget is pretty much saturated," he said.

A public hearing has been scheduled for Monday Feb. 17 to further bat around ideas on the budget, this time in front of the board of education. A final vote to adopt the budget is expected on Monday March 3.

Long zoning battle in Hayes ends

New owner vows to work with officials

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

A truce between Dunmaglas Developing Co. and Hayes Township has been reached over how to zone the more than 800 acres adjacent to the Dunmaglas Golf Course.

Like most truces, this one was reached only after third-party intervention with both sides making concessions.

The Michigan Supreme Court declined, in a September ruling, to hear the township's appeal on a state court of appeals decision that their zoning ordinances were unconstitutional.

"Some of the people will still be upset, but there's not a heck of a lot we can do about it," said township clerk Ethel Knepp. Results of the ruling have not been announced outside brief references at township meetings.

"The Supreme Court spoke," Knepp said, noting that there's been no need for lengthy discussion.

According to township zoning ordinances, land classified as agricultural must have a minimum lot size of 10 acres for a single-family homes.

On Aug. 6, 1989, Hayes Township board granted Scots Venture's (then owner of land in question) its request that the land be rezoned rural residential. Under this classification the minimum lot size would be five acres.

Voters said not so fast. In November of that year, they passed a referendum hy a vote of 307 to 219 to reject the reclassification.

"We felt the people had spoken, so we backed them up," Knepp said. So did a circuit court ruling, but the court of appeals saw it differently.

Voting to reverse 2 to 1, the court claimed that "in the factual context of this case," the 10-acre requirement was unconstitutional, noting that 100 acres nearby are used for a golf course.

"They said it wasn't used for farming, which it wasn't because Scots Ventures purchased it and put the golf course in," Knepp said. "I didn't see that as reasonable justification."

Knepp said the ordinance's purpose is not to preserve farmland, but the rural character of the community. The dissenting judge backed her up.

Justice Richard Allen Griffin wrote, "the agreed upon purpose of the zoning classification is to preserve the area's rural character, not necessarily farmland."

The judges overturning the referendum questioned the township's motives.

"The township's interest in preserving farmland is more accurately characterized as an interest in preventing further development," claiming that their real intentions were simply "aesthetics," and "a desire to exclude new homeowners from the township."

"I was offended by that," Knepp said.

In theory because of the ruling, the township has no zoning ordinance for the property, and Michael Pung, lead developer for Dunmaglas, has met with both the township planning commission and zoning board to discuss what they would like to see him do.

"I went away with a clear message," he said. "They want clustering, and I want clustering, too."

Expect to see multiple units within five acre tracts. Pung foresees this being done in the forms of cottages, townhouses and duplex units.

"Clustering will leave as much land as possible undisturbed," he said.

Pung, whose group purchased the property from a lawsuit-worn Scots Ventures 14 months ago, waited to make plans for the land until the court battle ended. For now, he plans to just build a small group of cottages next to the restaurant and golf pro-shop.

This plan was approved 5-0 by the township planning commission. Pung expects to begin the project after the weather breaks.

"This coming summer we will look around and turn our ideas into plans," he said.

The Cub Scouts held a flag ceremony during halftime at the Feb. 4 home basketball game in honor of National Cub Scout Week, Sunday-Saturday, Feb. 2-8. One pack and two troops participated in the ceremony. Holding the flags are (from left) Cody McCary, of Troop 6; Thomas Fisher, of Troop 16; and John Wilkinsen, Thomas Wilhelm and Caleb McCary, all of Pack 11.

Foundation awards youth grants

When members of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation Youth Advisory Committee conducted a survey last year to learn about local teen concerns, two key messages were heard.

High school and middle school students throughout Charlevoix County want more wholesome recreational programs, and they worry about drug and alcohol use among their peers.

Now, the Community Foundation's youth committee is tackling those issues head on.

Five grants were recently approved by the youth group, several of them in support of programs that address recreation, enrichment or substance abuse needs.

— The Bay Area Substance Education Service (B.A.S.E.S.) will receive $3,500 to create a collection of real-life accounts written by several of this area's young, recovering substance abusers to be used as a resource for parents, counselors and teens.

— Top of Michigan Trails Council was awarded $3,750 to develop recreational trails through parts of Charlevoix County that will link with the council's 127-mile northern Michigan system.

— Raven Hill Discovery Center will use its $3,000 grant to host a series of special, hands-on science sessions for middle school students from throughout the area. Kids will explore the mysteries of space, motion, electricity and magnetic forces.

— The Beaver Island Community School will launch an intramural sports program with the help of a $2,300 grant. The new program will involve kindergarten through twelfth-grade girls and boys in soccer, volleyball, and basketball leagues and give students an opportunity to compete both on and off the island.

— The Boyne City Nursery Center will apply its $2,850 grant toward the purchase of equipment to start a physical fitness program for preschoolers. Emphasis will be given to development of motor skills, strong muscles and lifelong exercise habits.

The Youth Advisory Committee also awarded a special mini-grant of $875 to students at the Beaver Island Community School. The request for funds was written by the island school's student council, and the grant will be used to bring in a motivational speaker and host a special program for seventh- through twelfth-grade students on self-esteem, resisting peer pressure and setting and achieving life goals.

Youth grants are made from the Charlevoix County Youth Fund, an endowment held by the Community Foundation that's earmarked specifically for programs that benefit young people.

Volleyball team shines in conference

The varsity volleyball team took a side-out from conference play this week, easily defeating Onaway, 15-7,15-7,15-4.

The key to such an easy win was excellent serving. Unlike tennis, no second chance is available for those serves that fall out of play. Automatically, the team loses possession and an opportunity to score.

For coach Brenda Bryan, the fan, lost serves can be maddening.

"Missing serves, oh I hate that," she said.

For Bryan, the coach, she offers soothing advice for those with jittery serving nerves.

"Just get the ball across the net any way possible," she said.

As simple as that advice is, it must have some merit as the Rayders top three servers, Lisa Wheat, Amanda Eaton, and Lyndsay Blechel combined landed 38 of a possible 43 serves in play, acing Onaway 10 times.

Eaton added seven kills, Wheat three, and Emily Murray added one kill to the victory.

The junior varsity team lost their match 15-13, 6-15, 12-15.

Bryan took her squad to the Grayling Invitational over the weekend. Her team struggled in the class "B" dominated tournament, losing two games each to Roscommon and Grayling. However, they did defeat Kalkaska twice, which is significant because the Blazers, despite their class B status, are a main league rival for the Rayders. The two squads will match up in Charlevoix Monday, Feb. 17, in a remake of a game earlier postponed because of bad weather.

The Rayder teams travel to East Jordan Thursday, Feb. 13.

"The girls would rather play good competition and lose then play all the easy teams and win," Bryan said, of the weekend, adding that these tournaments are important in showing her girls how different teams play the game of volleyball. They spend their down time between matches scouting the other teams and at times use what they see to improve the way they play the game.

Wrestlers continue in small numbers

Three Rayder wrestlers competed in the conference tournament in Grayling over the weekend.

Brandon Perry, wrestling at 112 pounds, Preston Pitawauakwat, 160, and Robert Torres, 119, all placed fifth in their weight classes. Perry pinned one of his opponents in 16 seconds.

Rogers City took the conference crown with Charlevoix not making the standings, as six players remain ineligible and a few more quit the team during the season.

Those left will compete in the individual district tournament Saturday in Hart, Mich., with coach Phil Christ's eyes set to train middle school wrestlers this coming spring.

"Hopefully we'll get more out on the varsity team during the next few years," he said, of the program expecting numbers in the thirties.

Basketball team ends losing streak

Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

A heavy sigh of relief was breathed by Rayder basketball fans as the varsity squad heat St. Ignace 54-44, snapping a six game losing streak. They had to take the time to travel into the Upper Peninsula, but the win was as sweet as any.

"It gave us an opportunity to feel good again," coach Jim Kanine said. "We did not struggle a bit, we were right in sync."

Four Rayders scored in double figures led by Josh Miller's 14. Miller was backed by 13 from Matt McClellan, 11 from Steve Carland, and 10 from Ben Owens. Owens also had 10 rebounds and Jim Kanine dished seven assists and swiped three steals.

A clamping defense kept the Saints contained to four field goals during the second half and the Rayders doubled their halftime lead from five to 10.

"All they were doing was getting the ball into the post and kicking it out to Pierson to hit a three point shot," Kanine said. "In the second half Ben Owens and Matt Dennis took the post away, forcing them to take shots I know they didn't want to take."

Before topping the Saints, the Rayders spent much of the week on the losing end of the scoreboard, beaten by league leaders Traverse City St. Francis, 80-53 and Boyne City, 74-56.

"We fought them as tough as we could," Kanine said, of the Boyne City game. "We didn't play a bad game all week. We had our best quarter of the year and even doing that we're still down 13 at the half."

After the 1-2 week, Charlevoix moved their record to 4-12 overall and 1-7 in Lake Michigan Division play.

The junior varsity team had a bit more luck sweeping all the opponents this week, thanks to the Handy twins and sharp free-throw shooting.

Skylar Handy nailed a free-throw with two seconds left as the Rayders squeaked by Traverse City St. Francis, 63-62, in quadruple overtime. Both he and Spencer Handy hit two free shots apiece in the final 30 seconds as they eased past Boyne City, 63-61.

The Handy heroics aside, the star of the game against the Ramblers was Justin Thorpe. He led the squad with 15 points, but also grabbed 11 rebounds, six of them offensive rebounds. Colin Carr also scored in double figures, ending with 10 points.

The junior varsity's third win of the week was not so nerve-wrecking as they downed St. Ignace, 66-52. Spencer Handy scored 13 points and snared seven rebounds. Carr scored 12, and Tom Cunningham pitched in 11 points.

Down six at the break, the Rayders turned the volume up on their press, outscoring the Saints 23-11 to start the half. They never looked back while improving their mark to 14-2.

The squads next battle is in Kalkaska Friday, Feb. 14. All remaining games until the district tournament will be at home.

Junior varsity tips off at 6 p.m.

Shooting Stars, 21-16. Alyssia McDonough scored 13 for the Pistons and Trisha Wells added four. For the Shooting Stars, Allie Manker scored seven and Amanda Boss had five.

Junior High Division:

Swisher Sweets stepped on the Big Toes, 24-21, behind Kari Miller's 11 points and Taryn Drost's six points. Kelly Dryer had seven and Beth Martin five for the Big Toes.

Swish Phish kenneled the Bad Dogs, 23-22. Stacy Skippergosh and Kelly Zimmerman scored six apiece for Swish Phish while Leslie Hoffman scored 14 points to lead the Bad Dogs.

The Purple Puffalumps overthrew the Revolutions, 28-23. Meghan Vogel poured in 21 points for the Puffalumps, hacked by five points from Kelly Reid. Kelly Ward and Kathryn Ricks scored six apiece for the Revolutions.

Space Jammers sent south Up North, 29-18. Jennifer McClellan scored 14 and Emily Hughes 7 for the Jammers, while Kate Madison had six and Danielle Vogelheim four points for Up North.

Cheerleaders place at Hope College

The Rayder cheerleaders took time off from cheering their classmates on to participate in a competition of their own.

On Feb. 1, the rooting Rayders ventured down to Hope College to participate in a cheerleading competition. They pom-pommed their way into a second-place finish. It was the fifth straight top-five finish by the squad, which is co-coached by Barb Miller and Liz Nortley.

Winners were determined based on the performance of two cheers. One being a cheer of their own, the other a new cheer all the competitors were taught on the morning of the event by Hope College cheerleaders.

The junior varsity squad did not cheer formally, but won the spirit award as the girls cheered on the varsity Rayders.

After the competition, the squads celebrated country style by line-dancing at the Lonestar Inn.

Ski team slaloms its way beyond expectations

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Snow flurries of uncertainty surrounded Charlevoix downhill ski teams as the season began.

Low numbers combined with a roster dominance of freshmen and sophomores had some people expecting the Rayders to do more falling down than competing.

However, as the season winds down with district and regional races, uncertainty has given way to mild optimism. Qualifying for the state meet is not without possibility.

The teams confidence has been bolstered by an impressive performance in the Great Northern Conference Championship meet Feb. 4 at Nub's Nob.

> "This is just their first year, we'll have them for another three years and they'll continue to do bigger and better things."
> — Pete Scholten, assistant ski team coach

The Rayder girls, skiing with the minimum of four skiers, placed second behind Harbor Springs. The boys came in third behind first place Harbor Springs and second place Boyne City.

The girls high finish was astounding given the fact that a team must finish four skiers in order to place. Since Charlevoix has but four girls skiing through gates this winter the team of Tiffany Fisher, Meg Spang, Alisha Johnson, and Kristen Brendtro could not afford the slightest of slips or the Rayders would fall from competition.

They did so with aplomb led by Fisher's second place run in the slalom and fourth place in the giant slalom. Backed by top 20 finishes in the slalom and top 25 in the giant slalom races by her teammates, the Rayders nudged out Traverse City St. Francis for second place.

"They skied really smart," assistant coach Pete Scholten said. "They knew they had to get through the course to finish. If one blows out, the team doesn't have much of a chance to finish high."

The boys' squad settled for third place following Kevin Meier's fifth place and Todd Freidinger's sixth place medals in the slalom.

Weather conditions were a bit of a challenge, with wind and ice preceding the night's heavy snowfall. Scholten recalled it "nerve-wracking" during the girls competition because he saw a lot of the competitors fall. He knew just how cold it was at the top of the Smokey and Scarface runs, where the competition was staged.

"They're up there with wind chill of who knows what," he said. "If they have time we want them to take some free runs and stay loose."

Both the boys' and girls' teams are young. Spang and Meier are the only seniors on either squad. Fisher, Johnson, and Brendtro are freshmen, along with Shawn MacMillan, Steve Piric, Joel Trubilowicz, and Freidinger. Sophomores are Wally Wujcik and George LaBlance, with LaBlance skiing in his first year of competition.

They have kept the Rayders competitive even when a little green.

"The progression they've made to get a spot on the team and have success with it is pretty cool," Scholten said. "This is just their first year, we'll have them for another three years and they'll continue to do bigger and better things."

Bigger and better may begin at the regional state qualifying meet 9:30 a.m. Thursday, Feb. 13, at Boyne Mountain. Usually the Rayders would have little chance, inexperience not withstanding. However, the competition has been tinkered with lately to offer more opportunity.

Last year's state competition was broken down into two classes, "A" and "B-C-D." That pushed Traverse City West out of Charlevoix's division, but did nothing to break the stranglehold Harbor Springs and Petoskey had on area skiing. Both qualified their teams and split the state title between them with the Rams taking the boys' trophy and the Northmen claiming sovereignty in the girls' competition.

This year, though, three teams instead of two will advance out of regionals into the final state meet. Anything can happen. Boyne City, Traverse City St. Francis, Grayling, Elk Rapids and Charlevoix will be skiing for that final spot, and little appears to separate them.

The state meet is at Boyne Highlands Monday, Feb. 24.

SCRAPBOOK

Grocery stores gave friendships away free

By Marilyn Boss
Courier columnist

Back in the 1930s and 40s, when I was growing up, Charlevoix had a lot of Mom and Pop grocery stores. Many of them gave credit to families during the hard winter months. During the summer, the families would catch up.

Ernest Kibbie owned the little store in my neighborhood. It was located right between the Charlevoix Hotel and Hansen's garage on Antrim Street. It was small like most of the other neighborhood stores around town.

When you walked in the door, there was a huge limb of bananas hanging. The candy counter was near the front, in a big glass case. His motto was "Send your kids to Kibbie's."

There were cookie bins with glass doors, canned goods stretched to the ceiling. The meat counter and case were in the back. Mr. Kibbie would whip off a piece of string from a big cone and tie the meat up in brown paper.

Behind the counter were cereal boxes that he would use a long stick with a clamp on the end to bring them down. He didn't need a ladder with that setup.

At one time, Mr. Kibbie had so much credit on the books, that he told able-bodied customers that he was building a new house in the spring, and they could work off their grocery bills. The stone house is still located at 207 Antrim, and is presently owned by Mr. and Mrs. Harold Black. The stone for the building came from the old lime quarry near Boulder Park, which is now part of the Medusa quarry.

Mr. Kibbie was my good friend. My dad had the gas station on the opposite corner, and the jail and courthouse and Hookers barn were within shouting distance. Everyone knew each other well. No one ever worried about thieves or getting sued.

One day on the way to school, I stopped for a package of gum, and Mr. Kibbie gave me a nickel too much back. I discovered it after I left the store. I could hardly wait to get out of school and run back and return it to him.

So many times he would give me candy or a cookie when I ran down over the back hill from our house to get my mother's order filled.

Later in life, Mr. Kibbie got throat cancer and had to use a box in his throat to talk. He kept right on working.

Down the street three blocks was another family-run grocery store, Staley's Grocery, located at 401 Antrim. Even though the stores around town were close, people almost always went to the one nearest them.

Ken Staley's dad and mother owned and operated their store. My husband, Dale, lived just three doors down and went down the hill on to the grocery each day. They didn't carry large cuts of fresh meat, but had all kinds of lunch meats. They sliced the long rolls with a razor sharp butcher knife. Staley's also sold kerosene. They had a large square tank with a hand pump on it in the back room. Several families would come each day to keep their cooking stoves going.

Mr. Staley would sit in his hardwood chair in the back of the store, and tell deer hunting stories to the boys. It was always enjoyable to go down to Staley's store.

There were about 14 little stores around town. The neighborliness and friendships these people generated to the community were wonderful, and something to be fondly remembered.

McSauba lawsuit draws to a close

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

A quick riddle. Who has to be a chronologist, medical examiner and child psychologist before being asked to deliver justice?

A group of four men and three women, the jury which is on the verge of deliberating in the gross negligence trial against two city employees, Dwight "Ike" Boss and Dale "Bo" Boss, Jr.

The Bosses are being sued by Charlevoix residents, Tom and Sally Sikavitsas, for their actions the night 6-year-old Dustin Sikavitsas' skull was broken in nine places during a ski accident at the city's hill, Mt. McSauba.

The Bosses were the overseers of the hill on the night of March 4, 1992, when another skier collided with Dustin. Nearly five years later, closing arguments were heard Tuesday afternoon in the civil trial.

Both Michael Corcoran, attorney for the plaintiffs, and Gretchen Olsen, attorney for the defendants, presented arguments for the jury to chew on. And as evidence is digested, three critical factors will have to be determined before the jurors announce their verdict.

How long was Dustin laying in pain on a picnic table in the hill's lodge? Olsen said Dustin called his father just before 7 p.m. to inform him that he was going to stay on the slopes a while longer. He then went up the hill. On his second run back down; Dustin was struck by another young skier.

Olsen's said that Dustin was on the table for no more than 10 minutes before help arrived.

Corcoran, suggesting a cover-up within the defendants' ranks, said "they realized they screwed up and had to get their story straight." He reminded the jury of two eye witnesses who claimed under oath that at least 20 minutes lapsed during the time that Dustin "flailed, twitched, pumped and let out shrills of pain" while on the picnic table.

Secondly, did Dustin suffer from a lack of oxygen to the brain? Plaintiffs said yes and pointed to the boy's slipping into unconsciousness, partial amnesia and

Rayder coaches must meet new school board criteria

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Charlevoix coaches and extra curricular leaders can now attach onto their clipboard of strategies and scouting reports a list of job criteria set by the Charlevoix Board of Education.

During the Feb. 3 meeting, the board voted unanimously, 6-0, on a list of coaching guidelines to be used while hiring new coaches and to define expectations for all extra curricular leaders.

"These are clear expectations, and it's a good starting point," board member Jerry Owens said.

Board member Alan Telgenhof, absent from the meeting, did not cast a vote.

The 13 point list seems to have four themes: have background in the sport, leadership qualities, be a team player, and emphasize academics and citizenship.

The board would like to see not only a working knowledge of the sport, but wants the coach to have had playing or coaching experience. The guidelines also encourage coaches to run off-season programs.

Athletic Director Barry Anderson clarified this to mean coaches make aware to their players of off-season camps and tournaments.

"We don't want our coaches to stop coaching at the end of the season, only to pick it back up again the day the next season starts," he said.

As for leadership qualities, the board has defined that as being a motivator, instructor, someone with good time-management skills, and able to be an example for not just the athletes, but for other coaches within the sport. For example, the varsity basketball coach would be a leader for the entire program.

The board would like to see their coaches be team players. Promote and support not just their sport but all sports and activities the schools offer. Coaches should commit themselves to Rayder pride and the Charlevoix image, and seek recognition for those players who excel beyond the team parameters.

High school principal, Gary Grundman, noted that honors like all-state are mostly politically driven. He would be satisfied with just seeing coaches try harder to submit athletes' names for recognition.

"It would be more important to see our kids being pushed for these honors," he said.

Parents need to be included into the team, according to the board. Not only does the board want their coaches to communicate with parents, but to have a working plan on how to deal with them.

"We want to be in the same ballpark as far as right or wrong," Anderson said. "If someone says 'I don't believe in communicating with parents' then I'll say, 'Wait a minute, we have a problem.'"

Lastly, the board agreed that coaches must have a high regard for academics and citizenship.

In addition to the newly approved criteria, the board outlined the proper procedure for parents and others to address problems with a coach. They should meet with the coach first. If not satisfied, they can contact and meet with the athletic director, and then have a sit-down discussion with the principal.

"In the past, people have gone right up to the school board, when the coach, athletic director and principal are not aware of anything wrong," Anderson said. "It comes out of left field when we don't know of the problem."

Anderson called the criteria "common sense," adding, "the coaches we hire do this anyway, that's why they're coaches."

"This will make the program better, as these things are now in writing rather than just being assumed."

partial brain shearings as evidence.

Olsen refuted the notion.

"He was choking at worst, and everybody said he was crying. When you're crying, you can breath," she said. "You're getting oxygen."

Thirdly, did Dustin have attention deficit disorder before the accident or is his present condition a result of the 1992 crash?

The defendants reminded the jury of their expert testimonial by Dr. Mark Hinshaw, who stated that medical records and a report card show that Dustin was probably born with a mild inattention disorder.

Plaintiffs scoffed, claiming that the expert never examined Dustin in person and that believing his testimony would mean disregarding the testimony of the author of the report card — a teacher who claimed that Dustin didn't have attention problems while he was her student in kindergarten.

Court reconvened at 9 a.m. today.

Judge Richard M. Pajtas delivered instructions to the jury before they stepped behind closed doors to decide whether or not Ike and Bo Boss are guilty of gross negligence.

The verdict was not available as of press time.

Superintendent waives optional year

Superintendent Roberta Jackson snuck a piece of information into the tail end of Monday's school board meeting that involved her employment in Charlevoix.

Jackson will not be asking for the option year on the end of her current contract. Her contract expires June 30, 1999, and the option is for the following year.

Over the course of February, board members have met four times in closed sessions to discuss Jackson's contract and the school's other administrators, notably the building principals.

Monday's announcement is not a resignation on Jackson's part, as the board has two years to offer the superintendent a new contract.

However, Jackson's administration has been laboring under the weight of failed bond issues, divisive debates on long range facility plans, and an overall lack of community reception.

That being said, it appears that the district may have a new keeper as it crosses the bridge into the 21st century.

Corrections

The last name of Janice Giffin was misspelled in Edith Gilbert's Feb. 12 column.

There was an unfortunate omission in the Feb. 12 story on Charlevoix's performing arts crew's regional competition: Annie Campbell, a high school senior, was awarded a superior rating for costuming. Apologies and congratulations to Annie for her accomplishment..

Investigators with local police and the insurance company for Expressions Unlimited continue to sift through charred remains in an attempt to determine the cause of the Feb. 11 fire.

Events in brief

Floral shop fire still being investigated

Fire investigators spent Friday at the former Expressions Unlimited building.

A city inspector was joined by a representative of the insurance company covering the business. They are searching for the cause of the fire, which has not yet been determined.

Historical society holds meeting

The Charlevoix Historical Society will be holding an important meeting on Tuesday, Feb. 25, to discuss the society's future direction. This meeting will be held at the Charlevoix Depot museum building.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. Any members needing a ride please call 547-2742. All members are urged to attend.

Appeals board meeting canceled

The Charlevoix Board of Appeals will not meet at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 19, as previously scheduled.

The next regular meeting will be held 7 p.m. Wednesday, March 19, in the city council chambers of city hall.

A complete agenda will be posted prior to the meeting.

School sets time for parents to review sex-ed materials

Materials for the Human Growth and Reproduction classes in the Charlevoix Public Schools will be available for public preview from 8:15-9:15 a.m. Tuesday-Thursday, Feb. 25-27, at the Charlevoix Middle School, and from 2:30-4 p.m. Monday-Wednesday, Feb. 24-26 at the elementary school.

Interested persons may call the school nurse at 547-3242. Parents of students who are in the classes will receive an opportunity to view specific material prior to each class and will be notified by mail of the classes and the preview dates.

Community pool prepares for dedication

The dedication of the Charlevoix Community Pool has been scheduled for Saturday, May 31.

Currently, the inside of the pool building is being completed, as the capital campaign continues to pay for each item as it's purchased and installed.

New nuclear fuel arrives at Big Rock Point

About $5 million worth of new nuclear fuel arrived at Consumer Energy's Big Rock Point nuclear power plant Feb. 9. The 22 new bundles arrived by motor carrier following a two-day trip from Washington state.

Each of the bundles is equivalent to about 9,500 tons of coal. One bundle will provide enough power to run 100 million 100-watt light bulbs for a day or provide enough electricity to power a city of 38,000 people for 15 days. The bundles are about 6 feet tall, measures six inches across and weighs about 500 pounds. A bundle consists of 117 fuel rods, one rod containing about 140 fuel pellets. Each pellet contains a mixture of enriched Uranium and nonfissionable Uranium.

After arriving at Big Rock Point, employees there moved the bundles inside containment, where they were placed into storage on the reactor deck until refueling later this spring.

Post office prepares for move

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Charlevoix's pony express will soon have a new home base.

Ground breaking will begin in March for the city's new 12,000-square-foot post office on M-66, next to Kmart. Postmaster Jay Wheatley expects to move in and be fully operational by October.

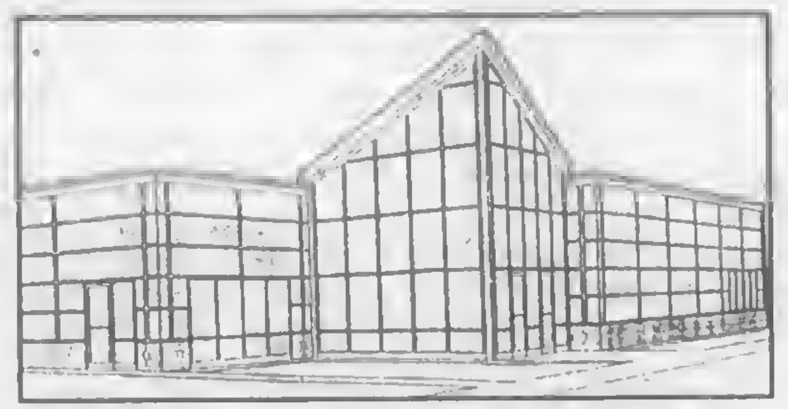
"Everything will be first-class," Wheatley said. "It took four years of planning, but it's a done deal. This will be built."

Their location on Mason Street, which has served the post office since 1955, has become too cramped.

"We'll have room to move," Wheatley said. "We'll be able to offer more services, better services."

A postal store where customers can buy stamps, envelopes, and other mailing supplies will be one of the newer features. Wheatley guessed there may be just five post offices in the state with stores like that in their building. In the past, customers would have to stand in line and ask for such products. With the postal store, they can stroll around, picking and choosing items for themselves.

A lobby of 2,700 square feet will make business at the post office a bit more comfortable than it is now. The current lobby leaves people waiting outside sometimes.



Above is a line drawing of the future building.

Wheatley said they will be able to offer 1,000 post office boxes up from the 384 they have now. Also, a parking lot with more than 20 spots will surround the new building.

"Now, it's, 'Where do you park?' when you have to go to the post office," he said.

As convenient as it's going to be for customers, the new facility will be equally as comfortable for the postal employees. Men's and women's bathrooms and locker rooms will be a step-up from the lone unisex restroom the post office has now. A lunchroom will be available, as well as a conference room and larger office spaces.

Business will be run the same, but seven computers will be available to postal workers, two more than they have now. Also, behind the new facility will be a larger, less obstructed loading area for filling their trucks with the day's deliveries.

The project will cost close to $2 million, with most of the expenses being covered by stamp sales throughout the course of the office's business. Earth Tech will be doing the construction, and the building will be marked by a glass pyramid-like entryway and, hopefully, according to Wheatley, use stone similar to the county and city buildings.

"We want something that fits in the community," he said, noting that as a main goal for the post office.

People share opinions with school board on district spending

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

In kicking off a public hearing on the school district's five year budget plan, board of education member Sulane Hamilton implored the audience for "insights, inputs, comments, and needs."

The audience obliged.

Resident Bruce MacArthur asked the district to set aside $10,000 over two years to pay for safety classes, transportation, and overall funding for the community pool.

Elementary school principal Dick Swenor said his school needs more playground supervision, while his counterpart at the high school, Gary Grundman, is concerned that popular English sections will be cut upon the retirement of an instructor this spring. He also urged the board to consider spending dollars on a technology plan.

Middle school principal Dennis VanGuilder pleaded for equity in funding between the schools. VanGuilder noted that 29 special education students are taught at his school for about $3,500 a student, while the K-5 building instructs one more student, but at $8,600 per student, and the high school teaches 20 special education students for just under $6,000.

VanGuilder also reiterated his concern over cuts in support staff, particularly since they help monitor students during lunch hour.

"I don't know for the world of me who'll watch the 160 kids during lunch other than me," he said.

While citing the need for another second-grade teacher, residents Sue Goss, Kelly Vogel and teacher Scott May questioned the validity of figures from the superintendent's office showing a teacher-student ratio in the elementary school at 1:19.

While counting on his fingers 25 teachers instead of the 30 used to come-up with the 1:19 ratio he said, "You've taken the number of teach-

OPINIONS

Be intolerant to manipulative, deceptive journalism

EDITORIAL

Journalistic responsibility is falling by the wayside, or maybe it's getting trampled under the desire for exclusive news. Either way, ABC's "Prime Time Live" is leading the way.

After falsifying names, employment history and references for several staff members, the show went "behind the scenes" with hidden cameras to get the story.

The way station employees tell it, their actions benefited mankind. The good outweighed the little, white lies they told to store management and employees at Food Lion to get jobs. After all, the grocery store chain was mishandling food, selling meats and salads beyond the safe date and mistreating employees — atrocities needing to be exposed to the public.

A gallant claim.

Regardless of whether Food Lion was wronging employees and customers, ABC wronged its viewers and every one in the news profession by unethically and illegally gathering information in the name of getting the story. Without the hidden cameras and falsely planted employees, the station had more than 70 employees willing to go on the record with information against the food chain.

Unfortunately, the story — as told by the people living it — wasn't enough. "Prime Time Live" wanted more flare, more excitement for its viewers.

The $5.5 million the show was ordered to pay to Food Lion is hardly representative of where the media is heading as a profession when the television show films most of the jurors from the Food Lion vs. ABC case backing down on their decisions during last Tuesday's broadcast.

Every profession needs guidelines by which to operate. Medical and other licensed personnel have review boards and standard disciplinary actions. ABC, however, deemed itself above basic honesty, and above the law. The news cast stepped outside the realm of decency when it manipulated the general public to get a story.

We urge everyone to stand against this type of reporting. There is less and less accountability for the media with each shady situation that is accepted by the public.

Two jurors from the case stood firm on their belief that it was wrong for the program to lie to get its story. The others hedge back and forth over whether ABC's actions were justified by the wrongs it sought to expose.

"Two wrongs don't make a right," is what many Americans remember when standards begin to slip. "Honesty is the best policy" was a phrase shared by most parents as they raised their children to operate by a personal code of ethics. Although old, and sometimes thought of as trite, the golden rules should apply to reporters and editors.

ABC obviously hasn't been reevaluating its decisions. If it were, they wouldn't have devoted last week's program to self-justification.

We urge the public not to stand for such actions. We must stop giving garbage news shows and tabloids our attention. Don't let a desire for titillating coverage cloud our judgment the way ABC's was clouded.

We should all be able to feel safe that when a reporter calls a Charlevoix family, they are up front and honest about who they are and what they want.

Letters to the editor

Editor's note: The following sixth-graders have written letters to the editor as part of a class assignment. Here are their concerns.

Plowing needs improved

Editor:

"I can't go to work because there is too much snow and the plow hasn't come yet." That is a famous quote of many people. The road commission should do something about the roads being plowed.

My brother gets up at 2:30 in the morning to plow for my dad's business. Why can't the county plows get out earlier? There are enough plows so they could do that.

In the summer there are many pot holes and pot holes pop tires. The county or city department should either pave the gravel roads or fill the holes with blacktop.

Stones get thrown through windows very easily. Dust also causes a bad problem. They could water the roads down. It would be wonderful to see some improvements being made in the road service. Thanks for a good job already, but we need some improvements.

Respectfully Yours,
Donovan Swanson

Charlevoix needs a Discovery Zone

Editor:

I'm a sixth-grader who thinks we should get a Discovery Zone where Buy Low used to be. It will give children something to do. The children will be getting lots of exercise and it's very entertaining.

A Discovery Zone would fill up Buy Low. It would give jobs to a lot of people and would attract tourists. A Discovery Zone would be business for the whole shopping center in Charlevoix.

You know, Buy Low has been sitting there for a very long time. It would be a great place for children.

Respectfully Yours,
Kelly Wood

We need a new middle school

Editor:

I'm a sixth-grade student in Charlevoix Middle School, and I really think we need a new middle school! One reason is when we walk on the floor it goes down. Secondly, our cafeteria is always crowded when we eat lunch. Also Mr. Hopkin's ceiling is leaking. Our lockers are falling out of the walls. Also, the P.A. system goes on every time the bell rings. .

That's why I think we need a new middle school!

Yours Truly,
Amber Swadling

Indoor skating would be a benefit

Editor:

Charlevoix needs an indoor ice skating rink! Sometimes it's too cold to go outside to skate, or it's too windy.

Most of the time it's too hot. The ice is melted. So the people in

Keep Mt. McSauba ski hill open

Editor:

Mt. McSauba shouldn't close. Some kids can't afford to go to other hills. Boyne Mountain charges $30 for one day when Mt. McSauba charges $7. The city would lose money because people come from down state and stay in hotels. So the hotels lose money. The city provides baseball and soccer fields, so I think they should have a ski hill. That's why they should keep Mt. McSauba open.

Yours Truly.
Logan Matter
Sixth-grade,
Charlevoix Middle School

Mt. McSauba benefits local economy

Editor:

We need to keep Mt. McSauba open! Charlevoix's booming summer population is huge, but the winter population is very small. What kind of people would go to Charlevoix in the winter? Skiers and snowboarders would. Charlevoix's Mt. McSauba is being sued for something that happened five years ago.

Closing Mt. McSauba would not be good for businesses around it. People from down state come to Mt. McSauba and go to hotels, restaurants and stores around and in Charlevoix. Mt. McSauba is the backbone of Charlevoix's winter money. Keep Mt. McSauba open, Charlevoix depends on it.

Curious writer,
Matt Kilkenny,

Bring Subway to middle school

Editor:

Recently the Charlevoix Middle School students were banned from going off-campus to their favorite restaurants. Subway was a very popular place to eat and now we can't go there. So why don't we bring Subway to us. Subway could put a stand up in the cafeteria. Subway wouldn't lose any profit and the school would benefit. Also it would be a great learning experience and lots of fun. I think it could work. Perhaps this gives you something to think about for the future.

Truly Yours,
Elizabeth Blosh

Dentists not fairly represented in recent article in Reader's Digest

Editor:

Have you read the headline, "How Dentists Rip Us Off"? No, it wasn't the work of the tabloids on the checkout lane but on the cover of The Reader's Digest.

Interesting reading to many of us — the author travels to 50 dental offices in 28 states to determine the dental treatment he needs.

Prior to embarking on the investigation, the author was examined by his own dentist whom he trusts completely and a unbiased panel who knew of his assignment.

As the author sets across the country the treatment plans varied in cost from under $500 to over $29,000. He feels such a range could only point to "dishonest" practices in our profession.

Nothing could be more misleading. Dentists do vary in their approaches to treatment. There is short-term solutions and long-range plans, limited and comprehensive approaches, .cosmetic and ideal treatment plans.

These variables need to be determined by the dentist and patient in an honest and open relationship. This relationship is pivotal to the long-term success between any person and their dentist.

The author himself uses this trust between himself and his dentist of 15 years to judge the other 50 dentists. On this front the dental profession stands strong.

According to a recent Gallup Poll, consumers ranked dentists among the five most trusted professions. Even Consumer Reports Magazine surveyed 52,000 of its members and found that 80 percent were very pleased with their dental care.

This trust between the American public and their dentists has been earned. Dentists continue to keep the lid on costs staying well below the Consumer Price Index.

The National Institute of Dental Research has documented a $100 billion savings in dental costs alone to consumers during a recent 10 year period from prevention.

In addition, Dentists have been instrumental in bringing down the cavity rate. A 1996 study found that in the last 20 years the percentage of school age children with tooth decay has been cut in half.

Different dentists might recommend different treatments. This is not uncommon.

Dentists use their individualized experience, expertise, education and their knowledge of their patients to recommend treatment. This is often a valuable experience to your dentist when he or she takes continuing education classes. We dentists learn a great deal from each others' perspectives.

Lastly, I do not mean to sugarcoat (heaven forbid, I'm a dentist!) this article or our profession. Undoubtedly there are charlatans in any profession.

Organized dentistry has a strong peer review network. This process allows consumers to issue a formal complaint.

A panel is then appointed to hear the grievance against the dentist. A study of state peer review programs found more than half of all cases were ruled in favor of the patient.

. The cover of Reader's Digest Special Report asks How Honest Are Dentists?

If you do not trust your dentist find one you can.

Having served on the local Peer Review Committee and as a past president and secretary of the Vacationland District Dental Society, I can say with confidence your oral health is in trustworthy hands.

Sincerely,
John A. Merrill, D.D.S.
.Spokesperson for the Michigan Dental Association and a Charlevoix practicing dentist.

Hospital guild gets new officers

New officers for the Charlevoix Area Hospital Guild were recently installed.

Edmond McGee is president; Shirlee Koerber, president-elect; Rose Mary McGee, secretary; and Anah Potter, treasurer. The officers were sworn in for two year terms by hospital president Richard Krueger. The Guild president also serves as a member of the hospital board of directors.

With a total membership of 195, the guild contributes more than 11,000 volunteer hours annually to the hospital for services.

The guild also raises funds for scholarships and building and equipment needs. A $15,000 pledge for a CT scanner has been made. To date $6,000 has been contributed toward fulfillment of the pledge.

To become a guild member, call Kathy Johnson, at 547-4024.

Melinda Noirot-Joseph Poon

Melinda Jane Noirot and Joseph Poon announce their engagement to be married.

Melinda is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alva Noirot, of Charlevoix. Joseph is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Poon, of London, England.

A May 31 wedding is planned for the First Congregational Church in Charlevoix.

The bride-to-be is a psychology major at Oberlin College. She plans to graduate this May.

Joseph is also a student at Oberlin College and scheduled to graduate this spring. He is a double major in Russian Studies and Studio Art. He will be working as a French Regional Manager for Reed Manufacturing out of Erie, Penn., after graduation.

Good habits can mean good health

Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, formerly District Health Dept. No. 3, is stressing the importance of good health habits.

During school months, viral diseases such as influenza, measles, and chicken pox; and bacterial diseases such as streptococcal sore throat increase in frequency. Many of the diseases are spread by nose and throat secretions. In addition, individuals with an intestinal or diarrhea illness can spread the illness.

Good health habits prevent the spread of disease. They are common sense steps taught to us as children and include: washing your hands before you eat; washing your hands after you use the bathroom; washing your hands before you prepare food for others; not sharing common personal items such as eating utensils, glasses; combs, towels, and food; keeping your fingernails clean and trimmed; not biting your fingernails; covering your mouth when you cough or sneeze; staying home when you are sick; avoiding others who are ill; and keeping small children from putting objects in their mouths.

Parents should not send ill children to school, day care or a nursery. Parents need to be aware of their child's health status and be alert to signs and symptoms of illness, which include fever (100 degrees Fahrenheit or higher); cold-like symptoms with fever; sore throat, difficulty swallowing and swollen glands; coughing and difficulty breathing; nausea, vomiting and diarrhea; stomach aches and fever; yellow eyes or skin; pink eye; unusual rashes or infected skin patches; headache and stiff neck; severe itching or scratching of scalp; body aches and pains; and marked congestion, localized pain and fever.

Students should be kept out of school or day care when they are ill. Students can return to school when well, when a physician states they are not contagious, or when local school policies allow them to return.

New primary care physicians to man hospital office

Two family practice physicians have joined the Charlevoix Area Hospital medical staff and will be staffing the hospital's new Boyne Area Medical Center when it opens in March.

Drs. Catherine Wonski and Pamela Knysz have both been on the staff with Advantage Health in Grand Rapids since 1990. Both women have ties to the Boyne City area and will be residing there.

Wonski

Dr. Wonski received her bachelor's degree from Albion College, Albion, Mich., in 1982. She graduated from the Wayne State Medical School in 1986 and performed her residency in Grand Rapids at the Grand Rapids Family Practice from 1986-90.

From 1992 to the present she served as medical director at the St. Mary's Living Center, a 200-bed long term care facility in Grand Rapids. She has also been on the faculty for the St. Mary's Family Practice Residency and received the Family Practice Teacher Award for the Grand Rapids Family Practice Residency in 1992. She is board certified by the American Board of Family Practice.

Dr. Wonski and her husband Gary have two children, Caitlyn, 6, and Bryan, 3.

Dr. Knysz (pronounced Ka-nish) received a bachelor of science degree from Nazareth College in Kalamazoo in 1975, and did premed studies at Eastern Michigan University in Ypsilanti. She received her medical degree from the University of Michigan in 1987 and served her residency at the Grand Rapids Family Practice.

She worked as a surgical and intensive care nurse at St. Mary's Hospital in Saginaw, St. Mary's in Grand Rapids, and St. Joseph's Hospital in Ypsilanti. In addition, she was a public health nurse for the Washtenaw County Health Department and held the position of Discharge Planner at the University of Michigan Medical Center prior to becoming a primary care physician in 1990. She has been a faculty preceptor in the Grand Rapids Residency Program's Family Health Center and a staff physician at St. Mary's Living Center in Grand Rapids. She is board certified by the American Board of Family Practice and was recertified in 1996.

Dr. Knysz and her husband Stephen have two children, Justin, 9, and Jessica, 6.

The Boyne Area Medical Center is being built by Charlevoix Area Hospital at 223 North Park St., in Boyne City.

"We are very pleased to have two such congenial and skilled physicians to staff our medical center," said hospital president, Richard Krueger. "We are sure they will be a real asset to the residents of the area."

Building the medical center was a result of the hospital's studies showing the area required up to three additional physicians in order to meet the needs of residents. Dr. Richard Mansfield, a Charlevoix Area Hospital medical staff member, has been a general practice physician in Boyne City since 1969. For the last several years he and Dr. John Karkosak have been the only physicians located in Boyne City.

Knysz

Dr. James Jeakle, obstetrician and gynecologist, who presently has office hours at the Boyne Rehab Center next door, will also move to the medical center to continue his service in Boyne City. Craig Wendt, general surgeon, will also provide office hours at the center.

The 4000-square-foot building will also provide space for community education and health clinics.

The planned opening date for the center is Monday, March 3. Anyone wishing to make physician appointments with Drs. Wonski and Knysz may call 582-5314 after Monday, Feb. 17.

Helmut A. "Hal" Forbrig

Helmut A. "Hal" Forbrig, of Charlevoix, died Feb. 14, 1997, at Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey.

Funeral was Tuesday, Feb. 18, 1997, at 11 a.m., at the Zion Lutheran Church in Petoskey. The Rev. Walter Teske officiated. Interment will be in Brookside Cemetery in Charlevoix.

Mr. Forbrig was born June 7, 1920, in Fraureuth, Germany, the son of Albert E. and Gertrude A. (Pohler) Forbrig. He moved to the United States in 1927. Mr. Forbrig grew up and attended school in East Detroit, (Eastpointe). He attended Lawrence Institute of Technology until entering the Army in World War II. He was an officer in the Army Corp of Engineers Road and Air Runway Construction Division in the India-Burma-China Region of the Pacific Theater. He completed his military service with a rank of captain.

After being discharged from the Army, Mr. Forbrig co-founded Forbrig and LaFave, a sanitary contracting company performing municipal projects at various locations around the northern Great Lakes.

On Feb. 11, 1950, he married Leora B. "Lee" Grulke in Rogers City. In 1951 they moved to Charlevoix, where Mr. Forbrig owned and operated Lake Construction Co., a residential, light commercial, marine and development business. In 1983 his company specialized in marine construction, from which he retired in 1994. Mr. Forbrig also developed and owned Stover Creek Marina on Lake Charlevoix from the mid-1960's until 1971.

Mr. Forbrig was a member of the Bethany Lutheran Church and American Legion Leslie T. Shapton Post No. 226 in Charlevoix. He was a past member and supervisor on the Charlevoix Township Zoning Administration Board and a past member of the Little Traverse Association of Home Builders.

Survivors include his wife, Lee Forbrig; three daughters, Gail Bowerman and her husband, Albert, of Mount Pleasant, Cynthia Thaxton and her husband, Gary, of Traverse City and Brenda Wolfson and her husband, Irvin, of Grand Rapids; one son, Gary of Charlevoix; one sister, Lee Merollis and her husband, Norman, of Grosse Pointe Shores; one aunt, Gertrude C. Pohler of Milwaukee, Wisc.; six grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

The family suggest memorials to the Charlevoix Area Hospital, Zion Lutheran Church of Petoskey or the Northern Michigan Chapter of the Multiple Sclerosis Society, 521 South Union, Traverse City, MI, 49684. Envelopes for contributions are available at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix, where friends called from 6-9 p.m. Monday, Feb. 17.

Jenelda Villermain

Jenelda Villermain, 87, of Charlevoix and formerly of Bay City, died Feb. 14, 1997, at her home in Charlevoix.

Interment will be in Brookside Cemetery in the spring.

No services are planned.

Arrangements are being handled by the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix.

Lenten supper/Bible study Wednesday

The Charlevoix United Methodist Church is hosting a Lenten Soup Suppers Devotional at 6 p.m. today, Feb. 19, and for the next four Wednesdays at the church.

A simple soup and bread supper will be served, followed by a devotional, including Maxie Dunham's video, "Creation, Sin & Salvation," covering the first 10 chapters of Genesis. The "Grand Sweep" Bible study will also be introduced.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

The story's dateline was Ponca City, Okla., so Paul Harvey shared. It seemed Mom, Dad, and daughter were out shopping when they visited a pet store. Their little girl fell head over heels in love with the bunny rabbits. You know the all-white ones with the pink eyes that are so soft and snugly. She was 7 years old at the time. "I want one! Can I have one?" "Not until Hell freezes over," says Dad.

Two years go by with periodic questions from the dear daughter if Hell had frozen over yet or not. "I wouldn't count on it darling," says the mother. Then just a few short weeks ago as mother and daughter were sitting in the car waiting for their windows to defrost before going to school, it happened. Mom just happened to have Paul Harvey on the car radio and he said those magic words the daughter had so longed to hear. Hell had frozen over. Hell, Michigan that is. The daughter went tearing out of the car and into the house to wake her still sleeping Dad. "It's happened Daddy. Paul Harvey just said that Hell froze over today so today I get my rabbit."

What was a father to say or do? He had been hoisted by his own proverbial pitards. There is a little girl in Oklahoma who now has a rabbit named Patches because she never forgot her father's testimony! Somehow, I don't think that's what dear old Dad had in mind, but I suspect it is a lesson he will never forget.

Have you ever thought about your testimony; what your words and actions say about you? It's not just the children that remember. They may not be as outspoken and obvious about it, but grownups remember your words, too. What I want you to contemplate is what your words and actions might say about the place Jesus Christ holds in your heart. Perhaps you've heard me say this before. You may be the only picture of Jesus some will ever see. What do people see when they look and listen to your faith?

When you are on the job, does not just your performance but even your demeanor reflect compassion and care? Can people look at you and recognize there really is something different about you; something that sets you apart? There's so much at work in this world today that seems to discourage and tear people down. We've been challenged by the Lord to do everything in our power to make a difference in people's lives and build them up.

When you are at a restaurant or in line at the grocery store, do you look through the eyes of the cashier or waitress as well as your own? The understanding and patience you have with those who serve you goes a long way. People remember when someone recognizes their stresses and struggles. They are grateful to be appreciated and far more likely to help you when they see you care.

It doesn't always take a sermon to share the gospel witness. In fact, there's an old poem out there somewhere that goes "I'd rather see a sermon than hear one any day." The words you share, the way you carry yourself, and the love that ought to be in your heart are a priceless testimony. Make it a prayer of your heart that everything about you lets others get a glimpse of who Jesus really is.

Appointment made to city review board

Kim VanMeter was appointed to the city's board of review Monday by city council. Her appointment was requested earlier this month, however, there was concern that her placement would create a conflict since her father, Butch Russell is the city coucil's liaison for the board. It was determined that legally, there is no conflict.

VanMeter's seat was created by the resignation of Shirley Roloff, who was elected to the county commissioner last November.

VanMeter's term will expire Dec. 31, 1999.

New section at The Clothing Co. mirrors the old

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

It was just another day Feb. 5 for Jacqueline Mabee and her store The Clothing Co., on the corner of Bridge and Mason streets.

Sell some clothes, help a few browsers and knock down a large wall.

Maybe it was not such an ordinary day after all. Knocking out the wall between The Clothing Co. and the storefront formerly known as Bloomin Wear has given Mabee an additional 1,200-square-feet for displays and merchandise.

"The space was going to be empty," she said, of the next-door vacancy. "Do I do this, or rent the space out? It was time to do it."

Mabee owns the space, and has relocated her Bloomin Wear store to where the old movie theater used to be on Bridge Street. Her husband, Kirby Dipert, and Don Binns helped remove the wall. Binns also did the carpentry.

"Basically we made it into a mirror image of the old side," she said. "People have been coming in saying 'I know something is different, but what is it?'"

The Clothing Co. first opened in Charlevoix in 1975, in the Market Mall on Bridge Street. It moved a few years later to the corner store that is now be renovated.

Expansion at the store is providing for expansion of merchandise. Mabee said to expect more of what is already offered, in addition to new product lines, including the Villager clothing line. A product of Liz Claiborne, Villager clothes are a little less costly.

The layout of the store will remain the same, with men's clothing downstairs and women's apparel upstairs.

"We'll spread it out and display it much better. It was always crowded in here," she said. "We just want to increase the appearance of the store, make it look nicer."

Dust and debris have been removed and the store is operating with business as usual, with just a little more elbow room.

"We're very excited. It's really neat to walk in the door," Mabee said. "It's a surprise to walk in. It's a big change, big improvement."

Pam Beer, store manager for The Clothing Co., checks over her merchandise since the store's expansion. She now has almost twice the distance to run to answer the phone.

Business in brief

Charlevoix hospital appoints new board member

Richard Fish, D.D.S., of Boyne City, has joined the board of directors of Charlevoix Area Hospital.

Richard Fish

Dr. Fish has been in the private practice of dentistry in Boyne City since 1964. He graduated from the University of Michigan School of Dentistry. He is active as a board member for several area organizations, including Raven Hill Discovery Center and First Michigan Bank. In the past, he has served on the Boyne City School Board, the Evangeline Township Planning Commission, the Boyne City Housing Commission, and was president of the Boyne City Chamber of Commerce.

Dr. Fish and his wife Janet have three children and two grandchildren. He fills the Charlevoix Area Hospital board position of John Buick, who died last summer.

Nonprofit resale shop offers a sale

The Good Samaritan Resale Shop is marking all winter clothes down 50 percent through February. The shop is located at 9604 White St. in Ellsworth.

All the proceeds from the sale are going toward the Good Samaritan Food Pantry.

The store is open from 9 a.m.-noon, Monday and Saturday, and 1-4 p.m. Wednesday.

Parents must file for infants' Social Security numbers

New parents should be aware of a change on their 1996 federal income tax return that requires them to get Social Security numbers for children born in 1996.

"Any taxpayer who claims a child as a dependent on the 1996 federal income tax return must include the child's SSN unless the child was born in December of 1996," said IRS district director Arlene Kay.

If possible, taxpayers should also include the number for any dependent born in December.

If one is not available, the taxpayer must write "12/96" in the space for the child's number on the tax return.

"A taxpayer who has not applied for an SSN for a dependent child can do so by completing Form SS-5 and providing the Social Security Administration with an original birth certificate and one other piece of identification showing the child's name, such as a doctor's letter or hospital records," Kay said.

For more information on how to apply or to get Form SS-5, contact any local Social Security office or call 1-800-772-1213.

City finalizes industrial lot sales

Search for more land continues

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Once the signatures find the dotted line later this week, CPI Products will have snatched the last two available lots in city's industrial park.

The company will pay $40,125 for the 3.21 acres, some of which is now being used as a storm water retention pond.

Conditions of the sale include a 12-year tax abatement for CPI, the company paying an additional $10,000 at closing to cover the city's matching funds to relocate the retention pond, and final approval of a $135,000 state grant to pay for filling in the current retention pond.

City manager, Mike Wiesner, said the grant is sure, since state representatives have already reviewed the project.

The sale of the land was approved by city council Monday. However, before a vote was taken, council member Bob Timms proposed that the drainage area be given to CPI and that the city retain two 25-foot strips along its outer borders for drainage. He listed benefits as the company not having to buy the land, no need for expensive engineering to redesign drainage for the park and no need for the state grant.

"I don't think we the taxpayers should be responsible for their storm water runoff," he said, noting that even the grant is coming from taxpayers' dollars.

> "I don't think we the taxpayers should be responsible for their storm water runoff."
> — Bob Timms,
> Charlevoix city councilmember

In his plan, the company would fill in the current drainage area as the city could provide fill dirt from its projects and require businesses in the park to solve their own drainage problems. This, however, would slow the company's expansion project down.

"We want to buy something that is whole; a real lot," said Dick Sayward, CPI project manager. "We need presentable land for building or resale."

CPI, which has been in Charlevoix since 1982, will now own four lots in the park that are huddled between Gibbons Drive and Ance Road. CPI controller, Tom Kenney, said the plant plans to expand its product line and increase sales to existing customers when it builds the addition.

The company manufacturers robotic arms for automobile assembly.

Mayor Josh Barnes, who wasn't chairing the meeting at this point because of a conflict of interest through his employment at LexaLite, said Timms' plan could save the city, state and CPI money. However, according to contracts with businesses at the park, the city must provide storm water drainage.

Councilmembers decided to go with the sale. They agreed not to hold up a manufacturing plan that is expected to create more jobs.

"If we turn down money (the grant) to create jobs in Charlevoix, that doesn't mean we're going to save the taxpayers money," council member Gabe Campbell said.

Medical training classes scheduled

North Central Michigan College's Institute for Business and Industry Training will offer a comprehensive review course to prepare local medical assistants for the American Association of Medical Assistants' certification examination.

The class will meet Monday evenings from 6-8:30 p.m. at the college's conference center beginning March 10.

The course is designed to provide experienced medical assistants with the overview needed to take the examination in June of 1997 or January of 1998. This is the final year that medical assistants may receive association certification through a combination of work experience and successful completion of the exam. After this period, medical assistant certification will be available only through a two-year college associate's degree.

The 10-session program will review both administrative and clinical competencies covered in the association's examinations and provide opportunities to answer practice questions.

Cost for the review course is $125, plus textbook purchase.

For registration forms or information, call 348-6613 or 348-6705.

Todd Freidinger makes his run down Boyne Mountain Thursday during the regional ski meet.

Individual skier qualifies for state

The Rayder downhill skiers ended their season at Boyne Mountain. Hoping perhaps to squeeze through into the state meet, the boys finished in eighth place, the girls fifth out of 14 teams. The top three advanced to state.

However, there will be Rayder representation at the state races. Freshman Tiffany Fisher placed second overall in the Giant Slalom and seventh in the slalom, high enough to qualify herself for the state meet.

Fisher's time was also fast enough to qualify her for in both slalom and giant slalom at state Monday, Feb. 24, at Boyne Highlands.

Todd Freidinger placed 22, Shawn MacMillan 26, and Joel Trubilowicz 42 in the boys' slalom event. For the giant slalom, Kevin Meier placed 21, Freidinger 28, Steve Pirie 29, MacMillan 31, Erik Halverson 48, and Wally Wujcik 56.

For the girls, in the slalom, Alisha Johnson finished 21, Meg Spang 22, and Kristen Brendtro 33. In giant slalom, Johnson placed 16, Brendtro 43, and Spang 44.

Varsity basketball team drops two more

The Rayder basketball team, playing Kalkaska, saw an 11 point halftime deficit balloon up to 17 points in the opening stages of the third quarter, keeping them on the losing side of the scoreboard for the second time last week. The final tally 69-37.

Earlier, the Rayders fell to Elk Rapids, 67-52.

Coach Jim Kanine said he felt good about his team heading into that second half. Playing in front of a big, boisterous Winter Carnival crowd, he was confident the Rayders could swashbuckle their way back into the game. However, the Blazers swished three shots while the Rayders missed three and before any halftime adjustments set in, the game slipped beyond reach.

"They hammered us," Kanine said, of the third quarter that saw his charges outscored 23-6. "All of a sudden it's 17, they're kicking the ball out, getting easy lay-ups. When they're playing like that, we're no match for them."

Despite another blue-collar outing from forwards Ben Owens, with 10 points and six rebounds, and Steve Carland, 10 points and eight rebounds, Charlevoix could barely muster an effective offensive attack.

As a team, the Rayders usually score somewhere in the 50s, but this night, like the weather this time of year, they didn't even approach 40. And the offensive woes had a domino effect on a good defensive ball club.

"Offense works hand in hand with defense, they're not counter productive," Kanine said. "It's very difficult to keep defensive intensity without making gains on the other end."

The losses drop the Rayders to 4-13, 1-9 in Lake Michigan Division play.

The season wraps up with two homes games. Friday, Feb. 21, against East Jordan, and Tuesday, Feb. 25, against Harbor Springs. After that the district tournament tips-off on Monday, March 3, in Harbor Springs. When and who the Rayders play have yet to be determined.

JV boasts another week of wins

The Junior Varsity basketball team cruised to two victories last week.

Steadily increasing their lead from six points after a quarter, to 16 at the half, to 25 with three stanzas complete, they dismantled Elk Rapids, 76-52.

Carl Goff led the team with 13 points, Justin Thorp added 12, and

Men's rec basketball

Results from the Charlevoix Men's Basketball League, games played Thursday:

Trademark Clothiers defeated Sears, 84-78. Dick Swenor's 23 points and Myron Spay's 20 points led Trademark, countering John Guiseppi's 27 points for Sears. Also, for Trademark Roger Smith hit for 19 and Brett Erskine 16.

For Sears, Chuck Pop 13, Brandon Kanoff 12, and Chad Morrow ten.

Charlevoix County Construction nipped Howes & Howes, 70-66. Kirk Ikens led the way for County Construction with 24 points, backed by Dom Brock's 18, Woody Pearson's 13, and Roger Cain's 11 points. Tex Drenth topped the scorers for Howes with 17 points. Corey Essenberg chipped in 13, Phil Drenth 12, and Mark Essenberg 10.

Tannery Saloon squeaked by Rich & Lefties by a lone point, 68-67. Joel Golman poured in 23 for Tannery, who also received 21 points from Kevin Fitzpatrick and 12 from Kyle Fitzpatrick. Roger Mason led Rich & Lefties with 31 points, Tom Lane added 16, George Mason 10.

Youth basketball

Results from the Charlevoix Youth Basketball Association, games played Saturday.

Elementary Division:

The Bulls charged over the Pistons 19-15. Anna Trubilowicz, 8 points, and Shayna Drost, 6, led the Bulls. Trisha Wells, 6 points, and Alyssia McDonough, 5, led the Pistons.

No Limits proved just that by defeating the Shooting Stars, 18-12. Brooke Blanchard scored 8 and Rachel Wyniawski 6 for the victors while Katie Way scored 6 and Allie Manker 4 for Shooting Stars.

Junior High Division:

The Bad Dogs barked back the Revolutions, 20-17. Leslie Hoffman with 7 points, and Chelsea Newcomb with 6 led the conquering canines. Kelly Ward led all scorers for the Revolutions with 17.

The Big Toes stepped on Up North 26-19 behind Beth Martin's 14 points. For Up North, Abby Schapperkotter scored 9, and Kate Madison 6.

Swisher Sweets smoked Space Jammers, 27-10. Kari Miller scored 14 for Swisher

Rayders serve up more wins

Preparing for district tournament play

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

The Rayder volleyball team inched another spike forward to a conference crown by sweeping Harbor Springs 15-3,16-14,15-12, Thursday.

After steam rolling the Rams in set one, the match became more competitive, with Harbor poised to take set two leading 11-14. The Rayders reeled off five straight points to take the set.

"It's a matter of volleying and keeping the ball in play," coach Brenda Bryan said of coming back. "Somebody will make a mistake, and you hope it's the other side."

Streaking to the set two win, the Rayders used the momentum to earn set three's first points. They held the lead to take the match in straight sets.

Jessa VanGuilder and Lyndsay Blechel served three aces apiece. Emily Murray, Lisa Wheat each had six kills, and Amanda Eaton three.

"It's funny, but we do well under pressure," Bryan said. "I don't like to play a game like that, but I know we'll win. I just don't know when."

Bryan has had the team focused all year on the conference matches, and the lady Rayders have won all four. With two left, Monday, Feb. 17 with Kalkaska and Thursday, Feb. 20, with Elk Rapids, they stand ready to take the regular season title, which would give the team a head start going into the conference tournament.

Teams receive points from seven on down based on regular season standings. The first place team earns an additional point, beginning the tournament with eight points.

A team which finishes first in the regular season can be beaten, and still win the championship. If the Rayders win the regular season, they can place second and still be overall champions, as an extra point is not awarded to the tournament victor.

"It really means a whole lot to enter the tournament with that extra point," Bryan said, who has been sharpening her team's focus specifically for that purpose. "I tell them we don't want to lose a conference game."

The last two years, the Rayders have won the tournament, but not being as sharp during the season kept a trophy out of their hands.

This year's team has been sharp and dominant, winning 16 games, only losing to a class "B" school during one set of invitational play and being extended into four games just a handful of times.

Bryan gives praise to a core of players brought up to varsity a year ago who are logging much of the minutes on the court this year, Murray, VanGuilder, Blechel, Wheat, and Eaton.

"I don't give them enough credit. They are all playing well, but I expected that," Bryan said. "I still don't think I give them enough credit until I realize they've taken the place of the girls we lost from last year."

They have been backed by a group of younger players who Bryan sees ultimately replacing them without missing a beat. Carrie Blanchard, Ann Spang, Chris Sweeney, and Jamie Gowell lead that group. Bryan has high praise for Gowell.

"I've pushed her into blocking and working on her spike," she said. "She doesn't have a hard spike, but she has good form. She'll continually get better."

In all, Bryan is most pleased that the team concept envelopes her girls even when the scoreboard reads the wrong way.

"They don't get down on each other," she said. "Maybe when they're not winning they'll talk a little louder, but they don't get angry and put themselves in a panic."

Sandwiched between their last two conference matches is a non-leaguer with Grayling. All games are at home in the team's final tune-up for the conference tournament, which will be held Saturday, Feb. 22, in Kalkaska.

Keith Grunch 10.

Friday night against Kalkaska, they sailed out to a 30-point lead before coach Todd Klinger took out his starting unit in favor of his second and third string. The final tally read 64-52 Charlevoix.

A team known for its size and stifling press found a new way to win. Dial long distance. That is, the three-point shot.

Kalkaska, looking to surprise the Rayders, started the second quarter in a zone defense. The Rayders lofted five three-pointers, three by Spencer Handy and one apiece from Skylar Handy and Grunch for a 24-11 quarter.

For the game, they drilled a season high nine treys. Grunch had four and lead the team with 14 points. Spencer Handy finished with 13 points as did Colin Carr. Skylar Handy doing a little bit of everything dished out nine assists and snared five rebounds to go along with 12 points.

"He's a pretty smart basketball player," coach Klinger said. "He has a knack for finding the basketball."

The junior varsity team follows the same schedule as the varsity team, tipping off each game at 6 p.m.

Freshman basketball keeps perfect record

Behind gaudy individual performances, the Charlevoix Rayder freshmen basketball team shot down two foes, Kalkaska, 75-63, and Petoskey, 45-37, running their record to a perfect 10-0.

Sean Stockman erupted for 34 points, 29 in the second half against Kalkaska. "I told the kids to clear out of his way, get him the basketball, and he turned it loose," coach Brandon Bruce said of Stockman, who also swished 12 of 14 free-throws.

Shay Hutchinson scored 19 points and snared 15 rebounds in the gritty win over Petoskey.

Adam Wood scored seven, while dishing seven assists, and Russ Ward secured 10 boards to go along with eight points in Monday's victory at Petoskey.

LEGAL NOTICE 210

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE

Mika, Meyers, Beckett & Jones, P.L.C., is attempting to collect a debt and any information obtained will be used for that purpose.

Default has occurred in the conditions of a mortgage made by Tomalynn S. Suttle, a married woman, mortgagor, of 00819 South Wilson Road Boyne City, Mi 49712, to Old Kent Bank, a Michigan banking corporation, mortgagee, dated September 6, 1995, recorded in the Office of Register of Deeds for Charlevoix County, on September 8, 1995, in Liber 289, Page 250. Because of said default, the mortgagee has declared the entire unpaid amount secured by said mortgage due and payable forthwith.

As of the date of this notice, there is claimed to be due for principal, interest at the rate of 8.625% per annum and expenses on said mortgage the sum of $50,453.63. No suit or proceeding in law has been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and the statute in such case made and provided, and to pay said amount with interest, as provided in said mortgage, and all legal cost, charges and expenses, including attorneys' fees allowed by law, and all taxes and insurance premiums paid by the undersigned before sale, said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the mortgaged premises at public sale to the highest bidder at the main lobby of the County Building, 301 State Street, Charlevoix, Michigan, on Friday, February 28, 1997, at 10:00 a.m.

The premises covered by said mortgage are situated in the Township of Wilson, Charlevoix County, Michigan, and are described as follows:

Commencing at the South Quarter corner of Section 5, Town 32 North, Range 6 West, thence North 00°11'20" East along the North and South quarter line 1390 feet for the point of beginning; thence South 89°55' West 1327.1 feet; thence North 63°02'40" East 1491.3 feet to the North and South quarter line; thence South 00°11'20" West along said quarter line 674.2 feet to the point of beginning, being a part of the East half of the Southwest Quarter, Section 5, Town 32 North, Range 6 West, subject to a 33.0 foot right of way for County Road across the Easterly portion thereof.

The property is commonly known as 00819 South Wilson Road, Boyne City, Michigan.

Notice is further given that the length of the redemption period will be one (1) year from the date of sale, unless determined abandoned in accordance with MCL 600.3241a, in which case the redemption period shall be 30 days from the date of sale.

School board told how to spend money

ers actually in front of the students in a classroom into those which really dilutes the reality."

The ratios are an average and include special education teachers, but were questioned by everyone including Grundman, whose numbers show an impressive ratio of 1 teacher to 16 students.

> "Do we really need three varsity football coaches?"
> — Sue Goss, taxpayer and parent

"I have very few classes with 16 kids in them," he said. "There are always three different ways to prove three different points."

Still, Vogel implored the board to stick to their pledges of lower class sizes, and questioned that the recent count doesn't "literally" reflect classroom populations.

"Work as hard as you can to stick with the ratios you've adopted," Vogel said.

The school board heard more ideas on how to spend the district's money than on how to save it, noted board president, Mary Lee Campbell.

Goss asked the board to look into the number of paid coaching assistants the district has, "Do we really need three varsity football coaches?" She asked about pay to play athletics, which requires students to pay a fee in order to participate in sports.

Teacher Karen Pierce mentioned cutting the bus runs from two to one, "as Petoskey does, and every district around us."

Teacher Annemarie Statsick urged the board to be more aggressive in seeking grants.

One aspect of the budget not scrutinized was the $170,000 budgeted to pay for land off of M-66, which some hope will house an entire campus of K-12 Rayders.

The board listened to people's ideas and rarely spoke. And before going into closed session to bat around what they just heard, board members were given a stern warning from resident Charlie Butcher.

"You talk to the taxpayers to do these things for the children, but you're missing the point," he said. "You must show a sound fiscal plan, down to earth, or the kids will not get a damn thing."

Indoor soccer

Charlevoix Indoor Soccer League, games played Saturday.

The Lumps pounded the Black Team, 7-4, behind Steve Carland's hat trick. Jon Boss and Ryan Vogelheim scored 2 apiece for the Lumps. Meg Spang tallied 2 goals for the Black Team, along with a goal from both John Doskoch and Drew Belding.

The Green Crew outscored Yellow Snow, 10-8, as Noel Kammermann exploded for 6 goals. Steve Carland scored 3 more times, and Taya Drost tallied a goal for the Green Crew. Jill Ramsey, Ryan Ellis, Greg Bryan, and Matt Mikulski all scored 2 goals for the Yellow Snow.

The Gray Ghosts haunted the White Knights, 12-2. Ted Schaperkotter and Lindsey Carland each scored a hat trick for the Ghosts, and Erika Kammermann, Ted Newcomb, and Jamie Oppermann all scored twice for the Ghosts. Hagen Manker had both goals for the Knights.

Lake Charlevoix provided old-time refrigeration

By Geoffrey Reynolds
Courier columnist

As winter creeps slowly past and our minds look forward to spring weather, little do we realize the benefit the cold once brought to Charlevoix. Cold made ice and ice made money once it was harvested and sold for cooling purposes.

Early in Charlevoix's history, settlers and later resorters counted on the frigid temperatures and the clear waters of Lake Charlevoix to make ice for their refrigerators, a practice that lasted until about the 1930s. Electric and gas refrigerators took the place of the ice box.

Many Charlevoix residents remember when ice was delivered in large cakes by the ice man, first in a wagon and later by truck. Their names were probably Charlie Heise or Ben Yettaw from the Charlevoix Coal & Ice Co., Dave J. Eckinger, and Henry W. Widdifield of the Widdifield Co. After unloading a foot-thick 18-inch-square cube into a canvas bag with a pair of ice tongs, the ice man would eventually place two cakes in the ice box. Once there, the cold air created by the cube would circulate throughout the box, cooling food for several days. But how the cake was created is the real trick to the story.

The art of ice harvesting started with the colonial immigrants to the United States because of their own refrigeration needs. About 1830, ice harvesting as a business began and was a considerable industry between 1870 and 1930.

January and February were the peak months for ice harvesting, but locally ran into March some years. Local labor was arranged and the work commenced at a feverish pitch as workers rushed to beat winter storms and spring thaws. Charlevoix Coal & Ice Co. employed between 28 and 37 men to work an eight hour day at 40 cents per hour during the 1930s.

FROM THE ARCHIVES

To harvest the ice, the labors first plowed snow off acres of ice with horse drawn scrapers. Second, the workers marked the ice to be cut with a two inch groove, using squares and hand markers to establish accurate measurements. Behind the markers came the cutters. At this step the ice was cut about two-thirds through of a 12-inch thick sheet of ice. Power rotary cutters were later used to expedite this step, making more ice faster and more profitable. The first one in Charlevoix might have been Eckinger's converted Model T engine-driven model.

The next step involved long, large toothed hand saws or sharp, metal-ended poles to cut through the remaining ice layer, separating it into large cubes. After being separated, the cubes were placed in a channel of water called a float. Here the cubes were pushed along and eventually loaded by conveyor belt or hand onto sleighs, trucks, or railroad cars for transport to large ice houses nearby or far away. Eckinger's Model T engine-powered loader averaged 60 of the 150-pound cakes per minute.

After shipping , the cakes were placed in an ice house for storage until the summer months. It was stacked about three inches apart to avoid freezing together. Next the ice was covered with sawdust to keep it from thawing. The ice house was also insulated to retard thawing.

Soon the warmer months of summer arrived and ice became necessary for food preservation. The large ice houses in Charlevoix were for the Coal & Ice Co., located in the abandoned Ferry Avenue sugar beet factory, the Inn Hotel, Belvedere Hotel and the Chicago Club. Each customer's ice was harvested near their ice house for convenience. For the Inn Hotel and Chicago Club jobs, each owner earned a profit of $50 for Heise and Yettaw per year, with the stipulation that a pollution test be conducted each year. These men also provided ice for the railroad companies' parlor and dining cars at about $30 per freight car load as well as the Booth Fisheries and Robbins Fish Co. ice houses.

After electric and gas refrigeration units became affordable to the consumer, the inconvenience of the ice box was retired. While this is better for food safety today, the romance of the ice harvest still beckons tourists to spots like Crossroads Village, near Flint, for this annual event.

Weekend accident injures three locals

At about 6:25 p.m. Friday, there was a three vehicle accident on Marion Center Road at Black Road in Marion Township.

LuAnn Vandenberg, 35, of Lord Road, Charlevoix, was driving north on Marion Center Road. She had two passengers, Delores Rozema, 58, and Troy Vandenberg, 2.

Nicolas Antinossi, age 36, from Essex Road, Ellsworth, was driving his truck behind the Vandenberg vehicle.

Karen Scadin, 60, from Rushton Road, Central Lake, was driving her vehicle south on Marion Center Road. She had two passengers, William Scadin, 60, and Phyllis Armould, 59.

As Vandenberg drove around a curve, her right wheels caught on the edge of the pavement. When she tried to steer the vehicle back onto the road, she lost control, slid over the centerline and struck the Scadin vehicle head-on.

When Antinossi saw what was occurring in front of him, he tried steering to the right shoulder. The impact of the crash pushed the Vandenberg vehicle back into its own lane and the right rear corner of the Vandenberg vehicle struck the left front corner of the Antinossi truck.

The crash totaled both cars driven by Vandenberg and Scadin. The Antinossi truck appeared to have slight damage to the parking light and bumper.

Delores Rozema received an injury to her shoulder. Phyllis Armould received injury to her chest and pelvis. Scadin injured her knees and chest. They were transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital by Charlevoix Ambulance. They were all treated and released, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

All occupants of the vehicles had been wearing their seat belts. No citations have been issued at this time. The case remains under investigation. No alcohol had been involved. The road had been slippery from fresh fallen snow.

Weight Loss War

City, county employees try to feed defeat

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Cruel and unusual punishment.

That's what Charlevoix County employees were calling the cakes, cupcakes and ice cream that were delivered to their offices almost hourly Friday by city employees.

The strategy was part of a weight loss competition that the two buildings have been participating in since the New Year.

"I think we finally got even," said the city of Charlevoix's deputy clerk treasurer, Bea Parton.

City employees baked some of their most tempting treats Friday and delivered them to the county building for consumption.

The final straw for one county employee was the arrival of a Black Forest Chocolate cake with cherries on top. Glaze dripped over its edges.

"This was cruelty to the max," said the county's chief deputy from the register of deeds office, Jan Dohm. "I hadn't cheated until now."

"Paybacks," she added. "We're going to get them."

Paybacks are traveling across State Street in the form of chips and dip, hot fudge sundaes, donuts and hot chocolate, mini cheesecakes, submarine sandwiches, popcorn and fresh, hot pizza.

One cake, which looked delicious, ended up being a Styrofoam impostor. The sundaes had a surprise ingredient — a touch of snow.

The competition is expected to end Saturday, April 1. However, weigh-in could come as early as Thursday, March 27, so all will be over before Good Friday.

The winner will be decided by the greatest total weight loss of the participants from the two buildings.

There are 15 dieters for the county and 11 for the city. Nobody's talking about how much has come off, or been added given the increased opportunities.

There's money involved — $260 that was accumulated by each participant pitching in $10. However, the prize could possibly be less than is being invested in area bakeries and grocery stores as each team tries to force the other to pig out.

Just before closing time Friday, a phone rings in the county building. "She's busy eating right now," said Toni DeVries of her co-worker. "Can you hold on a second?"

Verdict: McSauba employees not guilty

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Dwight "Ike" Boss and Dale "Bo" Boss, Jr., were released from allegations of gross negligence Wednesday when a jury foreman spoke the word "no."

The answer came from the jury of seven people, which includes an alternate. The group deliberated for about four hours after hearing 10 days of testimony in a civil lawsuit filed against the Bosses by Tom and Sally Sikavitsas. The Charlevoix couple alleged that the two city employees mishandled their son following a 1992 skiing accident, causing him further harm.

"After two years, I was really pleased for Bo and Ike," said the Bosses defense attorney, Gretchen Olsen, of Plunkett & Cooney, out of Petoskey. "They were vindicated. It's been a difficult time for them."

Ike Boss is the city's recreation director and Bo Boss runs Mt. McSauba, the city-owned ski hill where Dustin Sikavitsas, then 6 years old, was injured when another young skier collided with him.

There were several elements for the jurors to consider. However, once they determined that the Bosses were not guilty of gross negligence, there were no damages to contemplate.

Gross negligence is defined as "conduct or a failure to act that is so reckless that it demonstrates a substantial lack of concern for whether an injury results," according to 33rd Circuit Court Judge, Richard M. Pajtas, who instructed the jurors on

Schools look toward student drug testing

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Charlevoix High School students could be asked to submit to drug testing.

Coaches, administrators, and school board members have been in meetings discussing tightening up the school's drug policy, and the last notch in the belt may include randomly testing students for drug, alcohol and tobacco use.

"As a coach you'd like to be able to stand by a kid, and say 'he's okay,'" said Scott Kelly, first-year varsity baseball coach. "If you don't do drug testing then how do you know if you've got a clean individual."

Kelly along with varsity basketball coach Jim Kanine are heading a committee that is restructuring to school's drug policy. Testing Charlevoix students is being considered.

"It would be a possibility, but I'm not in favor of random drug testing," Kelly said.

His idea of testing is to make sure students are following through on the backside of offenses, and those not yet caught be tested based on suspicion, such as smelling alcohol on the breath or responding to a rumor.

"You could clear a kid's name real quick," he said.

However school board member Jerry Owens, whose urgings brought about this look into the school drug policy, said testing should be random.

"It's well worth our while," he said. "We have an obligation and responsibility to protect our students."

Assistant principal Barry Anderson, while stating that there is a "use problem," said he's not completely sold on the idea of testing students in any way.

He said the costs might be too great monetarily and socially, the tests would just prove that students are or are not using.

Media wrong about Ramsey investigators

National media were convinced that Boulder, Colo., detectives were in Charlevoix over the weekend.

Vans were parked outside John and Patricia Ramsey's summer home on Belvedere Ave., as the reporters waited for a chance to film more on the JonBenet Ramsey murder investigation.

"They were certain we were going to do something to that house," Charlevoix Police Chief, Dennis Halverson, said.

Halverson was inundated Thursday with 25-30 calls from reporters who were tracking the Colorado investigator. Friday, he called Boulder to find out whether the agents would be coming to Charlevoix. He was told no.

During an early trip by investigators, they went from Boulder to Atlanta, Ga., and then on to Charlevoix to search the family's summer home. With investigators conducting more interviews of family and friends in Atlanta last week, some people believed that their next step would again be Charlevoix.

Thursday evening, a local television station had broadcast a report that the investigators were staying in a Petoskey hotel and would be in Charlevoix Friday.

"They are definitely not here," Halverson said Friday.

On Monday, it was confirmed that the men investigating the Dec. 26, 1996, death of the 6-year-old had not come to town.

Safety seminar series set

Events in brief

Cabin Fever shopping comes to Charlevoix

Chase those winter blues away. The Charlevoix Retail Promotions Committee is sponsoring Cabin Fever Weekend, Friday and Saturday, Feb. 28 and March 1. The weekend offers the best deals in town and the chance to get out and about after this long winter.

Look for the Cabin Fever Weekend poster displayed at participating Charlevoix merchants' shops. Warm up with the red hot deals. Shop Charlevoix.

For more information on participating business, see pages 12 and 13.

Library funding to be explained by treasurer

Rick Brandi, Charlevoix city treasurer will discuss the reorganization of funding for the Charlevoix Public Library during a meeting at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 5, at the library.

According to a new Michigan law, community libraries will no longer be funded through taxes collected by public schools. Voters will be asked to support the library through a millage.

The presentation is sponsored by the Charlevoix Area League of Women Voters.

Calendar of events ready for pickup

The Charlevoix Area 1997 Calendar of Events has been released by the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce. The calendar includes events in Charlevoix, Boyne City, Boyne Falls and East Jordan.

A copy can be picked up at the chamber office at 408 Bridge St.

Garden Club to discuss garden therapy

"Garden Therapy" will be the topic at the next Charlevoix Area Garden Club meeting on Tuesday, March 11. The program will be presented by Rebecca Haney, beginning at 1 p.m. at the home of Marge Dinwiddie. Special guest will be a staff member from the Bergmann Center.

Garden Therapy is the use of garden-related activities to enhance human health. This program will provide the club with valuable information toward plans to start a garden therapy program at the Bergmann Center.

Anyone interested in joining the club should call Joan Knecht at 547-5072. Prospective members should live in the Charlevoix area and be interested in gardening, flower arranging or related topics.

Dispute resolution training offered for free

A dispute resolution training session is scheduled for 9:30 a.m.-1:30 p.m. Saturday, March 1, at North Central Michigan College.

Tom Shea will present an overview of mediation, recent trends and review the process. He has been invited by the Citizen Dispute Resolution Service, Inc., which is a community-based service using volunteer mediators to provide alternative dispute resolution to citizens in Charlevoix and Emmet counties.

Those who will benefit from this training are interested in mediation for themselves or their business, in becoming a volunteer mediator or are currently a mediator.

Many types of disputes can be resolved though mediation — property damage, neighborhood issues, business and contract disputes, landlord/tenant disagreements and family disputes.

There is not cost for the training. However, preregistration is required and can be done by calling 547-1771.

Principal promotes reading

Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Some children have escape routes planned out their bedroom windows in case the principal is spotted meandering up the driveway.

However, Charlevoix Elementary School principal Dick Swenor receives the opposite reaction when walking up his students' driveways.

He comes bearing books and cookies as he spends his one day a month visiting the homes of some of his kindergarten through second-grade students. He comes to read.

"It's a promotion for reading," he said. "And it gets me closer to the kids. As an administrator, it's what I miss the most, not being with the kids as much."

Three families are picked each month for a visit. They all gather around on a sofa or a fireplace as Swenor reads some of today's classic children's tales. Sometimes it's just the immediate family. Other times grandparents, uncles and aunts assemble. Monday at Greg and Bonnie Withrow's house, other parents with their children became part of the read-in.

> "... It's what I miss the most, not being with the kids as much."
> — Dick Swenor, elementary principal

"It's always a variety, I never know who is going to be there when I get there," Swenor said, recalling one of his first visits when he was gathered around an old-fashioned wood stove with the children dressed up in ties. "That was a neat time."

At the Withrow home, he read "Officer Buckle and Gloria" and "Magic Fan," with the children helping him turn pages. To cap off the visit, he did a little magic trick before snacking on ice cream and cookies.

"Their access to information is tri-fold if they are good readers, and it will give them a head start and a huge boost to their education," he said of the importance of reading. However, these visits may do more than preach the necessity of reading. Swenor would agree. They bridge that formal and anonymous gap that can creep into administrator-student relationships.

Perhaps Katie Withrow, a kindergartner, put it into perspective the best. She counted the five friends she had invited over, then realized her small mistake. Principal Swenor came over, and that made six friends.

Break-ins end with prison sentence

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Ed Sumner, owner of Seeley's Printing, watched a man he said "terrorized this city" be sentenced to prison for six to 20 years.

Kevin Shane Lancewicz, 25, of Alpena, pleaded guilty Jan. 20 for breaking into a Charlevoix business and trying to crack the safe. The plea came after the Charlevoix County Prosecutor, Mary Beth Kur, agreed not to charge the man with four other counts of breaking and entering at Charlevoix businesses, which included Marvin's Gardens, The Rainbow Shoppe and Village Inn Pizza.

In his opportunity to share the impact that the break-in had on him and his business, Sumner said that the female employee who came in that morning was devastated, and probably won't be the first one to arrive at work anymore.

"I hope your sentence is fair and he pays back our society," Sumner said.

The safe breaking charge is punishable by up to life in prison. Breaking and entering is a felony punishable by up to 10 years.

When warrants were issued for Lancewicz's arrest in December, he was awaiting sentencing in Alpena for similar crimes. He must now serve time for crimes in both counties.

Lancewicz stood before the court in a Charlevoix County Jail jacket and blue jeans as his attorney, Mark Muniak, said he has shown remorse for his actions.

The man was arrested after tracks from Marvin's Gardens were followed to a local motel, where Lancewicz had been registered the night of the crime. When approached in Alpena, the man gave local police a confession of his crimes. He was already out of jail on bond when the break-ins occurred.

Lancewicz declined to make a statement to the judge before sentencing Friday.

Before sentencing, 33rd Circuit Court Judge, Richard M. Pajtas, reviewed facts of the case, noting that about $7,000 in damage was done at the businesses during the crimes.

Pajtas said the Lancewicz already has had an opportunity to reform. He then sentenced him to six to 20 years for the safe breaking and six to 10 years for the breaking and entering.

The sentences will be served at the same time, according to the law.

A tow truck driver prepares to haul away this vehicle that only has two wheels left. Joshua Castle, of Rapid City, lost the back end of his 1981 Pontiac about 5:27 p.m. Saturday while trying to get across the bridge. The strut underneath the car apparently caught on the bridge and tore the rear axel from the car, police chief Dennis Halverson said.

Events in brief

Cabin Fever shopping comes to Charlevoix

Chase those winter blues away. The Charlevoix Retail Promotions Committee is sponsoring Cabin Fever Weekend, Friday and Saturday, Feb. 28 and March 1. The weekend offers the best deals in town and the chance to get out and about after this long winter.

Look for the Cabin Fever Weekend poster displayed at participating Charlevoix merchants' shops. Warm up with the red hot deals. Shop Charlevoix.

For more information on participating business, sec pages 12 and 13.

Library funding to be explained by treasurer

Rick Brandi, Charlevoix city treasurer will discuss the reorganization of funding for the Charlevoix Public Library during a meeting at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 5, at the library.

According to a new Michigan law, community libraries will no longer be funded through taxes collected by public schools. Voters will be asked to support the library through a millage.

The presentation is sponsored by the Charlevoix Area League of Women Voters.

Calendar of events ready for pickup

The Charlevoix Area 1997 Calendar of Events has been released by the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce. The calendar includes events in Charlevoix, Boyne City, Boyne Falls and East Jordan.

A copy can be picked up at the chamber office at 408 Bridge St.

Garden Club to discuss garden therapy

"Garden Therapy" will be the topic at the next Charlevoix Area Garden Club meeting on Tuesday, March 11. The program will be presented by Rebecca Hancy, beginning at 1 p.m. at the home of Marge Dinwiddie. Special guest will be a staff member from the Bergmann Center.

Garden Therapy is the use of garden-related activities to enhance human health. This program will provide the club with valuable information toward plans to start a garden therapy program at the Bergmann Center.

Anyone interested in joining the club should call Joan Knecht at 547-5072. Prospective members should live in the Charlevoix area and be interested in gardening, flower arranging or related topics.

Dispute resolution training offered for free

A dispute resolution training session is scheduled for 9:30 a.m.-1:30 p.m. Saturday, March 1, at North Central Michigan College.

Tom Shea will present an overview of mediation, recent trends and review the process. He has been invited by the Citizen Dispute Resolution Service, Inc., which is a community-based service using volunteer mediators to provide alternative dispute resolution to citizens in Charlevoix and Emmet counties.

Those who will benefit from this training are interested in mediation for themselves or their business, in becoming a volunteer mediator or are currently a mediator.

Many types of disputes can be resolved though mediation — property damage, neighborhood issues, business and contract disputes, landlord/tenant disagreements and family disputes.

There is not cost for the training. However, preregistration is required and can be done by calling 547-1771.

Principal promotes reading

Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Some children have escape routes planned out their bedroom windows in case the principal is spotted meandering up the driveway.

However, Charlevoix Elementary School principal Dick Swenor receives the opposite reaction when walking up his students' driveways.

He comes bearing books and cookies as he spends his one day a month visiting the homes of some of his kindergarten through second-grade students. He comes to read.

"It's a promotion for reading," he said. "And it gets me closer to the kids. As an administrator, it's what I miss the most, not being with the kids as much."

Three families are picked each month for a visit. They all gather around on a sofa or a fireplace as Swenor reads some of today's classic children's tales. Sometimes it's just the immediate family. Other times grandparents, uncles and aunts assemble. Monday at Greg and Bonnie Withrow's house, other parents with their children became part of the read-in.

> "... It's what I miss the most, not being with the kids as much."
> — Dick Swenor, elementary principal

"It's always a variety, I never know who is going to he there when I get there," Swenor said, recalling one of his first visits when he was gathered around an old-fashioned wood stove with the children dressed up in ties. "That was a neat time."

At the Withrow home, he read "Officer Buckle and Gloria" and "Magic Fan," with the children helping him turn pages. To cap off the visit, he did a little magic trick before snacking on ice cream and cookies.

"Their access to information is tri-fold if they are good readers, and it will give them a head start and a huge boost to their education," he said of the importance of reading. However, these visits may do more than preach the necessity of reading. Swenor would agree. They bridge that formal and anonymous gap that can creep into administrator-student relationships.

Perhaps Katie Withrow, a kindergartner, put it into perspective the best. She counted the five friends she had invited over, then realized her small mistake. Principal Swenor came over, and that made six friends.

Break-ins end with prison sentence

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Ed Sumner, owner of Seeley's Printing, watched a man he said "terrorized this city" be sentenced to prison for six to 20 years.

Kevin Shane Lancewicz, 25, of Alpena, pleaded guilty Jan. 20 for breaking into a Charlevoix business and trying to crack the safe. The plea came after the Charlevoix County Prosecutor, Mary Beth Kur, agreed not to charge the man with four other counts of breaking and entering at Charlevoix businesses, which included Marvin's Gardens, The Rainbow Shoppe and Village Inn Pizza.

In his opportunity to share the impact that the break-in had on him and his business, Sumner said that the female employee who came in that morning was devastated, and probably won't be the first one to arrive at work anymore.

"I hope your sentence is fair and he pays back our society," Sumner said.

The safe breaking charge is punishable by up to life in prison. Breaking and entering is a felony punishable by up to 10 years.

When warrants were issued for Lancewicz's arrest in December, he was awaiting sentencing in Alpena for similar crimes. He must now serve time for crimes in both counties.

Lancewicz stood before the court in a Charlevoix County Jail jacket and blue jeans as his attorney, Mark Muniak, said he has shown remorse for his actions.

The man was arrested after tracks from Marvin's Gardens were followed to a local motel, where Lancewicz had been registered the night of the crime. When approached in Alpena, the man gave local police a confession of his crimes. He was already out of jail on bond when the break-ins occurred.

Lancewicz declined to make a statement to the judge before sentencing Friday.

Before sentencing, 33rd Circuit Court Judge, Richard M. Pajtas, reviewed facts of the case, noting that about $7,000 in damage was done at the businesses during the crimes.

Pajtas said the Lancewicz already has had an opportunity to reform. He then sentenced him to six to 20 years for the safe breaking and six to 10 years for the breaking and entering.

The sentences will be served at the same time, according to the law.

OPINIONS

Cooperation can cause community gain from tragedy

The City of Charlevoix and its parents should ban together to protect young people playing at Mt. McSauba.

Throughout the unsuccessful lawsuit that involved two Charlevoix parents suing city employees for their handling of an emergency at the small ski resort, there has been much blame cast: parents for not watching their children and city employees for not being adequately trained or calling an ambulance when a child was injured.

Nobody can turn back the hands of time and undo what has happened to Dustin Sikavitsas. However, we all can look ahead, set aside past differences and take steps to protect children as they ski, slide and snowboard their winter evenings away.

First, parents should accompany their children to the ski hill. If they cannot, they should plan to have a chaperone there. Most parents wouldn't dream of dropping young children off at the lake to fend for themselves while swimming, even if there is a lifeguard on duty. Skiing is no different.

Parents should help monitor the level of horseplay on the hill, assist the ski patrol.

Also, they should file treatment waivers with Charlevoix Area Hospital to allow medical professionals to immediately treat the child if they are brought in without a parent.

EDITORIAL

According to Nancy Ellison, of Charlevoix Area Hospital, the law states that unless a child is in severe threat of dying, they can't be treated without parental permission. Forms permitting treatment are available at the hospital and kept on file in the emergency room.

When parents pay a daycare provider or choose a school for their children, they often consider the number of young people already attending. The number of adults vs. children at Mt. McSauba should suggest to parents the need for their presence.

However, accidents can happen even when adults are around.

The city should enact stricter guidelines for the young people to follow. We are glad to see that the ski patrol has taken the initiative to smooth out jumps that the kids spend the evening trying to build.

Also, the city manager or city council should call for and approve a written emergency policy. To date, the unwritten policy initiates that parents be called if the injury is not serious and an ambulance if it is.

We believe, for the protection of children and city employees who have to make the decisions, that an ambulance be called in most cases. Unless the injury can be covered with a Band-Aid or the parents are present, professionals should be called to examine the child.

Fire chief, Doug Carver, said that city ambulance personnel would not have a problem responding to increased calls from Mt. McSauba. If the injury is not serious, there is no charge for the run. If it is serious, emergency medical professionals are on the scene in minutes to treat the child. This can be done without parental permission. If the child is taken to the emergency room, the parents will be billed for the service, about $160, Carver said.

What would be sad at this point, is if Charlevoix blew up a local lawsuit for the sake of gossip and didn't learn from all that's happened.

Rather than cast blame, we can make changes that will benefit the entire community.

Letters to the editor

Editor's note: The letters received from Charlevoix Middle School students were part of an assignment to write and submit a letter to the editor. Some of the letters ran in last week's edition.

Sixth-grade girls need basketball team

Editor:

I am a student at the Charlevoix Middle School who is concerned about sports for the sixth-grade girls. I think that if the sixth-graders had their own basketball league it would give them a chance to play more aggressively. They would also probably feel more comfortable playing with their own grade.

Another thing is that the seventh- and eighth-graders would probably enjoy having their own teams. This would also make the teams smaller so the girls would get to play more.

I hope you will think about his idea.

Sincerely,
Ashley Ager

Student wants indoor ice skating rink

Editor:

I think Charlevoix would love to have an indoor ice rink! An indoor rink will provide fun and exercise for all ages! There will be an active hockey league, figure skating, and free skating, just for having fun!

I'm positive this ice rink will make a wonderful profit! You could run it all year long! It would provide jobs for people in Charlevoix, enjoyment and fun! You just have to install one!

Yours truly,
Mike Castiglione

Littering should have stronger punishment

Editor:

I feel littering should be a more serious offense.

Littering is pollution, and that's a serious problem to our environment. All kinds of animals are dying from our pollution. It can even be bad for your health!

Pollution makes "Charlevoix the Beautiful" not so beautiful. The disgusting looking trash clutters the sidewalks. After a while it even starts to smell! I think it will be a serious problem eventually!

We can stop this though! I think we should raise the fine for littering. We should try to get money for the environment. We could also have volunteers pick up the trash, and make "Charlevoix the Beautiful" as beautiful as it can get.

Thank you for your time.
Yours truly,
Pete Gorkiewicz

middle school.

Our middle school needs bigger and better classrooms, like the band room for example. It's so small that we have to send the seventh- and eighth-graders to the high school. It's just big enough for the sixth-graders. Also when the sixth-graders are having band class, the children in the gym make the band room shake. Plus, I think we need a room just for assemblies because we have to use the gym and sit on the hard floor. That makes our legs fall asleep. We also need a bigger gym because there is barely enough room for gym activities.

Our school needs to be handicap accessible because children in wheelchairs and on crutches can not get to the second floor because our school is all stairs.

The ceiling and floors look and feel like they are going to cave in! In one of the classrooms the ceiling is leaking. Another thing is I think every classroom should have carpeting because the rooms on the first floor have to listen to squeaking from the second floor.

Please don't get me wrong, we get a great education in the school we are in now, but it's falling apart!

Yours truly,
Alicia Liberty

High school student supports city employees

Editor:

I think that we should have a new middle school. One reason I feel that way is that the band room shakes when the people on the gym floor walk on it above us. We have the feeling it is going to fall. The ceilings and walls are falling apart, and dripping everywhere, especially in Mr. Hopkins room.

Another thing that is a problem is that it is not accessible for handicap people to get into the school building or get up the flights of stairs. Those are only "some" reasons why I think we should get a new middle school.

Sincerely,
Crystal Meredith
Charlevoix sixth-grader

High school student supports city employees

Editor:

I am outraged that the Sikavitsas family is suing to obtain any amount of compensation from the accident with their son.

The Boss family did everything they could after a incident like this one. Ten to 15 minutes can pass before you determine the proper steps to take. Next I'd like to ask, Why was a 6-year-old boy left at the ski hill with his 10-year-old brother. In a recent article it stated the boy's brother was there with him, but having younger siblings myself, I know that a 10-year-old boy could not responsibly take care of a 6-year-old.

Had the parents been there everything might have gone differently. The family should also be thankful that their son is alive and the Bosses did what they did, because I don't feel the older brother could have handled the situation. It seems that the Sikavitsases are giving everyone credit for their son's injuries but themselves, which is where I believe the blame should be placed.

Despite all their son's injuries, it is rather ironic that he plays hockey for the Char-em travel team. His injuries are presumably affecting the rest of his life so immensely that he needs lost wages. However, four years later he is engaging in a full contact sport, a game that allows full body checking. I feel that anyone who has allegedly sustained these significant injuries would not be able to play any sports, especially those that are as rough as hockey.

Somehow when I put all the pieces together it just doesn't work out. The allegations brought against the Bosses are extremely trivial, and the categorization of this highly respected family will forever leave a scar on our community's reputation.

EDITH

EDITH GILBERT

All over the country, city planners are sharpening their pencils and desperately trying to come up with new concepts and designs for urban living. Fancy sketches are modeled after the old town square or Victorian villages. Old strip malls are abandoned and new, glitzier malls are built to accommodate no less than a dozen shoe stores, all under one roof.

But so far, no one has come up with anything that compares to the ease and convenience of living in a small town like Charlevoix.

Let's take the four square blocks of our downtown, starting at the bridge and stretching to Oleson's Market. Old timers call this the valley. I can easily take my daily list of "things to do" and accomplish more in an hour, than my city cousins can achieve in a day! The bonus time one has gained can be used for important things like golf, tennis, skiing, sailing and fishing; pleasant things that make a person live a longer and fuller life.

My daily list usually includes a stop at the bank, Post Office, Courier, the hardware store, and sometimes the drug store, book store, and camera shop. If I need to buy a gift, I can stop at the flower shop, The Apple Tree, Shop of the Gulls, or order fudge at Murdick's Fudge store.

All I need to do, to get where I'm going, is cross the street or walk down the block.

I can grab a bite to eat or pick up a pizza for lunch, or grocery shop for dinner. I can even go to a movie matinee. But best of all, and what the malls can never offer, is the opportunity to stop by city hall and vote, stop by the title company, and keep an appointment with my doctor, lawyer or architect. I can visit the chamber of commerce office for a friend and learn what summer rentals are available.

All this I can do while enjoying the view of Round Lake, watching the seagulls circle the marina, the ducks waddle around in the park, or waiting for the bridge to go up and down.

Now I admit that there are some things one can't get in the valley anymore. Things like lumber, paint, a driver's license and gas. I think twice before I drive all the way over to Wolohan's or Kmart. That takes another five minutes!

Still downtown has other time-saving advantages. Think of all the people one bumps into while making the rounds! You can ask the fire chief about the fire at the florist shop, or the city manager about what happened at the council meeting. You can tell the treasurer of the historical society, "I was going to call you. Kwikie Duplicating has our printing ready," or inform the teacher, "I picked up a costume for Suzie at the Rainbow Shoppe."

Yep. All these city planners need to do is head north and mosey around Charlevoix for a couple of days. Chances are they will never leave!

Wedding

Christal Ann Siwarga and Ronald Lee Brady were married Saturday, Sept. 21, 1996, at the Alpena Civic Center.

The bride is the daughter of Ron and Rhonda Siwarga, of Charlevoix, and the groom is the son of Rick and Linda Brady, of Lachine.

Joe Brisson, of Ossineke, and Mary Stoinski, of Herron, sang "I Swear" and "Cross My Heart" to Brisson's soft guitar accompaniment as guests were seated by ushers Bob Brady, uncle of the groom from Alpena, and John Hall, a long-time hunting friend from Davison.

The bride was escorted down the aisle on the arm of her father. Her gown was candlelight satin with hattenburg lace, V-neck, long lace sleeves and a basque waist. Intricate pearl and sequin appliques covered the dress, and lace trimmed the cathedral train. She carried a cascade bouquet of ivory silk highlighted with accents of iridescent foilage.

The bride's cousin, the Rev. Sandy Uptegraff, of Flint, performed the 4 p.m. double-ring rites. During the ceremony, the unity candles were lit to the singing of "Love Can Build A Bridge."

Emily Smith, friend of the bride from Grand Rapids, served as maid of honor.

Bridesmaids were Callie Siwarga, sister of the bride, from Kalamazoo; Candy Siwarga, sister of the bride, from Charlevoix; Natalie Nadeau, sister of the groom, from Alpena; Margaret Ramberg, the bride's aunt, from Davison; and Becky Roloff, a childhood friend and neighbor from Charlevoix. They wore chiffon dresses of deep plum with a sweetheart neckline, sheered satin cap sleeves, fitted bodice and floor-length train.

The junior bridesmaid was Melissa Barnum, cousin of the bride, from Grand Blanc, and the flower girl was Jessie Nadeaum from Oscoda. They both wore full-length candlelight satin dresses with Cinderella sleeves and matching satin back bow. The attendants each carried similar versions of the bridal bouquet. All arrangements were designed by the groom's mother.

Gordon Aikens, friend of the groom from North Dakota, served as best man.

Groomsmen were Darryl Black, uncle of the groom, from Ohio; Leon Black, uncle of the groom, from Charlotte; Peter Nadeau, the groom's brother-in-law, from Alpena; Bruce Ramberg, uncle of the bride, from Davison; and Jeff Van Sipe, cousin of the groom, from Alpena. Craig Siwarga, the bride's brother, served as junior groomsman and ringbearers were Cameron and Collin Eubanks, twin cousins of the bride, from Flint.

Following the ceremony, 200 guests enjoyed dinner and dancing at the Alpena Civic Center.

The newlyweds spent their honeymoon in the Upper Peninsula and are making their home in Gaylord.

The bride is a 1993 graduate of Charlevoix High School and the groom is a 1986 graduate of Alpena High School.

Dianne Foster is a new addition as a monthly columnist for the Courier. She will be reviewing books and authors. Her column will run in the family section on the fourth Wednesday of every month.

It has been said that one never quite recovers from reading "The Education Of Little Tree" by Forrest Carter. Years have passed since I first read the book, but I've never forgotten the effect it had on me. There is something compelling about a story narrated with a child's sense of wonder and brevity.

This is a simple story, exquisitely told, of a Cherokee Indian boy growing up in the Tennessee hills with his grandparents during the Depression of the 1930s. But beyond that it goes much deeper. The quality of the characters, and the struggles they face to stay together, holds you tightly until the last page is turned. The book then never completely releases you.

Little Tree, 5, and his grandfather are full of mischief and adventure that will surprise, delight, and sweep the reader away in laughter. The dialogue is a brilliant masterpiece that few authors can sustain for 216 pages. The honesty, love, trust in goodness, and sadness is moving.

"Little Tree" is one of those rare books recommended for ages 12 through adult. It makes a wonderful family read-aloud and an equally enjoyable read-alone. Chances are you will see things differently after reading it. Read it, or listen to it on tape, and you'll see what I mean. It deserves "classic" status.

On the nonfiction front, an unexpected national bestseller has been a hot title in Charlevoix this month. "The Millionaire Next Door" has been receiving nearly as much talk around town as the popular Winona's Web, Simple Abundance, and the endearing "Mitford" series. Professors Thomas Stanley and William Danko spent 20 years studying America's wealthy and how they got that way. These people became millionaires through modest incomes, thoughtful planning, and simple lifestyles, not through lotteries, inheritance, or even intelligence. The study reveals seven common characteristics among those who successfully build wealth. A "big hat and no cattle" isn't one of them.

Once you begin reading this book it's hard to put down. When you finish it, you will pick it up and start all over again, probably with a note pad nearby and a highlighter in hand. This book should be required reading as early as middle school, definitely in high school, and each year thereafter. I'm betting that Stanley and Danko are millionaires by now but, hey, they wrote the book.

Local Grange hosts Fiddler's Jamboree

Toes will be tapping this weekend at the 19th annual Fiddler's Jamboree. The event is sponsored by the Barnard Grange and dedicates the day to old-fashioned square dancing and fellowship.

The jamboree runs from 1-5 p.m. with a dance beginning at 7 p.m. Musician and caller registration begins at noon. There will be open mike time from 5-7 p.m.

Guests are welcome to take part in the music by bringing their fiddles and other non-electric instruments to the Jordan Valley Express, on M-66 in East Jordan, next to Glen's Market.

Each fiddler will play three tunes. Special groups will be featured throughout the day. Young fiddlers from Charlevoix, Petoskey and the East Jordan area are part of the afternoon highlights. Fiddlers will range from the ages of 5 to 95.

Food will be served throughout the day in the East Jordan Senior Center.

There is no cost to join the activities, however, donations will be accepted at the door.

Co-chairs for this year's event are Gary and Janet Stutzman, Bill and Donna Stevens, Rod and Kim Stevens, Dan and Sherry Johnston, Jack and Catie Stebe and Lloyd and Sara Cummings.

For more information, call Bill Stevens at 547-9153, Gary Stutzman at 547-1331 or Rod Stevens at 547-5757.

Males targeted to stop teen pregnancy

Northern Michigan Planned Parenthood has been awarded a grant from the Eugene B. Renkiewicz Memorial Fund of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation to develop and pilot a male responsibility program aimed at adolescent boys.

"While most efforts to prevent unwanted pregnancy focus on women and girls, men and boys are clearly a significant part of the equation," said Lori O'Neill, planned parenthoods' education coordinator.

Through the project, the group will review successful programs that target males, develop a program to meet local needs and values, and pilot the program in at least two locations in Charlevoix County during the coming year.

"The ultimate goal is to develop a program which will reduce teen pregnancy by impacting adolescent males' self-esteem, communication skills, knowledge of sexuality and contraception and decision-making skills," O'Neill said.

With data showing that males typically become sexually active at earlier ages than females, a large proportion of pregnancies to teen mothers are fathered by males several years older.

More than half of the women who have had intercourse before age 15 report having been forced into sexual activity.

Obituaries

Robert Allen (Butch) Pischner

Robert Allen (Butch) Pischner, 52, of Phoenix, Ariz., died Feb. 14, 1997, at the Thunderbird Nursing Center in Phoenix.

Funeral Mass will be held at Holy Cross Catholic Church in July and burial will follow in Holy Cross Cemetery, Beaver Island.

Mr. Pischner was born on Dec. 30, 1944, on Beaver Island, the son of Elston and Lovicey (O'Donnell) Pischner. As a teenager the family moved to Mesa, Ariz. He graduated from Mesa High School.

Robert worked in the grocery business, at a warehouse until he went into the U.S. Army. He served extra time, most of which he fought in Vietnam. After the service, he worked at the warehouse until he changed jobs to driving a cement truck.

Robert is survived by four sisters; Eleanor (Don) Mooney, of Beaver Island; Barbara (Paul) Pellum, of Utah; Helen Deakin, of Las Vegas, Nev.; Kay Petersen, of Glendale, Ariz.; and two brothers, Richard of Phoenix, Ariz., and Donald (Jan) of Glendale, Ariz.; and several nieces and nephews.

Robert was preceded in death by his parents and a sister, Sharon Ashcroft.

CHARLEVOIX UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

The expansion at Charlevoix United Methodist Church adds 10,000 square feet to the 119-year-old building. It is located next to the church, where the old parsonage used to be.

Church dedicates new addition

On Sunday, March 2, the congregation of Charlevoix United Methodist Church will consecrate their new education and fellowship addition to the church. The addition, which is located on the corner of State and Clinton streets, houses a large fellowship hall, kitchen, restrooms and five classrooms.

A spring open house is being planned for the Charlevoix community.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By the Rev. Lowell Anderson
Charlevoix Assembly of God

The Community Christian Unity Service, which was held at St. Mary's Catholic Church on Sunday evening, Feb. 9, was a wonderful expression of the unity there is in the Person of Jesus Christ.

When we focus on Him, and not on our doctrinal distinctives, the denominational boundaries that tend to separate us are obliterated. While I'm not advocating the dissolution of denominations or the diminishing of denominational distinctives, I am advocating more unity services and similar events that will bring all Christians in Charlevoix together in worship and witness.

The tenth chapter of John records Jesus' discourse on the Shepherd and his sheep. Using this metaphor Jesus explained many things about his relationship with his flock, and his care for them. Toward the end of the discourse, he made the statement, "I have other sheep that are not of this sheep pen." (John 10:16a)

There are no doubt many interpretations of what Jesus meant by this. What I believe he was saying is that there are more followers of his than are part of the particular group with which I fellowship.

On Feb. 9 we enjoyed an opportunity to experience first-hand the reality that the Lord truly has "other" sheep! While one pen has the name Methodist over the entrance, and others Congregational, Church of God, Reformed, Catholic, Lutheran, Baptist, Assemblies of God, etc., wherever the sheep gather together in his name, he is present with them! And when they gather together out of their separate "pens," he is there, too!

The Charlevoix Ministerial Association is sponsoring another community worship on Sunday evening, May 18.

The event will be a Praise Gathering. It will be an evening of praise and worship with congregational singing interspersed with instrumental and vocal special music.

Make plans now to spend the evening worshiping Jesus Christ in the company of his "other" sheep.

From praying hands to ensuring security

Former Father sells insurance

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Fred Brucker has always traveled a conservative path.

Most of his life was spent either preparing for ordination or serving as a Catholic priest.

After 20 years of being a man of the cloth, Brucker has come to Charlevoix to sell insurance as one of Allstate's good hands people. The change involves more than a career move, but an alteration to his entire lifestyle.

"It was time for a change," he said. "The Lord directed me to move on, and that's what I'm trying to do.

Brucker didn't tell his story of why he left the priesthood. He did, however, indicate the difficulty.

"It's like a divorce when someone goes through that," he said.

Being familiar with life's sudden changes, and having counseled parishioners through those times, Brucker's choice to sell insurance isn't so far removed from his previous calling.

Brucker sits back in his new office chair and tells a story of the night a parishioner's house burned down. He awoke in the safety of his own home at about 5 a.m. and heard about the nearby disaster. He threw on clothes and went to his neighbor. When Brucker embraced the man, his devastation poured out in tears on the priest's shoulder. He was able to offer assurance with his presence.

Assurance is what Brucker still offers today.

"When someone sells you insurance, you walk out the door with a promise," he said. "You hope you never use it. It helps if someone can be there with you to help you get back to square one.

"It's a beautiful thing."

Brucker is the new insurance salesman in town. And he's currently operating a one-man show for Allstate. Until Thursday, he was sitting on the floor of his newly renovated office at 1100 Bridge St. The front office is where a car hay used to be for the former gas station and car detailing businesses.

He sells home, auto, life and business insurance, along with policies for snowmobiles, boats and motor homes. Renters are not excluded from his options.

"I'm building this from the ground up," he said.

Allstate performed a demographics study on Charlevoix before moving Brucker to town. The northern lower peninsula is where the Brucker wanted to be. He vacationed in Charlevoix years ago and worked as a house boy to wealthy families in Harbor Springs during childhood summers in the 1960s.

Fred Brucker is a one-man show at Charlevoix's new Allstate office on South Bridge Street. He is answering the phone, making calls and building clientele for the new office.

When the company was looking for a location, Brucker said he didn't care which side of town he lived and worked on — as long as they were the same. His summertime stop in Charlevoix had shown him the traffic backed up at the bridge.

Brucker was raised in Dowagiac, near Michigan's southern border to Indiana. It's a town about the size of Charlevoix. He left his hometown in 1958 to go to high school at St. Joseph's Seminary in Grand Rapids. He then went on to study philosophy at Aquinas and St. Jerome's colleges and earn a bachelor's degree. Four years of theology at St. John's Seminary in Plymouth brought Brucker a master's in divinity and his ordination.

His years of running a parish, school and cemetery have ended. The insurance office is a much smaller business venture for Brucker.

After completing five weeks of training with Allstate and becoming licensed by the state, Brucker is setting up shop. He said he realizes that long hours and hard work are ahead, but the single man doesn't mind. He spends his day building clientele and his nights walking along the streets and lakes of his new home.

The Allstate office can be reached by calling 547-7450.

Business in brief

Medusa recognized for safety record

Medusa Corporation honored employees of its Charlevoix plant for their 1996 safety performance at an awards banquet Feb. 19. The employees accumulated more than 300,000 employee hours with no lost time accidents.

The award, a solid mahogany plaque featuring a solid bronze casting of the Medusa Corporate logo, was presented by George E. Uding, Medusa Corporation president.

The President's Safety Excellence Award is presented each year to the Medusa Manufacturing Group operating with the best overall safety record. John Laney, plant manager, accepted the award on behalf of the employees.

Medusa Corporation produces and sells portland and masonry cements; mines, processes, and sells aggregates, home and garden, and industrial limestone products; and provides construction services for highway safety.

Local Realtors earn million-dollar awards

Charlevoix student qualifies as National Merit finalist

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

If Mike Post wins a National Merit Scholarship, chances are he'll have to be pulled away from the set of the gangster movie that he's filming.

Post is a finalist for the prestigious scholarship. He scored a 1400 on his PSAT exam in October of 1995, which qualifies him as a semi-finalist. Now, after turning in applications, essays, and references, the senior is one of 14,000 high schoolers across the country still in the running for 7,000 available scholarships.

"My PSAT score carried me through it, and since it's been two years of whittling people down," he said.

Post said the final whittle should take place in the spring, and expects to be informed either way by May. Still, he's not exactly sitting on pins and needles in anticipation.

"It's been two years," he said. "I have other stuff going on that's more current that I had kind of forgot about the whole thing," he said.

The current happening that has overshadowed a normally sought-after scholarship is his movie. The art class project, which he compares to "True Romance," is part of his master plan to go into movie directing. Post has always wanted to be a storyteller. He kept a journal for an English class and was into drawing comics. But he's settled on the silver screen for his medium of choice.

"There's so much detail involved, and you can do more with a movie," he said of scene-setting. "If I get real people, hey, then they can do the action, and I wouldn't have to draw them."

Mike Post

Post is a big fan of Stanley Kubrick and Francis Ford Coppola.

"I have never seen a bad Coppola film," he said. However, he has his eye on some smaller budget directors such as the Coen brothers who did "Fargo" and "Raising Arizona," and Sam Raimi, whose credits includes spoofs on old horror movies.

If it's on the big screen he'll watch it, but behind the movie aficionado lies a serious, intense student.

"He's the most intuitive student I've ever met," English teacher Pat Conway said. "He has a general style you don't see in many secondary or even college students."

Conway, whose English III class Post took while a junior, sees Post as a student with impeccable comprehensive skills.

"He grasps some of the deeper concepts that most adults and college students won't," he said. "I continue to be impressed by him even though he is no longer in any of my classes."

Should Post receive the merit scholarship, he's thinking about using it toward tuition at the University of Michigan or the University of Southern California film school.

Be prepared for a visit with the tax accountant

Rather than haul a mountain of itemized receipts and old tax papers from your office to the desk of your CPA, the Michigan Association of Certified Public Accountants offers the following tips on what may be needed to file your tax return:

— Prior to meeting with your tax preparer, review last year's tax return. This will ensure that you consider all income and deductions you've claimed in the past. Reviewing your last return can help you remember these details and determine whether they may be applicable to the current year.

— Sort canceled checks and paid receipts by payee or type of deduction such as "doctor" or "hospital," to save yourself the expense of having your CPA do what you can easily do.

— Be sure to bring all W-2s and 1099s. If you sold stocks in 1996, bring the information as to the date of the sale and proceeds from the sale, as well as the data from when you bought it, including date of purchase and the amount you paid. If any dividends have been automatically reinvested, gather the amount of those dividends. Since these add to the cost basis of the investment, they will alter your gain or loss.

— If you sold your house in 1996, bring all closing papers from the sale and the papers from when you purchased it. If you bought another house, bring the bill of sale and those closing papers. Any major improvements to the house you sold, such as adding an addition, installing central air conditioning or lawn sprinklers, need to be documented as they may reduce the gain on the sale.

— If you claim children under 14 as dependents and they have investment income greater than $650, but less than $5,000, you may elect to include their investment income (interest and dividends) on your tax return. Be sure to bring your children's 1099s and social security numbers. If you choose not to include such income on your return, your child will nevertheless pay taxes based on your top marginal tax rate.

— With day care becoming more common, the "Child and Dependent Care Credit" may be claimed against your income tax liability. If you or your spouse are gainfully employed with dependent children under the age of 13 in day care, you will need to bring names and social security numbers of the eligible children, along with a summary listing of all child care expenses incurred/paid in 1996. Remember to bring information about care givers such as name, address, telephone number and either social security number of federal employer identification number.

— People receiving Social Security benefits will need to bring Form SSA-1099, the "Social Security Benefit Statement," showing total social security benefits paid to you as well as Medicare premiums paid on your behalf. Up to 85 percent of social security benefits may be included in gross income.

— Finally, write down any questions you may have before meeting with your CPA. If these questions are based on an article you've read, it's helpful to bring that with you. If a friend has offered tax advice given to them by their tax preparer, be sure to ask your CPA, since that advice may not be applicable to all situations.

Board moves slowly on new drug policy

need to do this? I don't think so," he said. "Perhaps we should look at it, but whatever we do, we are going to be moving slowly on this."

Kelly said that whatever policy is adopted, it should be in place by the start of the next school year.

Anderson said that general changes in the current drug policy are needed.

"What we have is that if a violation occurs between sports season, we're not dealing with that and we should be," he said.

Policy now suspends a student from 20 percent of the season or activity and requires the student to seek professional counseling. The second offense suspends the student from all extracurricular activities for one full year.

"We need to toughen it up, especially if it includes the sale of illegal substances," Anderson said.

Also at issue is the degree of the crime. As it stands, a crime is a crime. But Kelly indicated that some definition needs to be in place and distinctions made between the level of offenses.

"It's all lumped together as one, and that doesn't seem appropriate for minimal things like M.I.P. (minor in possession) offenses."

Owens said he sees a lot of unanswered questions in the school's policy and hearkened on the vagueness of requiring a student to seek help. These are thoughts echoed by Kelly.

"There is no way to encourage a kid to get help," Kelly said. "It's just sit out a few games, and that's it."

The student handbook will be modified, and tougher penalties probably handed out, but will specimen jars be as well?

"Drug testing policies put us in line for a real world situation whether it's college or in the workplace," Kelly said.

City gets grant to pay for moving storm water retention pond

Charlevoix has been granted a $135,000 economic development grant from the Michigan Renaissance Fund. The grant will pay for moving the storm water retention pond in the industrial park.

The grant will allow for the expansion of CPI Products, Inc. The city will be responsible for providing $15,000 toward the improvements, however, CPI has agree to cover $10,000. And the company is paying more than $40,000 to purchase the two remaining lots in the park.

"We are pleased to be able to provide the necessary support for projects such as this which result in job opportunities for Michigan residents," said Doug Rothwell, chief executive officer for the Michigan Jobs Commission.

CPI designs and builds automation tooling systems, primarily for the automobile industry in the United States and abroad.

The company employs 50 employees at the Charlevoix plant, which is expected to increase to 65 with the expansion.

Basketball future shines bright

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

During the junior varsity game Friday night (the second layer of a basketball triple header against East Jordan) Sean Stockman, one of the freshmen team's top players, was relaxing in the bleachers when a woman from a few rows up asked how their game went.

Stockman turned around and politely explained that they had won. He paused, grinned and said, "We're undefeated."

Stockman's 14 points and seven rebounds helped the freshman team to a 69-47 victory and run the squad's record to 11-0. However, when he says they are undefeated, he is not talking about just this winter. He's talking all-time.

"We were in complete control. Whatever Petoskey tried, our kids handled."
— Todd Klinger, junior varsity coach

These fabulous freshmen mowed down all opponents without a blemish during seventh-grade, did the same in eighth-grade, and stand just a few games away from doing the same as ninth-graders.

They reflect just part of why Charlevoix basketball's future is so bright.

No to be outdone, the Rayder junior varsity team crushed East Jordan Friday 72-58, running their record to 17-2, which includes more blowouts than one hand can count, and a 70-56 squeezing of Petoskey last Tuesday, avenging one of the season's defeats.

"We were in complete control," coach Todd Klinger said, of the game against the Northmen. "Whatever Petoskey tried, our kids handled."

Both of Charlevoix's young teams are deep, versatile and talented.

Klinger's squad has had eight different players be the high scorer for the team in games.

Justin Thorp has been a pillar in the pivot, dominant on the offensive glass and his mere presence gave the Rayders a good half-court look when their suffocating press wasn't clicking on high.

He and Colin Carr, whose 13 points a game has leads the team, have moved up to the varsity team for the remainder of the season. Still, the team hardly missed a beat in whipping the Red Devils.

"They have a lot of confidence in their ability," Klinger said. "When they step on the floor, they expect to be in every game, if not to win."

Keith Grunch and Skylar and Spencer Handy, twins who happen to be the only freshmen on the junior varsity squad, remain in the back court. All three can pile on the points with their jump shot, but it's their passing ability which thrills the crowd. Each made an eye-popping pass leading to easy baskets during a fourth quarter run to pick up a dwindling 7-point lead to 20, sealing the coffin on the Red Devils Friday.

Carl Goff, Todd Schapperkotter and Tom Cunningham provide front court strength, size and skill beyond just Thorp.

"Those guys will get in there and mix it up with anyhody," Klinger said.

"THE ONE YOU CAN RECOMMEND"

Volleyball team takes tournament going in districts

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

As they had all season long, the Rayder varsity volleyball team stood tall, and dominated their Lake Michigan division foes in capturing the conference tournament title Saturday in Kalkaska.

The lady Rayders advanced to the semi-finals by winning five of six games in their pool with East Jordan and Boyne City. They thumped Kalkaska 15-7, 15-6 in the semi's, before downing Traverse City St. Francis 15-11, 15-8 to claim their third straight tournament crown.

However, this is the first time Brenda Bryan's team has been labeled conference champions. They took the regular season crown as well. The last two years middle-of-the-pack, regular season finishes kept them from the title.

A clean sweep this season made all the more sense, according to Bryan.

"It was a nice way to do it, actually it was the right way to do it," Bryan said.

It may prove to have been the season's toughest day, as the Rayders had to play 10 straight games with just warm-up breaks between rounds.

"We may have been more focused on our game as a result because all we were doing was playing, playing, and playing. There wasn't any room for any other thoughts," Bryan said.

With all the games, every player took a turn in the spotlight, but Bryan singled out one Rayder in particular as the day's most valuable player, Lyndsey Blechel.

"As the setter, she's really the one who kind of runs the show on the floor," Bryan said. "She can tell who's hitting real well, and who's not, and lay-off from those for a while. She's got a strong arm, and can set the ball from cross-court if she has to."

The next step for the Rayders is trying to advance through the district tournament. Facing much of the same competition as they did on Saturday, Bryan's crew is the favorite and has won this tournament two years in a row.

> "We have to stay focused, be confident, and never give up. In this format, you must be able to count on your teammates."
> — Brenda Bryan, varsity coach

Play begins in Harbor Springs on Saturday, March 1. The Rayders play in the day's first game at 9 a.m. against Boyne City. The winner advances to the semi-final match at about 11 a.m. against East Jordan, who drew a first-round bye.

The championship game should start at 1:30 pm.

The matches are decided by the best two out of three games, so the margin for error is slimmer than it is in the regular season. The single-elimination tournament differs from most that Charlevoix has faced this season.

"We have to stay focused, be confident, and never give up," Bryan said. "In this format, you must be able to count on your teammates, 'I'll cover you if you can't get there,' kind of attitude."

Undefeated

Charlevoix's seventh-grade basketball team has completed a perfect 10-0 season which included a first place finish in the Harbor Springs Tournament. Team members are front (from left), Shawn McDonough, Patrick Gowell, Ben Speigl, Ryan Rafacz; standing, Rob Boss, Jerry Zeitler, Jim Shepherd, Keith Daly, Kyle Dobrowolski, Matt Goff, Scott Parrish and coach Hank Wagner. Absent was Joey Granath.

Teams have strategy smarts

Their talent and depth withstanding, Klinger points to another attribute that has spelled success for the Rayders — their smarts.

"They are real students of the game," he said. "They go hard, and they understand offensive basketball, defensive basketball, and all the situations that come up."

The same can be said of Brandon Bruce's freshmen squad, whose success cannot be pinned on just one, two or even three players, but 10.

Russ Ward and Stockman have both dominated games at times.

"I have not seen too many who can keep up with those two, they fill the lanes just beautifully," Bruce said.

The mite size of Jon Boss and Ryan Vogelheim only disguises their true might.

"Those two just work their butts off," Bruce said, noting that everyone on the team plays and contributes.

Shay Hutchinson was the force in a nip and tuck win over Petoskey, scoring 19 points and making 15 rebounds. Ryan Potter, Michael Ricks and Andy Granath all have taken turns shining. Adam Wood has point guard skills that keep all those playing involved in the scoring.

"His mind is always looking toward what he can do next, 'Who can I get the ball to,'" Bruce said. "He'll see a cut and boom and make a pass for an easy lay up."

They joke and goof around like only freshmen will, but this lightheartedness just masks their true identity once the ball is tipped.

"The competitiveness of this group is tremendous," Bruce said. "They are a win-at-all-costs group."

A team that demands competition, hasn't been getting as much as they'd like.

Due to bad weather and schools dropping their program for lack of numbers, many of the team's games have been canceled this season.

They nearly practiced the entire month of December before finally playing a game.

The result has been intense workout sessions, and as Bruce said, "They're really sick of having to play each other."

In time, other area teams could be feeling the same way.

Freshmen Sean Stockman (middle) and Ryan Potter (right) stand their ground under the boards waiting for a rebound against an East Jordan Red Devil. The freshmen team upended East Jordan 69-47 on Friday, then crushed Traverse City St. Francis 89-54 Saturday running their record to 12-0. The team will look to complete an unblemished season as they take part in the Petoskey Invitational, starting at 6:30 p.m. Thursday Feb. 27.

Varsity downed by Red Devils

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Despite a strong defensive start, the Charlevoix Rayder varsity basketball team could not hold off the East Jordan Red Devils, falling 58-49. The defeat dropped the Rayders' record to 4-15, 1-10 in league play.

A push and shove first quarter had the Rayders down 10-7, and early in the second quarter the Rayders took a 13-11 lead on a Steve Carland lay-in. However, East Jordan reeled off the game's next 13 points during a 17-4 run to take an 11-point halftime lead.

"We've been there before," coach Jim Kanine said of his team's lack of offensive punch. "It was a typical game that we've been struggling with for the last four weeks."

The Rayders shot just 17-67 from the field. Carland led the Rayders with 10 points.

An excitement filled the air with the "promotion" of two players from the highly potent junior varsity squad. Forward Justin Thorp was Kanine's first substitution, and guard Colin Carr followed soon thereafter. Both received loud applause when entering the game, and Thorp received a mini-standing ovation upon checking out of the game for good in the fourth quarter.

"Justin makes us bigger, while Colin makes us a lot quicker," Kanine said.

Carr was second to Carland in scoring with nine, and Thorp, strong on defense, was second on the team with six rebounds. Ben Owens led the Rayders with nine boards. Both gave the Rayders a little more spunk than seen in recent weeks, and according to Kanine will see plenty of action in the season finale Tuesday at home against Harbor Springs and next week during district playoffs.

Districts begin Monday, March 3, in Harbor Springs. Charlevoix plays Mancelona in the first game, which starts at 6 p.m. Winner plays at 6 p.m. Wednesday, March 5, against the Boyne City Ramblers, who drew a first-round bye..

Youth basketball results from Saturday

Elementary division:

The Shooting Stars shot past the Bulls, 19-15, behind Allie Manker's nine points. Kristy Skippergosh scored five and Shayna Drost four for the Bulls.

The Pistons stopped No Limits, 16-14, as Alyssia McDonough scored 12 for the Pistons and Sarah Cross scored eight for No Limits.

Final standings for the season are: Bulls, 6-1; Pistons, 4-3; No Limits, 3-4; and Shooting Stars, 1-6.

Tournament play will begin Friday, March 7, and continue Saturday, March 8, at the Charlevoix Middle School Gymnasium.

Junior High Division:

Up North nipped the Purple Puffalumps, 32-31. Jessie Murray scored 13 and Danielle Vogelheim added 11 for Up North. Meghan Vogel led all scorers with 23 for the Puffalumps while Kelly Reid added eight.

Swish Phish swam all over the Revolutions, 25-9. Stacy Skippergosh and Sally Beemon each scored eight for the Phish while Beth Arnold scored four points for the Revolutions.

The Bad Dogs slipped by Swisher Sweets, 24-23. Leslie Hoffman scored 13 points for the Bad Dogs. Kari Miller scored seven

Little League registration scheduled

The Charlevoix Little League will hold player sign-up for boys or girls ages 8 to 15 interested in playing Little League baseball. Registration will be held as follows:

— 9-11 a.m. Saturday, March 1, at Charlevoix Elementary School.

— 7-9 p.m. Wednesday, March 5, at Charlevoix Elementary School.

— 8:30-10 a.m. Saturday, March 8, at Charlevoix High School.

Players who are new to the Charlevoix Little League must bring a copy of a certified birth certificate. Fees and fund-raisers will be explained at the sign-ups.

Players who sign up late have a big impact on teams, equipment, uniform orders and league registration. Any player that signs up after the above dates will be required to pay a late fee. No player will be accepted after Saturday, April 12.

Players who are 16 to 18 years old should contact the league if they are interested in playing Big League Baseball. Depending on the interest, a team will be formed.

Anyone interested in helping volunteer with the program should contact Karen Bakker at 547-5900 to get involved.

Employee lawsuit originally intended to be against city

their responsibilities Wednesday.

The Sikavitsas were represented by Pointer, Joseph & Corcoran, a Charlevoix firm. Following the trial, Dick Joseph said the term "gross negligence" in itself sounds as though there are criminal aspects involved and that "it makes the Bosses out to be bad guys rather than just negligent people."

Joseph said the lawsuit was originally intended to be against the City of Charlevoix. However, the city was given governmental immunity.

For Bo and Ike Boss, relief is too mild a word to describe their feelings since the jurors cleared their names.

"I'm overjoyed, ecstatic," Ike said Friday.

Bo said he is filled with mixed emotions, which include feeling bad for the young Dustin Sikavitsas, who is now 11.

Although the case was lost, final defeat for the plaintiffs will come if how Mt. McSauba is run does not change, Joseph said.

"If they don't have a better policy, then this really was a lost cause," he said.

In 1993, the city hired a ski patrol to monitor the slopes, where children ski and snowboard, and are pulled to the top with a rope tow. However, the city still operates the hill with an "unwritten" safety policy that leaves Bo and Ike responsible for deciding whether a child needs emergency treatment or if they can wait for a parent to arrive.

City manager, Mike Wiesner, said he's relieved the suit is over.

"We think we run a safe operation at Mt. McSauba," he said. "We continually strive to improve operations and make them safer on a continuing basis."

Meeting to discuss Big Rock's end

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission staff will hold a public meeting 7 p.m. Tuesday, March 4, to discuss the decommissioning of the Big Rock Point nuclear power plant at the Charlevoix Township Hall, 12491 Waller Road.

The plant's operating license will expire on May 31, 2000.

The meeting will be chaired by Philip Johnson, Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners chairman.

The program will include presentations by the NRC on the decommissioning process and by Consumers Energy on decommissioning activities. A question-and-answer period will follow.

Consumers plans to continue operating the plant until the expiration of its license. Once operations cease, the utility plans to leave the facility in safe storage for 27 years to allow much of the on-site radioactivity to decay, and then dismantle the plant. Consumers then plans to restore the site to a "green field" condition. These plans are spelled out in detail in the Big Rock Point post-shutdown decommissioning activities report.

The report was submitted to the NCR Feb. 27, 1995, and is available for public inspection in the NRC local public document room at North Central Michigan College in Petoskey.

Another public meeting will be held before license termination and completion of decommissioning activities at Big Rock Point.

SCRAPBOOK

Fish for sale, no freezers

From accounts of the early missionaries in the area, lake trout caught by the fishermen sometimes weighed 60 to 70 pounds each.

By the beginning of the 20th century, the average was down to about 30 pounds.

There was enormous loss in the fishing industry, due mostly to the lack of adequate refrigeration. Special rooms with thick walls lined with sawdust were built. With ice taken from the lakes during the winter months as the only refrigerant, and with ample sawdust to slow the melting, these "coolers," the fore-runners of the modern refrigerator, were the only means of preserving the fish.

From accounts of the early days most of the fishing, up to about 1870, was done from the famous Mackinaw boats.

Dan Schwartz is believed to be the last man to sail one of the Mackinaw boats.

This was the "Shoodle," owned by John Wilson of the Chicago Club, for whom Schwartz worked for years.

Medical scholarships available

A future nurse and physician from Charlevoix County may find their education furthered by two scholarships available through the Charlevoix County Community Foundation.

The Charlevoix Area Hospital Nursing Scholarship will award a $500 scholarship to a student who lives in the hospital service area and has been accepted at a Michigan accredited school of professional nursing.

The Julius Gilbert Memorial Scholarship, named in honor of a former trustee of the Charlevoix Area Hospital, will give a $500 scholarship to an area student attending an accredited medical school.

The deadline for both scholarships is Thursday, May 1, and awards will be announced early in June. Applications are available through the counseling offices at all high schools in Charlevoix County, at the Women's Resource Center in Petoskey, the Beaver Island Medical Clinic, and at North Central and Northwestern Michigan colleges.

Candidates for scholarships will be selected on their academic performance, record of student and community service, leadership, dedication to their future profession, and letters of recommendation. The nursing scholarship will also consider financial need.

Additional information about the scholarships is available by calling Robert Tambellini, foundation executive director at 536-2440, or Diane Kidder at Charlevoix Area Hospital, 547-4024.

Women plan benefit for breast cancer research

By Janenne Irene Harrington

A group of Charlevoix women have committed themselves to a cause out of personal experience.

The Beta Sigma Phi Chapter of Charlevoix has taken on planning a benefit for breast cancer research. Many of the 30 women who make up the group's ranks have battled with the disease in their own bodies or along side a loved one.

"Everybody is like your sister," said Kathy Engle of the women who share a struggle that she is overcoming. "We all have more empathy."

One in every eight women is expected to be diagnosed with breast cancer in their lifetime. The risk increases with age, with women over 40 seeing more cases.

The Sue DeYoung Memorial Walk is one way Charlevoix can contribute to breast cancer research and offer a tribute to area women who have battled the disease, said Sorority member, Phyllis Hess. The walk was last held in the fall of 1995. After a skipped year, the sorority is planning a Saturday, May 17, event and hoping to top the $10,000 last donated to the American Cancer Society for their cause.

The walk was planned for the spring, opposite Breast Cancer Awareness Month, which is in October. Spring, the women hope, will entice more walkers and have less conflicts with other local events.

"Mother's Day is a nice time to recognize this," said Charlevoix resident and sorority member, Judy Edgar, noting that mom can he remembered by walking to raise money to find a cure for the disease that now comes to one in every eight women.

At least three of 30 women in the sorority have heard the words, "You have breast cancer." Others have watched sisters, parents, neighhors and friends go through chemotherapy, mastectomies and reconstructive surgery.

"We're all touched by it," said Judy Edger, who is now fighting hone cancer that has resulted from an

School funding numbers arrive

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Charlevoix schools could receive twice the increase in per-pupil funding from the State of Michigan than it expected.

. Gov. John Engler went public with his education budget last week, announcing that Charlevoix's piece of the pie will he $9,344,764, equating to a per pupil allocation of $6,938.

Superintendent Roberta Jackson said that while the district is amid five-year budget talks, their actual 1997-98 school year budget will not be ironed out until May. But the five-year plan includes a "conservative" increase of $115 per pupil spending. Throughout last month's budget talks, Jackson hinted that it could be as high as $137.

The governor's funding breaks down to an increase of $245 per pupil. However, the unexpected increase hasn't been met with open arms in the superintendent's office.

"I'm skeptical, even with this release," Jackson said. "I hope we get every cent."

The figures released from Lansing are somewhat misleading. They included money to be spent on at-risk students, vocational and special education programs. Those dollars must be spent within that umbrella, and therefore are not part of the general fund hudget.

According to Robert Harris, spokesmen for the State Board of Education, $107 dollars of the per student increase is slated for those categories, meaning that Charlevoix's general fund budget will receive a $138 dollar increase in per student.

Those numbers are more in line with what the district had expected, but Jackson is of the I'll-believe-it-when-I-see-it stance.

"When we actually receive those dollars and receive that revenue, then we'll plug it into our budget," she said, noting that her office is still assuming a more conservative increase. "Once you spend money, you can't get it back."

Jackson's office has had no contact with Lansing about their,

Appledore pulls out of Charlevoix harbor

By Janenne Irene Harrington

The Appledore will no longer be sailing from Charlevoix. After reaching an agreement to let the ship's owners put a kiosk for ticket sales outside the chamber of commerce, the ship's owners decided the move wasn't worth the cost.

"We didn't think it was going to be good enough," said Appledore co-owner, Bill Allgaier.

The partners originally asked the downtown development authority about putting a kiosk in East Park, at the corner of Clinton and Bridge streets. However, the board's officials advised against even presenting the plan to city council, noting that new construction in a city park wouldn't even be considered.

After selling tickets out of a tiny office on Bridge Street, next to Whitneys of Charlevoix, the owners desired a more visible location.

As other options were explored, the city agreed to let the ship owners use a piece of already cemented area near the chamber as a headquarters from which to sell tickets. However, Allgaier said that after pricing the kiosk, which would cost more than $10,000 between its construction and installing utilities, the move to the new location wouldn't work.

"We only got a one-year commitment out of the city," he said, noting

Foster care program coming to Charlevoix

"Preparing Youth for Independent Living," a foster parent coalition training for all licensed foster families, will be held from 9 a.m.-noon Saturday, March 15. This training is for all families fostering teens and will be held by Child and Family Services at the Edgewater Inn, 100 Michigan Ave.

Bill White, from the Family Independence Agency, will be advising foster parents on how to better prepare their teen-agers for independence. Teens in Foster Care are often uncertain of their future, and ill-equipped for independence. Preparation should begin with teens as young as 14, regardless of the long term plan. This workshop will provide information and tools for foster families to use when working with this population of young people. Services available through the Youth In Transition Program will be discussed. This workshop is sponsored by the Foster Parent Training Coalition..

Anyone interested in registering, please call the Child and Family Services Petoskey office at 347-4463 or Traverse City office at (616) 946-8975.

Choral performs gospel music

Members of the Little Traverse Choral Society are performing a gospel concert in their upcoming concert. This is the second concert in the group's 10th anniversary series, and is titled "Amen! A Gospel Celebration." The first performance will be 8 p.m. Saturday, March 8, in Petoskey at the United Methodist Church, located at 1804 E. Mitchell St. The group will then present an encore performance at 4 p.m. Sunday, March 9, in Harbor Springs at the United Methodist Church, 343 E. Main St. Admission is $6 for adults and $3 for students.

Events in brief

New Girl Scout cookie in this year's sale

A new Girl Scout cookie will be included in this spring's sales, Le Chip. The chocolate chip, hazelnut cookie is made with oatmeal and has a chocolate coated bottom.

Girl Scout cookies will be on sale from Friday, March 7, to Sunday, March, 16, throughout the area. Cookies will be delivered between Thursdays, April 10 and 20. The price remains at $2.50 a box.

Every year Girl Scouts from eleven counties in northwest lower Michigan participate in the annual cookie program. Girls work together in setting troop goals. Each girl and her family assume the responsibility of taking orders and delivering cookies. Proceeds from the sale Girl Scout program at both the troop and council level.

Boating safety classes changed

The dates of the Boating Safety and Seamanship classes provided by the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary have been changed.

The classes, which were originally scheduled for Mondays and Wednesdays will be taught on Tuesdays and Thursdays, beginning Tuesday, March 11. Classes end with a final exam Tuesday, April 29.

Class topics include equipping the boat, handling the boat, piloting the boat, weather and boating, and trailering the boat.

Tuition and materials is $25.

For more information, call Jeannie Kilgour at 547-0983.

Big Rock Point shuts down again

Big Rock Point nuclear power plant shut down at 10:32 p.m. Sunday to repair a core spray isolation valve. The valve is used as a backup to a main valve that would spray water on the nuclear reactor for cooling during an emergency.

The valve was not functioning outside the guidelines established by the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission, according to plant public affair director, Tim Petrosky.

"We determined it was prudent to shut down and perform immediate repairs," Petrosky said, of the valve which is located inside the containment sphere.

The plant is expected to be shut down for about a week.

There have been several outages at the plant this year, one that lasted about 50 days. Because of the down time, the plant's refueling outage has been rescheduled from April to August. The fuel currently in the core has not run to levels low enough to warrant refueling as previously planned.

School board member resigns

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

The Charlevoix Board of Education will be working shorthanded as member Sulane Hamilton has resigned, effective March 18. The board meets March 17, which will be her last meeting as an active member.

"It's the right thing for me to do at this time, so that's why I did it," she said, giving no other indication for her abrupt departure.

Hamilton is serving her third year of a four year term, her first on the board.

As a result of Hamilton's resignation the board will be appointing someone to fill in until June 30. Anyone interested should submit a letter indicating why they want to be on the board and their related experience. Deadline is 4 p.m. Friday, March 14. The seat will then be on the Monday, June 9, ballot to fill out the remainder of the term.

"It's with regret that I resign, but I hope for great success for the board in the future," Hamilton said.

Hamilton's vacancy means three spots will be up for grabs come election day in June. Hamilton's seat will need filling for one year, but board

Airport's future is being shaped

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

The City of Charlevoix and Island Airways are negotiating to keep the charter service for Beaver Island as overseer of the city's airport.

Management at the airport has been in a holding pattern during the last six months, but appears to be landing to a conclusion.

The airport's current manager, Island Airways, has reinstated its management proposal after withdrawing it last year. City manager, Mike Wiesner, said a resolution to award the company the new management contract could be in city council's hands by Monday, March 17, but more likely by Monday, March 31.

Island Airways, owned by Paul Welke, has been running the airport for 12 years, and has been doing so lately on a month-to-month basis while the city investigated different management possibilities.

Only one other, Tom Mort, submitted a proposal to manage the airport, but withdrew it, leaving Island Airways as the only choice.

According to Wiesner, the airport will run the same way as it has been except that a part-time manager will be hired to better separate the airline's charter business from daily airport operations. The details as to who that will be, what duties the job will entail, and compensation are still being ironed-out.

Island Airways will still perform most of the maintenance at the airport, Wiesner said.

"I'm optimistic," Wiesner said of the negotiations. "This is going to work."

In other airport news, a runway extension is still in the works. The need for a longer runway has been sparked by the expected increase in jet traffic from future home-owners in Bay Harbor and by local companies should the runway be extended beyond the present 4,300 feet.

The plan calls for a 250-foot extension to the west, and a 250-foot stopway to the east. Wiesner estimated costs of the project to be $212,000.

The city has applied for state aid through the Michigan Aeronautics Commission to cover half the costs.

In addition to runway and management changes, the city is reviewing wording for a fuel ordinance that involves issuing fuel dispensing licenses, ground leases for underground storage tanks and financial assurance to cover any spill that might occur on city property.

Council is expected to vote on the ordinance during its next meeting, which is scheduled for 7 p.m. Monday, March 17.

Break-ins continue

Charlevoix police are investigating a rash of car break-ins over the weekend. According to police, there were seven larcenies of vehicles and one breaking and entering of a house from Saturday to Monday.

Three of the cars, the house and a malicious destruction of property case were reported Saturday. Mostly stolen were car stereos and cellular phones.

Even though the crimes were reported over a three-day span, they could have occurred on the same day.

Drug testing in school won't help Charlevoix students

EDITORIAL

Charlevoix schools have enough to do without spending time and money testing students for tobacco, alcohol and illegal drug use.

Rather than continue to find ways to encourage kids to appreciate and participate in their education, the school board is considering taking a step toward running the schools in a police state.

Drug testing could become a reality in Charlevoix. Taxpayers and parents must draw the line on where school officials are allowed to reach into their children's lives unless asked. Now is the time to speak against the line of thought that could bring other than academic testing into school.

The desire to create a drug-free environment is commendable. We are not opposed to updating the drug policy at school. Students should know what the consequences will be if they are caught drunk at a dance or are arrested by police for possession. The guidelines should include drug counseling. However, it is not the schools' job to go around with Breathalyzers or urine specimen bottles.

Drug testing in high school is like asking a second-grader to take calculus. It's ridiculous. It's wrong. And it won't help. Drug testing will not deter the use of drugs. It will just encourage the students to find a way around the system.

In addition to not deterring use, drug testing opens a Pandora's Box to prejudice. Pointing suspicious fingers could cause students to be less involved with the social center of their lives and the teachers who are committed to giving students a compass by which to make choices.

It's hard enough for kids to be excited about coming to school. Some teachers do, however, find a way to reach into young lives and show them their own talents and passions. With drug testing in schools, the very teachers that have become friends could be considered a threat. They might report a glassy-eyed student. This atmosphere doesn't encourage learning, but deception, paranoia and a sense of jail.

It's been said that athletes and other students representing the Rayders through activities will be especially susceptible to testing. This will encourage students to not get involved. Instead, they will hang out in front of MTV, on the streets with friends, or at party houses.

Rather than test students and kick them off sports teams or out of school for using, all adults — parents, teachers, administrators, pastors and friends — should be strengthening young people with fun, drug-free activities, time and attention, and love.

Most young people do drugs because they want to feel accepted. They don't want to have to look and act like their parents before they're considered successful. We need to allow young people to be themselves and be willing to walk with them through the difficult journey of the teen years.

There are many unanswered questions about the future of drug testing in Charlevoix. But rather than wait until the school board is voting on a proposal, the community needs to say no on drug testing before months of time and energy are wasted.

The school can't be everything to everybody. It needs to specialize in educating students so that they will be prepared to obtain gainful employment after school or attend college. They need to work with parents if there are problems with a student on campus.

Schools don't have to give parents another avenue to get out of parenting. Watching for use of illegal substances is a parent's responsibility. Discipline should be taken at school if use interferes. However, teachers and administrators should not be putting on unwarranted badges.

Post office move isn't for citizens

Editor:

I see by your issue of the Courier for Feb. 19 that Charlevoix is losing its post office.

It will be known as the Charlevoix Township Post Office. Decisions have been made, but the thought that the move was made in the public interest is wrong.

It is their convenience they are thinking of, I know of no public hearing on the matter.

No longer will we be able to walk to the post office to purchase stamps or empty our post office box, we must travel by car to a congested area, that will soon have traffic control.

Most post offices are located near the center of population, not two or three miles from it. It will probably be a beautiful and efficient facility, but if you believe they had public support, I believe you are wrong.

Respectfully,
Ralph Hamilton

Community should be more helpful in raising money for pool

Editor:

I, Tim Elliott, a sixth-grader at Charlevoix Middle School, believe we as a community should help raise money for the Charlevoix Community Pool.

There are a number of reasons why we should help raise money for the community pool:

1. Those in the community, like myself, that don't know how to swim should learn how.

2. Those that do know how to, they could keep in good shape for swimming in the summer.

3. And those that sort of know how to swim could learn how to swim better than what they did.

I do respect all those I am talking to, but, I think you should make a better effort to help get the pool. If you did try to get other people to help raise money for it.

We need businesses to help, companies, and, or what ever we need to get money for the pool. We need enough money to make it.

So, get people at the schools to help raise money for the pool and/or Mr. Scott Boss to help raise money. That is what I have to say. Thanks for listening to me.

Sincerely,
Tim Elliott

District schools should stay in town

Editor:

A large majority of tax payers are concerned and annoyed with the idea of moving the school complex halfway to Ironton. "What will we do," asked some of the concerned citizens, "call it the Charonton School District?"

The upwards to $200,000 for the proposed property is a very, small item when compared to all the necessary expenses before one shovelful of dirt is turned for school construction.

How much will it cost for roads, sidewalks, electric cables, water mains, sewer lines? What will the cost of a new fleet of buses be? Very few will be walking to school. Shall we rename that stretch of M-66 'Smog Alley' after a Los Angeles freeway?

From an economical stand point, it would seem establishing a viable sinking fund as the first order of business would eliminate the one part principal, 10 parts interest ratio for all construction or reconstruction options.

Again, from an economical stand point, wouldn't it make more sense to move the football field and track to another area? How many years has Petoskey lived with the same necessity? The sports complex is used a few weeks in spring and fall. It sits under a big blanket of snow for over half the school year and sits idle in summer.

Wouldn't that be an ideal place for a new school when and if the tax payers consent to the expense?

Another point to ponder, as mentioned by Esther Bleha in her very interesting letter, is the animosity of taxpayers toward the actions of the school superintendent. There are more every day who will not support bond or millage issues for that reason. Taxpayers still get livid over the superintendent's demotion of the high school principal for what were called 'differences in philosophy,' firing the soccer coach; her issuing statements better left to the elected officials, forming any numbers of committees who are left dangling on the vine when the expected results are not forthcoming, hosting gung-ho breakfasts at restaurants with school board members like a den mother with a group of cub scouts. Inner school handlings are a source of constant irritation to all, especially taxpayers.

In her recent News-Review letter, Roberta Jackson refers to "all the negativity in Charlevoix." Was that a back handed swipe at all who don't agree with her opinions? Dozens of words were used to describe the great school efficiency. One sentence was all that was needed to touch on the rather dismal test scores this year, and that fellow taxpayers, is the main reason for her big dollar salary. The inner workings of the school are her main concern, and the rest is better left to the elected board members.

The taxpayers would do well to draft Mr. Charles Butcher for the school board in an advisory capacity and then elect him to the board at the first opportunity. His expertise would be of countless, economic value in renovating and or construction. Lets get a sinking fund going, take care of needed renovations and repairs and forget about the real estate business.

The school board is made up of dedicated people and are to be commended for countless hours of time and work, but they would be well advised to remember the last fiasco at the polls. Their own $8,500 survey told them that taxpayers would not support a new high school. You went ahead and put it on the ballot anyhow, with an additional and unnecessary cost of several thousand dollars. If they go into the real estate business, they had better change the Red Rayder logo to a large penguin with lead feet. It won't fly, it won't even walk.

Thanks for your time,
Perry Smith

Fifth-grader Loretta Gilewicz steps up to the microphone to ask NASA astronaut, Jerry Linenger, about the joys and experiences of space travel. Craig Stewart (foreground) of the Little Traverse Bay Radio Club aided in the process of making contact with the space shuttle.

Students speak to astronaut

An excited silence embraced Charlevoix Elementary School Thursday as Kathy Schofield's fifth-grade science class made contact with space.

With the help of Little Traverse Bay Amateur Radio Club, the class was able to talk to NASA astronaut Jerry Linenger. Linenger has been stationed on the Russian space station, Mir, since mid January.

The class only had a nine-minute window of opportunity to speak with Linenger. The students lined up single file with prepared questions.

The session was not just a dry question and answer, as Linenger joked of the storm he could see sieging the town, bemoaned missing his pretzels, and explained the difficulty of drinking milk through a straw in zero gravity.

The activity brought a bizarre day at the elementary school, as nary a sound was heard to adults entering the building. The entire school was hushed to make the contact with the space station more audible. Most of the students, teachers, and parents gathered in the library to watch a simulcast of Schofield's room and speakers were set up so they could hear.

Amazingly, Linenger could be heard clearer than most earth-tied long-distance telephone calls.

Bradley-Closson

Charity Bradley and Chad Closson announce their engagement to be married.

Charity is the daughter of J. Paul and Connie Bradley, of Charlevoix. Chad is the son of Bill and Karen Closson, also of Charlevoix.

An April 5, 1997, wedding is planned at the Petoskey Assembly of God Church. A reception will be held at the Terrace Inn in Bay View.

The bride-elect is a 1995 graduate of Charlevoix High School. She is attending the Petoskey Beauty Academy. Her fiance is a 1991 graduate of Thurston High School in Springfield, Ore. He is employed at Marvin's Gardens in Charlevoix.

Venetian T-shirt contest begins

The Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce will host a competition for the design of the Official 67th Annual Venetian Festival T-shirt. The winners will receive a cash prize of $200.

Original designs should be submitted on a letter-sized piece of white paper as clean line art (no shading or fills) in black ink. Color fills or special shading areas should be included on a separate tracing overlay. Custom font lettering, which can be very time consuming, is acceptable but certainly not necessary. We are more interested in the original design concept.

The artwork should be identified by including your name, address and phone number on the entry. The winning design becomes the exclusive property of the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce. Remaining entries will be returned to their respective artists.

All artwork should be submitted to the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce, 408 Bridge St., Charlevoix, MI, 49720. The deadline for submission is 5 p.m. Friday, May 16. Please be sure to adhere to the required specifications.

For more information, call the chamber office at 547-2101.

Warren R. "Dick" Wood

Warren R. "Dick" Wood, 75, of Kincheloe, Mich., died Thursday, Feb. 20, 1997, at War Memorial Hospital in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.

He was born on April 29, 1921, in Lansing.

Mr. Wood served during World War II in the Army Air Force as a second lieutenant in the Pacific Theatre.

He was the owner of W.R. Wood Wholesale Lumber Co. in East Lansing from 1952-1962, when he and his wife, Jean, moved to Charlevoix, where he continued to wholesale lumber and also owned a bar-restaurant known as the Wood Shed. He retired in 1983.

In 1986, he and his wife moved to Kincheloe, Mich.

Mr. Wood was a past member of the Brighton Masonic Lodge F&AM. He enjoyed golfing.

Survivors include his wife, Jean M. Wood, whom he married on April 26, 1940; two sons, Richard E. Wood, of Nevada City, Calif., and Michael C. Wood, of Bozeman, Mont.; one daughter, Candace C. Wood, of Nehalem, Ore.; three grandchildren; and one sister, Patty Patterson, of Petoskey.

Mr. Wood was preceded in death by his parents, Lloyd and Queenie Wood; brother, Marshall; and sister, Dawn Chamberlin.

Cremation has taken place and at his request. No services will be held.

Arrangements were handled by the Reamer Funeral Home of Pickford, Mich.

Foundation taking grant applications

The Charlevoix County Community Foundation is ready again to put funds to work on behalf of area residents.

During the next few weeks, the foundation and its Youth Advisory Committee will review grant requests to support a number of worthy projects.

Those eligible to receive grants include nonprofit organizations, schools and local municipalities. In the past, proposals for a wide variety of programs have been chosen for funding from health initiatives, educational endeavors, and the arts, to environmental projects and human services. Youth grants give special priority to proposals that address key concerns of young people: Substance abuse prevention, land conservation, child abuse, juvenile crime, and recreational programs.

"We're interested in helping programs that enrich and improve life for families and children throughout Charlevoix County," said Mike Stowe, foundation president. "Our community foundation's endowment has grown to the point where we can begin to have a significant impact on this area by channeling funds to those projects most in need of help."

Those interested in applying for grants should submit their request by Wednesday, April 30. Application forms are available through the foundation office. For more information, call the foundation office at 536-2440, or write P.O. Box 718, East Jordan, MI, 49727.

OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

One of my students at North Central Michigan College did an interview with a cardiac care nurse. After her presentation, we got into a rather lively discussion about what happens to heart patients. Since I have some firsthand knowledge in that department, I found myself sharing a lot of very personal things. Following the class one of my more quiet class members waited to talk with me.

"Mr. Hamilton, I really appreciated everything you said about heart problems and that you shared what you went through." Why was that? "I had a heart transplant four years ago."

I will confess to being taken aback by his revelation. He was 15 at the time, and the illness that afflicted his heart had no cure. He was given the heart of a 19-year-old girl who died from a brain tumor. The years that have followed since his surgery have been miraculous ones in his mind and to talk with him, I felt a sudden awareness of his miracle as well.

I've heard more than a few folks suggest that the day of miracles is past. They say the Lord used them to get people's attention in Bible times, but that He really doesn't use them today. I don't know where you're at in such a theological debate. I only know that I am a thorough believer in miracles and am convinced that virtually every day God's divine touch can be found if you are truly prepared to look for it.

A lot of it is in how we look at miracles. Too many people think of miracles in terms of a Venetian weekend style spectacular. But really that's not what miracles are for. Miracles are to remind us how our faith is supposed to work and in whom our faith really belongs.

I always smile when I read about Mary and Jesus visiting the wedding at Cana. Do you remember the story? It's the one where Jesus turned the water into wine. Mary knew who her Son was and what He was capable of doing. She also knew that the sweet couple they were celebrating needed some special help. She didn't push Jesus. She simply presented a need. And the Lord, well He reacted like a lot of sons do with their mothers. He listened and heard and He "kinda-sorta" said "Don't rush me, Mom." Yet loving each other as much as they did, she knew things would be in good hands.

He had the servants fill six jars with water. They knew it was water but somewhere between the time they filled the jars and the time they presented a cup to the master of ceremonies at the wedding reception, something wonderful happened. It became wine — the best wine anyone ever tasted.

If you were to go to the gospel of John and read the whole story for yourself, the key comes at the very end. Jesus didn't perform a miracle to call attention to Himself. He did it to meet a need. And the disciples, in response to what they had seen, did not put their faith in the miracle. They put their faith in the One who provided that miracle.

The day of miracles is not past. The Lord is more than prepared to meet the real need of any seeking soul. The key is where we put our faith. In an age of heart transplants, computer communication, jet airplane travel and more, we should know that miracles surround us every day. They await those who don't get too caught up in the acts but stand prepared to trust in the One who makes all things possible.

Charlevoix walks for breast cancer cure

early case of breast cancer. "Nobody in town has not known somebody's who had breast cancer."

Judy was cancer free for six years after her first round with cancer. When first being diagnosed, she hesitated to tell friends and neighbors about her struggle. But her husband, Terry, assured her that her loved ones would offer support. And they have throughout her fight for life. She became active in the early DeYoung walks that were planned by area women. And now she and Engle are two of four women on the sorority's steering committee for the walk.

The 2.5 mile journey begins in East Park. Each walker gets sponsors, who pay up front. Following their steps on Charlevoix streets, those involved will gather for refreshments.

Edger said that although the sorority is organizing the day, they are just instigators to a cause that she hopes the community will embrace. She hopes that organizations will challenge each other with sponsorship and walkers.

In addition to the financial benefit of the walk, the sorority wants to educate people on the reality of breast cancer.

Cosmetics aren't as important as life, Engle said. And life is what the sorority is fighting for.

For more information on the walk, call Judy Edger at 547-4579 or Phyllis Hess at 547-4245.

Three board seats up for election in June

president, Mary Lee Campbell, and Joan Buday are up for re-election to four year terms. Neither of them have committed to running again.

"I haven't decided yet," Buday said. "Sulane's decision will enter into it, but I don't know if it will be a plus or a minus."

Buday cited spending time with family as a reason she might not run, but did say that she enjoys being on the board, working for the students, and that it takes nearly one term "to get a good grasp of the job."

Candidate petitions for both four-year terms, and the one-year term are due to in the superintendent's office no later than 4 p.m. Monday, April 7.

Campbell was unavailable at press time to comment on her plans for the upcoming election.

Rite Aid opens drive-through pharmacy at new location

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Drive-through restaurants are common place. However, Charlevoix has two new lanes for drive-up service at a pharmacy.

With the opening of the new Rite Aid store in Captain's Corner shopping center Monday, a drive-through pharmacy is handing over prescriptions without shoppers stepping out from behind the wheel.

However, shoppers should be warned that medications don't come as quickly as Big Macs or Whoppers. They take an average of 20 minutes.

Rite Aid district manager, Mark Kohout, said that people will benefit most from dropping off prescriptions and picking them up after other shopping or after work.

"The drive through is not like McDonalds, where you wait for the 'script," he said. However, it is possible to wait. "It's nice not to have to get out of your car."

Both lanes are set up like a banks. There's a drawer for the closest lane and a shoot for the farthest.

"Once a store gets established, 30 percent of our pharmacy business goes through the driveway," Kohout said.

In addition to having a drive-through pharmacy, the new Rite Aid is opening with 4,000 additional square feet of shopping space.

> "Once a store gets established, 30 percent of our pharmacy business goes through the driveway."
> — Mark Kohout, Rite Aid district manager

Departments expanded or added include a bath boutique, professional hair care and a 17-door walk-in cooler to add ice cream, milk and cold beer and wine to the store's options.

The store also has a one-hour photo developing center, makes keys, ships parcels through the U.S. Mail or United Postal Service and sends money grams.

Rite Aid has been in business in Charlevoix for 10 years. With its moving to the new store, which is across the parking lot from the old, Glen's Market can expand into that open space.

The store will host an open house Sunday-Saturday, April 6-12, with sales, on-site cosmetic sampling, door prizes, and free hotdogs and Cokes.

Kilwin's recognized for 1996 sales

Kilwin's Chocolates Franchise, Inc., honored Charlevoix's Sheryl and Matt Seelye of Kilwin's Chocolates, Fudge and Ice Cream during the company's national convention at Walt Disney World recently.

"The Sales Achievement Award goes to the store which has the highest percentage sales increased for 1996," said Don McCary, franchise president. "The franchise owner must have a proven record of quality customer service along with an outstanding year in sales. They are the ones who go the extra mile for our customers."

Celebrating its 50th anniversary, Kilwin's Chocolates was founded in Petoskey in 1947 and has since grown to include 30 franchises nationwide. Ice cream and fudge are sold in each of the shops in addition to more than 120 varieties of fine chocolate candies that are still handmade in the Petoskey-based kitchen.

Kilwin's franchises nationwide saw a 20 percent increase in overall sales for 1996, according to a news release.

The store will reopen in May.

Basketball tourney heats up

The first two rounds of the Junior High Division of the Charlevoix Youth Basketball League pointed toward the season's champions.

The final show down will be held Saturday, March 8, in the middle school gym.

Teams topping their opponents to advance in the bracket are as follows:

Revolutions out gunned Space Jammers, 22-16.

Big Toes showed Bad Dogs who was boss, winning their game, 26-14.

Purple Puffalumps slipped by Up North, 25-20.

Swisher Sweets smoked Swish Phish, 30-23.

Space Jammers turned around and out shot the Bad Dogs, 16-13.

Up North came back during their second game, defeating Swish Phish, 31.

Swisher Sweets smelt the fragrance of a win for the second time Saturday by defeating Purple Puffalumps, 31-28.

The players are preparing for the semi and finals rounds Saturday, March 15, when Space Jammers will try to stub Big Toes, Up North will challenge Purple Puffalumps, and Bad Dogs will bring their bite to take on Swish Phish.

The action begins at 9 a.m.

At 6 p.m. Saturday, the All-Star team will take on the league's coaches. An award ceremony will be held in the gym at 7 p.m.

The elementary school teams will play their first round in the season's tournament Friday, March 7, at the middle school gym.

At 6 p.m., the Bulls will take on Shooting Stars and at 7 p.m. the Pistons will be shooting against No Limits. Their semi and final rounds will be played Saturday, March 8.

Volleyball team takes district title

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

March madness swept over northern Michigan's volleyball scene last weekend with the class "C" district tournament in Harbor Springs.

Area teams, buoyed by a fresh start, hoped the adrenaline of post-season would be enough to oust the favored Charlevoix Rayders.

They were wrong.

Charlevoix, dominant all winter in the local conference, proved it once again by sweeping three games en route to their third consecutive district crown.

The Rayders cruised, allowing no more than seven points in any of the day's games, and now move into the regional bracket in Pine River, where teams will be different and a bit more challenging.

"Regionals, that is where the real competition begins," senior Lisa Wheat said.

The Rayders barely broke a sweat in discarding conference and area teams match after match, and as a result another trip to regionals has been earned. Charlevoix will look to advance past the first game after losing in that round the past two seasons. Senior Emily Murray said she feels there is something special about this year's model, and expects it to parlay into a more successful regional trip.

"Our teamwork is 10 times better this year," she said. "We have the greatest teamwork, and that'll be the difference this year in regionals."

The Rayders clinched their district trophy with the same calling card they've been dropping on foes all year. Excellent serving, strong back-row defense and a varied offensive attack.

Wheat and Jessica VanGuilder were the team's top servers, both earning their place after long stretches of points while serving. Wheat was the truth in the tournament's opening game against Boyne City. She served four straight aces to break open game one, and closed out the match with six straight service points as the Rayders dispatched the Ramblers 15-2 and 15-5.

"You can't get any points if you can't serve, it's the most important thing," Wheat said.

Wheat had nine aces for the tournament hitting 27 of 29 serves in play. VanGuilder was perfect on her serves with four aces as was Murray who hit three. Amanda Eaton chipped in three aces.

In the semi-final match, they blew by Elk Rapids 15-4 and 15-7, before defeating East Jordan in the championship game 15-6 and 15-2. The score was knotted 6-6 in game one before the Rayders flexed their might and reeled off 24 of the match's next 26 points. Four times during that span, the Rayders stymied any Red Devil attempt at scoring by limiting them to a serve and a quick side-out.

All day, Eaton, Lyndsey Blechel, Carrie Blanchard, and Laura Maltese were pillars on the back row and in returning hits to set-up the Rayder offense.

From there, the offense piled up points behind kills from Wheat with eight, Eaton seven, Murray four, and Jamie Gowell two.

When their best spikes were being returned, the Rayders turned leaping for a heavy hit into a strategic tap to get the ball over the net. Awaiting a fast ball, opponents were caught flat footed as the ball floated to the floor. Point for Charlevoix.

"They like to mix it up with different attacks," coach Brenda Bryan said. "It throws the other team off a bit."

Last week, during the conference tournament, the team sat during the first few hours of competition before getting a chance to play. Murray said the anxiety hit them that day while waiting to play, and they didn't play as well at the start.

This Saturday, they played in the first game, and from the onset were the best team in the building.

"It was an ideal set-up," Murray said. "We played, rested, played, rested, and played."

They played games of duck, duck, goose to stay loose in-between games.

The Rayders travel to Pine River for regionals to play the winner of the Claire district Saturday, March 8, at 11 a.m. Rogers City from the Onaway district and Manton from the Benzie Central District fill out the other bracket. Winners square off for the regional championship at 2 p.m. for the right to advance into the state quarterfinals in Traverse City.

"The girls have to realize there are no easy teams," Bryan said. "Every team is as good as you are, and you have to play like that."

Come tournament time, every point is worth a floor burn as Amanda Eaton, outstretched, and Lyndsey Blechel are helped up by teammate Emily Murray. Although the team failed to win this point from East Jordan Saturday, the team ousted the East Jordan Red Devils, 15-6 and 15-2.

Boys' basketball team advances

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

The urgency of a senior, and on-the-spot maturation of underclassmen, led the Rayders to a 67-57 win over Mancelona in the opening round of district play in Harbor Springs Monday. Next up for the Rayders are the Boyne City Ramblers at 6 p.m. Wednesday, March 5, again in Harbor.

Senior Steve Carland had eight of his team high 18 points in the third quarter, after his team fell behind early in the stanza by five points, their largest deficit of the game.

Three times he stepped in front of Ironmen passes, dribbled the length of the floor for lay-ins. Later, in a half-court set he jackknifed through the lane for a finger roll basket, cutting the margin to a point.

"He did a great job, he was our leader," coach Jim Kanine said.

Carland was trading baskets with Mancelona during that third quarter stretch, which ended when he picked up his fourth foul to send him to the bench.

"I get a little nervous when he's over there with me, instead of on the floor where he's supposed to be," Kanine said of Carland's foul trouble.

No need for nerves, as Carland's teammates took his cue. Junior Ben Owens hit a corner jumper at the buzzer to tie the game at 50-50 after three quarters. Then a quintet of sophomores, who played as a group much of the fourth quarter, took the game over with their quickness and defensive pressure. Matt McClellan, Jim Kanine, Matt Dennis, Colin Carr and Justin Thorp scored all but two points during a 17-7 quarter that saw the Rayders rust the Ironmen out of the tournament.

Thorp hit three free-throws, and Kanine swished a jumper to give the Rayders a five-point lead. After Mancelona cut it to three, Carr hit a jumper from the right elbow, and Dennis banked in a shot off the offensive glass for a seven point lead. The game was iced with four free throws by McClellan, two by Kanine, and two more by senior Scott Smith.

Mathcounts students advance to state

A team of Charlevoix eighth-grade students took second place Feb. 22 in the annual Mathcounts regional competition.

Students participated from several area schools with each school sending up to three teams. Charlevoix was represented by Laura Borths, Cailin Dulaney, Nathan Bartlett and Kevin Evans. The team will next compete at a state level Saturday, March 22.

The Mathcounts competition consists of various rounds that require solving math problems. In addition to team placement, Kevin Evans finished third in the countdown round for individuals.

School watches state funding

state funding for the next school year, and will remain skeptical about any dollar figures until then, noting that adjustments can be made, especially since the schools won't know their enrollment until the day classes begin in September.

Overall funding by the state is based on student enrollment, and Lansing already has updated their figures for Charlevoix. Originally released was a figure more than $9.38 million, which has been modified to under $9.35 million.

According to Engler's office, Charlevoix's funding has been increased by 11 percent since enactment of the Proposal A, which moved funding of community schools from local hands to the state.

However, according to Jackson, under the prior school funding system the district's revenue after millage collection would be $9.88 million dollars, or a 16 percent increase since the year Proposal A went into effect.

The state's per year increase for Charlevoix is 2 percent higher than 1996-97, less than an inflationary increase.

IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF O.I.L. ENERGY CORP. FOR AN ORDER OF THE SUPERVISOR APPROVING A UNIFORM SPACING PLAN AND COMPULSORY POOLING INTERESTS, IN PARTS OF WILSON TOWNSHIP AND SOUTH ARM TOWNSHIP, CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

CAUSE NO. (A) 8-3-97

NOTICE OF HEARING

Take notice that a contested case hearing will be held before the Supervisor of Wells in the city of Lansing, Michigan, on the TWENTY SIXTH DAY OF MARCH (March 26) 1997, BEGINNING AT 9:30 A.M. EASTERN STANDARD TIME, IN THE DEPARTMENT OF ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY HEARING ROOM, THIRD FLOOR OF KNAPP'S OFFICE CENTRE, CORNER OF WASHINGTON AVENUE AND WASHTENAW STREET, LANSING, MICHIGAN. The hearing will be conducted pursuant to Part 615, Supervisor of Wells, of the Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Act (NREPA), 1994 PA 451, as amended, MCL 324.61501 et seq., the administrative rules, 1996 MR 9, R 324.101 et seq., and the Administrative Procedures Act, 1969 PA 306, as amended, MCL 24.201 et seq.; MSA 3.560(101) et seq.

The hearing is for the purpose of receiving testimony and evidence pertaining to the need or desirability of issuing an order in the matter of the petition of O.I.L. Energy Corp., 954 Business Park Drive, Suite 3, P.O. Box 1073, Traverse City, Michigan 49685-1073. Petitioner seeks an order of the Supervisor approving a proposed Uniform Spacing Plan (USP), for development of the Antrim Shale Formation, pursuant to the applicable spacing order, Order No. (A) 14-9-94. Petitioner also requests to be named operator of the USP, sometimes referred to as the "Wilson 28 Unit." The area of the USP is comprised of 3,968.56 acres. Petitioner has drilled fifteen (15) wells, and plans to drill at least thirteen (13) additional wells within the area of the USP. Petitioner asserts it has been unable to achieve voluntary pooling of all interests and seeks compulsory pooling pursuant to Section 61513, Part 615 of the NREPA, of all unleased interests in the USP.

The area of the USP is described as the E 1/2, and E 1/2 of SW 1/4 of Section 27, all of Section 28 except N 1/2 of NE 1/4 and NE 1/4 of NW 1/4, all of Section 29 except S 1/2 of NW 1/4 and W 1/2 of SW 1/4, NE 1/4 of Section 30, all of Section 31 except NW 1/4, all of Section 32, all of Section 33 except SW 1/4 of SW 1/4, all of Section 34 except N 1/2 of NW 1/4, Wilson Township, T32N, R6W; SE 1/4 of Section 36, South Arm Township, T32N, R7W; Charlevoix County, Michigan.

You can obtain a copy of the written petition by requesting one in writing from Mr. Dennis Couturier, C.A.P. Land Company, 954 Business Park Drive, P.O. Box 1557, Traverse City Michigan 49685, telephone number 616-933-3800. Take note that if you wish to participate as a party in the hearing by presenting evidence or cross-examining witnesses, you shall prepare and mail or otherwise deliver to the petitioner and Supervisor, not less than 5 days before the hearing date, an answer to the petition in the manner set forth in R 324.1204(6). Proof of mailing or delivering the answer shall be filed with the Supervisor on or before the date of the hearing. The answer shall state with specificity the interested person's position with regard to the petition. Failure to prepare and serve an answer in a timely manner shall preclude you from presenting evidence or cross-examining witnesses at the hearing. If an answer to the petition is not filed, the Supervisor may elect to consider the petition and enter an order without oral hearing.

Persons with disabilities needing accommodations for effective participation in this hearing should call or write Mr. Gordon L. Lewis, Geological Survey Division, P.O. Box 30256, Lansing, Michigan 48909, telephone 517-334-6959 at least a week in advance of the hearing date to request mobility, visual, hearing, or other assistance.

that making the investment without assurance of continued use is too expensive and risky. "We've been there for six years, and I thought they would give us something longer than a year.

"I didn't want to throw more money at only a one-year commitment."

Allgaier said the company has yet to decide from where the ship will sail this summer. Its 30 rental boats are located in Traverse City, along with the main office.

The ship has spent its summers docking in Round Lake between journeys around Lake Charlevoix and sometimes Lake Michigan. Allgaier estimates that between 6,000 and 7,000 people have taken the three-hour tour each summer from Charlevoix. The company has spent an average of $17,000 a year on advertising to bring customers to town, Allgaier said.

Allgaier has been working with city manager, Mike Wiesner, to try to find a solution to leaving Charlevoix.

"Mike has always bent over backwards to make things work for us," Allgaier said. "He's still fighting to keep us there. But we're losing too much money, and whatever he would try and do would not make it worth our while to come back."

Family letter describes local ice harvesting

By Nancy Ritsema
Courier columnist

Friends and family pose for a Sunday afternoon picture around Samuel Chases' summer home at Norwood a century ago.

Noted Democratic Chicago politician Samuel Chase bought property and a summer home overlooking Lake Michigan in Norwood in 1884. He loved to fish, and Norwood was close to the Intermediate Lake Chain and to famed fishing of the Jordan River.

Youngsters in the Chase family who traveled north from Chicago each summer eventually recorded for their own children and grandchildren memories and stories from their years of activities "up north."

Ed Chase wrote this account of winter ice cutting in a letter to family members in 1953.

"Did I ever tell you about how we cut ice in winter or how that fabulous character Ed Stafford of Norwood got around the charge of one cent for a cake of ice?" the letter began.

Chase's account continues.

We always had the ice cut right out of Lake Michigan just below the bluff at Norwood. One thing that had to be kept in mind was not to wait too late in winter to cut the ice, for if it froze 30 to 36 inches thick it would be almost impossible to cut.

First, we chopped a hole in the ice with an axe. A six-foot cross-cut saw, which is also used to cut down big trees in the woods, is used to cut a line in the ice, as straight as possible, for maybe 60 feet.

Parallel lines were sawed about 20 inches apart. Then we sawed across the parallel lines to make cakes of ice 20-inches square.

It was bitter cold out on the ice on Lake Michigan. Even though a man's back or arms got tired from sawing, he dared not stop with the saw in the ice, for the saw would freeze tight in a minute or two. If the saw froze, it would take another 20 minutes of chopping with an axe to free it.

It was next to impossible to saw the checkerboard lines in the ice evenly, and some cakes might be 38 or 40 inches by 24 inches instead of the 20-by-20 inches we started out to cut.

We cut 300 ice cakes for our summer supply. The ice was hauled up the hill on big sleighs to the ice house just in back of our house. After the ice was packed in the ice house, the whole thing was covered with a tremendous amount of sawdust from the big pile of sawdust near the sawmill.

One year, grandfather Chase hired Ed Stafford to cut the ice and haul it. Ed looked around the ice on Lake Michigan and couldn't find a smooth spot on the surface with good clear ice-for-ice cakes. The lake had frozen over that year when there was a great field of floe ice and slush.

Ed thought of Flanagan's mill pond down at old Antrim, three miles south of Norwood. The mill pond had been built by Flanagan by damming up Antrim Creek. The pond furnished water power for a small sawmill.

Ed and some helpers headed for the frozen mill pond and once there started to open up a hole in the ice in order to saw ice cakes, out to the pond came Mr. Flanagan. "This is private property and you can't cut ice here!" Flanagan hollered.

Such a thing as forbidding the cutting of ice anywhere was something unheard of in the north country.

Ed and Mr. Flanagan had a terrific argument. Ed demanded to know how much money Flanagan had to have for the ice. "Pay me 1 cent for each cake of ice you cut!" Flanagan shouted.

Finally, Ed agreed to the terms. He said he'd pay 1 cent a cake of ice. Then he left and returned to Norwood.

On the next day, Ed and his helpers returned to the pond with several chains used for skidding logs in the woods and with a number of stout grab hooks on the end of the chains.

Ed's plan began to unfold. He had agreed to pay 1 cent for each cake of ice he cut, or what would have been $3 for our year's supply of 300 cakes. But instead of ice cakes 20 inches by 20 inches, Ed instructed his men to cut huge blocks of ice 10 feet by 10 feet.

To the ice blocks he attached the logging chains and with teams of horses pulled the blocks out of the pond and up onto big sleighs. These great blocks of ice were hauled to our ice house in Norwood.

When Mr. Flanagan realized what Ed was doing, he was ready for battle!

Ed stood his ground. He had agreed to pay Flanagan 1 cent for every cake of ice he cut, but Flanagan never told him how big the cakes had to be!

Flanagan, mad as all get out, was out-smarted, and he knew it. He finally took payment of 15 cents for 15 enormous blocks of ice hauled away by Ed.

Ed Stafford headed back to Norwood, grinning all the way. Grandfather and the family had all the ice we needed that summer, and even some to give away.

Camp Quality gets separate fund

Each August, dedicated volunteers organize and host Camp Quality, a week of outdoor summer camp activities for kids who have cancer. Now, a special fund at the Charlevoix County Community Foundation will provide ongoing financial support to the program.

The Camp Quality Michigan Fund was established by camp staff and supporters to enhance both the summer camping experience and the year-round follow-up programs for seriously ill children and their families. A permanent endowment has been established so only the fund's investment income will be used to generate revenue well into the future.

"We're delighted to have this fund," said Eleanor West, Camp Quality Executive Director. "So many generous people support our program with gifts of time, money, services and supplies. The Camp Quality Fund will give us a way to build on that support and plan for the future."

The first Camp Quality program was founded in Australia about 15 years ago and quickly spread to 14 other countries and 44 locations. Here in Michigan, the program is headquartered in Boyne City, and, this year, the national office was also moved to Boyne. The camping session, which is offered at no expense to children, is held at Camp Daggett on Walloon Lake.

In addition to a small professional staff, the program relies on local volunteers who serve as camp counselors and companions to some 60 young campers.

Throughout the year, Camp Quality volunteers continue to be in contact with campers, visiting them during hospitalizations, sending notes, and hosting a winter reunion. For many children, camp is the highlight of the year.

The new fund becomes one of a number of other specially designated funds held by the community foundation. A "people's charity," the foundation was established in 1992 by a group of local citizens to serve as a resource for the county's numerous civic, human service and educational needs.

The foundation gathers contributions and manages them in a permanent endowment, returning earnings to the community in the form of grants.

Contributions to the foundation and the Camp Quality Fund are tax-deductible and qualify for a special Michigan Income Tax credit.

Rayder wrestlers follow fathers' footsteps

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Danielle Flowers has heard her father's wrestling tales — captain of the team. She's seen his home videos.

Saturday, March 15, Danielle will initiate the next generation of family stories from the mats. The 12-year-old will be one of about 30 elementary and middle school students involved in a wrestling tournament at Charlevoix High School.

"It's a lot of fun and you get good exercise," the sixth-grader said.

Danielle and her teammates are learning their technique four days a week after school. As she follows the preset footsteps of her father, Ray Flowers, she believes he's proud of her. And the difference in gender isn't deterring her from pursuing a sport they both respect.

"Once you're in the ring, you don't really care who you're wrestling," she said, minutes after flipping a male classmate on his back. "You just think about what you're going to do."

During practice Thursday, the young wrestlers were told how to conduct themselves during a tournament. Shake hands with the opponent before and after the match, and go to the opposite corner and shake the hands of the other team's coach.

Craig Golovich

"No pouting," said program organizer, Gary Probert. "That's unacceptable."

Gary's father, Norm, was Charlevoix's wrestling coach for about 20 years, when the district had a strong program. For the sake of building the program back up, he is spending his afternoons weighing children in and helping teach fundamentals. He's recreated two of his father's talents to train the young athletes.

From among Norm Probert's ranks, David and Craig Golovich have surfaced. They are co-coaching

School board pulls land purchase out of proposed budget

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Budget talks on the school district's five-year plan have been heating up, and the first thing to falter was not an educational program, but the provision to buy the land across from Castle Farms.

Initially, the $170,000 was to be paid for in one payment during the 1997-98 fiscal year. However, that has been tentatively taken out of the budget. How the land will be paid for is in limbo.

"I was in favor of pulling it out," board member Allen Telgenhof said. "There were enough questions and uncertainties that I don't know if it makes sense to pay for it out of general funds."

For Telgenhof it seemed hypocritical to lay people off, claiming a budget crunch, only to turn around and drop a lump of cash for a land purchase.

"I can't justify that in my own mind," he said.

Ardeth Wieland took a different approach with similar themes. She suggested a cooling-off period before any facilities plan is proposed. She said the community is not ready to support any plan, and that buying land may further polarize opinions.

"The only time to put an issue on the ballot for people to vote is when they're telling you to do it," she said.

Wieland recalled past bond failures, noting that they have failed because the board hurried an issue onto the ballot and was too far in front of the community.

Since securing an option on the M-66 land, the board has been focused on making its purchase of the 117 acres for future building. If the land is paid for by the end of June, the $4,500 already put down will go toward the purchase price. If the money is taken out of the general fund, it can only come through a millage request.

For Larry Levengood, the land question revolves around what the board plans to do long-term.

He said housing an entire campus on the out-of-town land is appropriate. But he's concerned about just moving one school out there. Levengood is worried about sprawl, deed restrictions preventing the land from having homes built on it and resale.

Since the change in school funding, the district can not ask the public for operational money to replace the $170,000 spent on the land.

Credit union hoping to build on south side

The Charlevoix Federal Credit Union is looking for new neighbors. It's not unhappy with those who are adjacent to its Petoskey Avenue address. The business needs more room.

John Dohulis, the credit union's cheif executive officer, is eye-spying land at the corner of Stover Road and May Street. The land currently has an old motel on it that is used for apartments. A new building would be constructed that would double the credit union's space.

City planners Monday recommended that the city council approve a lot rezoning request that would permit the move. The land is currently zoned R-4 and could be changed to professional office.

Several neighbors of the south Charlevoix land spoke in support of the rezoning during a public hearing. Nobody spoke against the request.

"I think it would be a fine addition to the neighborhood," said Bruce Reid, who lives across the street. He said his only concern is lighting, however, he's confident that the credit union will work with neighbors regarding their choices.

Events in brief

Charlevoix man wins lottery cash

The luck of the Irish came to Charlevoix's Gene Farkas last week. He won $777 on a Luck of the Irish lottery ticket.

Farkas took his two tickets home after purchasing them at the 7-Eleven. After he scratched off the silver coating, he was shocked.

"I couldn't believe it so I got a magnifying glass," he said.

Farkas collected his cash Thursday in Grayling. He was one of two people in the state to win the top prize on the game last week.

Rather than go on a spending spree, Farkas said he's putting the money in his savings account.

Artists join to perform Bach musical

The Charlevoix Community Chorale, orchestra and soloists will present "The Passion According to St. Matthew" by J.S. Bach at 4 p.m. Sunday, March 23, on Palm Sunday.

Two Charlevoix area men, Bob Munn and Phil Schairbaum, will sing the roles of Judas and Pilate.

There is no charge, and the public is invited to attend. A reception will follow in the church fellowship hall.

Easter Bunny schedules Charlevoix visit

The Easter Bunny is coming to Charlevoix. The Sixth Annual Easter Egg Hunt downtown will be held on Saturday, March 29.

The day begins at Stafford's Weathervane Restaurant with the Easter Bunny Luncheon from 11:30-1:30 p.m. Children will then be able to have their picture taken with the Easter Bunny.

Following the luncheon and photographs, the egg hunt will begin at 2 p.m. in East Park. Children will be searching for 3,000 eggs, each with a special prize inside. The children will be divided into two groups by age, 2- to 5-year-olds and 6- to 10-year-olds.

The Easter Egg Hunt is sponsored by the Charlevoix Retail Promotions Committee of the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce.

Brick sale memorializes pool contributors

Charlevoix residents can lay their name in brick at the Charlevoix Community Pool. As part of its continuing fund-raising, Charlevoix Friends of the Pool are selling sponsor bricks for the outdoor patio at the pool.

The bricks are 4 by 8 inches, and will be inscribed with the name of choice of the purchaser. Each brick costs $120, with $100 going directly toward paying off the final stage of construction. The other $20 will cover engraving.

There is room for 1,600 bricks in the patio.

The pool dedication is scheduled for Saturday, May 31. Water safety classes will be held for children attending second- through sixth-grades at Charlevoix elementary and middle school, St. Mary's School and students from Northwest Academy, about 688 young people.

For more information on purchasing a brick, call 547-0982.

Travis Burke celebrates a strike Friday during a school outing for Learning Center students at Paul Bunyon Lanes.

Lessons begin at the lanes

The learning lesson began Friday with children rolling a bowling ball down lanes. It will continue throughout this week as first- through fifth-grade students from Charlevoix's learning center write stories about their experience, pen thank you letters for local contributors and use math to graph their scores.

"Every year my unit gets bigger," said learning center teacher, Roxann Roberts. "The kids are so motivated because it's such a great experience."

"This is much more fun than doing math at school," said Erin Christ, as she visited with schoolmates between her times at the line.

Bowling as a springboard for educational lessons has become an annual event for learning center students.

The Kiwanis group sponsors the outing, an experience that doesn't end after a day.

Monday, the students spent the first part of the day watching a videotape of the experience before diving into their follow-up lessons.

Problem-solvers head to state

Charlevoix middle and high school students have qualified five teams for the Michigan Future Problem-Solving State Finals. This competition is sponsored by the University of Michigan and will be held on campus in Ann Arbor on Friday and Saturday, March 21 and 22.

Students will be competing in the intermediate division, which includes grades 7-9, against 50 teams from around the state.

Future Problem-Solving is an international program which teaches students critical and creative problem-solving skills.

Charlevoix's middle school has qualified for 14 consecutive years. The teams have won two state championships and placed as runners-up once.

Team coaches are Tom Sothard and Ann Shindorf.

Gold medalists in the competition preceding state finals were: Laurel English, Joel Trubilowicz, Tyler Lieberman and Shaun MacMillan as the ninth-grade team; Sally Beemon, Troy Smith, Jessie Murray and Hal Evans for the eighth-grade team; and Jim Shepherd, Shawn McDonough, Patrick Gowell and Scott Parish as a seventh-grade team.

Silver medalists were: Laura Borths, Cailin Dulaney, Jenny Dean and Sharon Schulmeister, all eighth-graders, and Jennifer Rowe, Anna Hochhalter, Kate Madison, Adrienne Winchester and Marcy Bennett, all seventh-graders.

Police investigate more break-ins

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Both the county sheriff's department and the Charlevoix City Police are investigating a series of separate, yet possibly related, car break-ins that occurred over the weekend of March 1.

City police are searching for leads in the break-ins of cars mostly from residential areas. According to chief of police Dennis Halverson, the crimes occurred while cars were parked on West Hurlbut, the 300 block of Bridge Street, Belvedere Apartments and State Streets. Among items stolen were car stereos, cellular phones, and personal items like briefcases.

Meanwhile, Charlevoix county deputies are investigating break-ins which occurred that weekend at Brown Motors and Pat McKeown Ford.

According to Sheriff George T. Lasater, damage from the crimes total nearly $15,000. His office has asked for an arrest warrant for one suspect and is actively seeking a second. Deputies are still waiting for word from the prosecutor's office to make arrests.

Eight vehicles were broken into at the car dealerships, while seven cars were damaged in residential areas.

Halverson said there's a chance the crimes are related.

"You play the odds a little bit," he said. "You hope there's only one group committing larcenies on cars in one night. It's something we will pursue, but we can't confirm that yet."

Halverson pointed out that sprees like this are streaky, and normally occur during the winter. He said because of rolled-down windows, these crimes are more prevalent in the summer months.

Cardiac lecture scheduled

A cardiac rehab lecture is open to the community via interactive television, a network linking 13 northern Michigan hospitals and communities, from 7-8 p.m. Thursday, April 3, at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

The topic will be "Understanding the Medication for Your Heart," presented by Eric Warren, of the Munson Medical Center. Participants will have the opportunity to ask questions and participate in the discussion.

There is no fee for the lecture, however, preregistration is necessary. Call Connie Roland, at 547-4024, for further information and to register.

OPINIONS

Exception should be made for Rayder basketball player

EDITORIAL

Ben Owens shouldn't be forced to retire his number 43 Rayder red uniform. He has played high school basketball for three years.

As a junior, he was a starter.

As a senior, he will sit in the stands because of a Michigan High School-Athletic Association ruling. The guidelines state that any student turning 19 prior to September cannot play high school sports. Ben will be 19 in June.

The story isn't unique to Charlevoix. For various reasons, the cut-and-dry rule is punishing honest, upstanding high schoolers who have committed no crime.

As in many situations in life where exceptions are not allowed, the dishonest are the cause.

Ben isn't trying to squeeze out another year of eligibility. He isn't manipulating his way to have another year on the courts to attract college scouts. He isn't trying to delay his graduation to play on a better team or hopping between high schools to get under-the-table recruitment deals.

Ben Owens just wants to play four years of high school basketball like other students do.

When Ben was in third grade, he suffered from a serious case of asthma that kept him from school much of the year. His father held him back, thinking that it was the best decision for Ben because he was falling behind academically.

Little did Jerry Owens know that his son's high school basketball career would max out at three years because of a ruling that has been in effect since the Eisenhower administration.

The Courier was told by the association that there are no exceptions to the rule, not even for children who were held back in their early school years because of illness.

"The rule is not up for interpretation," said John Johnson, the association's communications director.

We think it should be. And so does Ben. However, change won't be coming soon and little hope is being given that it's a possibility. Ben wants to spare other students from being shut out of their favorite sport because of an association technicality.

Charlevoix needs to get behind Ben. We can do so by writing letters to Rep. Beverly Bodem's office, encouraging her to follow through with her push for legislation to force association exceptions. However, even this may not be the answer.

The best way Charlevoix can get behind Ben is to support his personal cause with words of encouragement. We can also give Ben, and all the players who recently stepped off the Rayder basketball court, thanks for their commitment to the school and the sport. We've all let out many cheers and shouts throughout the season.

A hard-working, honest student should be able to play ball with his friends and before his town for four full seasons.

Letters to the editor

Charlevoix needs new middle school

Editor:

My name is Elizabeth McSawby, and I go to the Charlevoix Public Middle School.

I think we need a new middle school. Well if you really want to know why I think we need a new middle school, here are a few reasons:

1. Bigger cafeteria because sometimes kids need to sit at the ends of the tables when we have full band (sometimes even if we don't have full band.)
2. Wobbling floors like in front of Mr. Kanine's room.
3. Ceilings that are leaking like in Mr. Hopkin's room.

That is why I think we need a new middle school.

Sincerely,
Elizabeth McSawby
Sixth Grade

Fire department thanks store for help

Editor:

The members of the Charlevoix Fire Department would like to express their gratitude to Don's IGA Market for the food and refreshments given to firefighters from three fire departments while combating the flower shop fire on Petoskey Avenue Feb. 11.

Throughout the day, Don's IGA furnished drinks, snacks and sandwich's, which were extremely appreciated by the firefighters. When asked for a bill, they refused to accept any reimbursement.

Your kindness and generosity, Don and Rebecca, was appreciated by all the firefighters present.

Doug Carver
Charlevoix fire chief

Pool group thanks Glen's for donation

Editor:

There is rising excitement as the Charlevoix Community Pool nears completion. The dedication date is scheduled for Saturday, May 31. A grand opening date will be scheduled a bit later.

Thanks to the generous gift from Glen's Market of Charlevoix, the Charlevoix School Board was informed that $20,000 will be divided among public and private schools within the Charlevoix School District over two years to provide water safety instruction and swim lessons for students. Thus, it will be possible to begin an introductory program late this spring.

What will it cost to swim? We expect to be competitive with nearby pools. Our resident and non-resident rate will be the same. An adult yearly pass will be approximately $179, a family pass less than $300 per year. Students and seniors will swim for less.

Finally, people have asked if the water now in the pool is there because of a crack. There is no crack —there never was a crack — the engineering design allows some water in the pool for hydrostatic relief.

Stop at the pool, sneak a peek, then consider sending your tax deductible donation to CFOP, P.O. Box One, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

Bruce MacArthur
Charlevoix Friends of the Pool President

EDITH GILBERT

For years there's been talk about building an auditorium in Charlevoix. Lord knows, I've had it with sitting either in the bleachers or on hard metal chairs in the old school gymnasium.

But frankly, one still has to marvel at how well the old gym has been transformed in the past for school plays. Great sets have been designed with movable flats. The sound system functions well even with all those electrical cords taped to the floor. And the lighting is competently handled under most trying circumstances. In spite of all that, school functions are usually pretty well attended by parents and friends for plays, concerts and graduating exercises.

But on the other hand, when contemplating the cost of building a new 600-seat auditorium with comfortable chairs, it was estimated in 1996 that the cost would be about $3,190,000. This was not even for what is known as a "performance" auditorium, which would have cost $2 million more. Naturally, and auditorium would be used by all three schools, K-12. Occasionally it may also be used by business and industry on a rental basis, but rental fees usually barely cover some of the extra expenses of heat, light and janitorial services.

The big dream, of course, is to bring in additional outside entertainment for professional plays, concerts, musicals and other various types of recreation as is done in Petoskey, a town twice the size of Charlevoix.

Recently, the 60 piece Traverse Symphony Orchestra performed at the fairly new, middle school auditorium in Petoskey, which seats 520 people. The audience was truly enthralled with the glorious melodies spanning "100 Years of Broadway." Time and again, they stood and cheered the Rodgers and Hammerstein tunes, "Some Enchanted Evening" sung by the magnificent Chicago baritone, Todd Vitale, followed by "Hello, Young Lovers' sung by San Francisco's beautiful soprano, Kathleen Fuchs.

Unfortunately, only a handful of Charlevoixans attended this outstanding program. Nor do I recognize many Charlevoixans at the well-performed and entertaining plays, or at the Oscar nominated foreign films, or at the professional concert series at the McCune Arts Center in Petoskey, which is the headquarters of the Crooked Tree Arts Council. The council serves both Charlevoix and Emmet counties and brings wonderful programs to our area, including virtuoso pianists, melodic harpists, toe-tapping brass groups, popular guitarists and classical chamber groups. In addition, the attractive McCune Arts Center auditorium seats 250 in comfortable, plush chairs.

Admittedly, it has taken several years to build a hard core, steadfast following for these delightful cultural and varied programs. Most attendees are people who have retired to our area and are accustomed to attending theater, opera, and symphony in Chicago, Detroit, etc. They enjoy good drama and good music. They appreciate a live performance as opposed to watching T.V. Chances are they started attending performances at an early age.

In order to build a future audience for the performing arts, what we need to do now, according to professional artists and musicians, is to cultivate young audiences now.

Not only ought teachers and parents introduce their children to good live performances, but young couples, who maintain there is nothing to do around here, could test the waters and attend an amusing comedy, or a foreign film, or a concert in the winter. They might discover how much they enjoy the experience — yes, they may even become addicted.

As a social observer of the local scene, I've come to the sorry conclusion that before building an auditorium in Charlevoix, we need to build an enthusiastic following of people who will financially support and enthusiastically attend the performing arts that are available at present in neighboring Petoskey. Only then do we deserve to have an auditorium of our own. A 20- or 30-minute drive to enjoy a live performance ought not to deter anyone who is used to driving further than that to ski, play golf, or go out to dinner.

Obituaries

David Clark Anderson

David Clark Anderson, 57, of Charlevoix, died March 8, 1997, at home.

A memorial service will be held at 2 p.m. Friday, March 14, at Christ Episcopal Church in Charlevoix. The Rev. Canon Gordon Cooper will officiate.

Mr. Anderson was born Jan. 25, 1940, in Detroit, the son of Robert V. and Alice Ann (Juknalis) Anderson. He was raised in the Detroit area, where he lived until moving to Charlevoix 24 years ago.

Mr. Anderson served in the U.S. Coast Guard from 1958-63. He was the Charlevoix High School building trades teacher, and retired after 20 years.

He enjoyed collecting antiques and doing woodworking, and loved animals and wild birds.

Mr. Anderson was a member of Christ Episcopal Church in Charlevoix.

On Dec. 12, 1991, he married Ann Duve in Charlevoix.

Survivors include his wife, Ann Duve Anderson, of Charlevoix; two daughters, Debbie Anderson and Doreen Jones, both of Arizona; son, David Anderson, of Romulus, Mich., two brothers, Robert Anderson and his wife, Cathie, of Scotland, and Raymond Anderson and his wife, Patricia, of Placerville, Calif.; one sister, Frances Woosley and her husband, Terry, of Akron, Ohio; and by several grandchildren.

The family suggests memorial contributions be made to Christ Episcopal Church in Charlevoix. Arrangements were handled by the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix.

Maggie Mae Wallace

Maggie Mae Wallace, 93, died Saturday, March 8, 1997, at her home in East Jordan, Mich.

Funeral services will be 2 p.m. Wednesday, March 12, at the Paullin-Penzien Funeral Home in East Jordan. Pastor Dick Sommer of Grace Bible Church in Echo Township will officiate. Interment will be in Morehouse Cemetery in Echo Township, Antrim County.

Maggie was born on July 28, 1903, the daughter of Harrison and Jennie (Moore) Kidder in East Jordan. She grew up in East Jordan and attended Bennett Grade School in Echo Township and graduated from East Jordan High School. She moved to Chicago in 1923.

On September 13, 1925, in Chicago, she married Harry E. Wallace. In 1941 they moved to Hutchinson, Kan., where they made their home for 13 years. They returned to East Jordan in 1954 and became the owners and operators of the Jordan Inn. During that time, Maggie also answered telephones for the police and fire department, and ambulance service of East Jordan and Watson Funeral Home, now known as the Paullin-Penzien Funeral Home. She worked for 23 years and retired in 1977.

She enjoyed reading, cooking, crossword puzzles and crocheting. She attended Grace Bible Church.

Mrs. Wallace is survived by one daughter, Betty Melland and her husband, Donald, of McPherson, Kans.; 8 grandchildren; 13 great grandchildren; 1 great great-granddaughter; one daughter-in-law Jeannine Wallace of Charlevoix; one sister, Lottie Kidder of East Jordan, and several nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by her husband, Harry, on Jan. 13, 1991; her son, Lawrence Kidder on Sept. 12, 1979; one grandson, Joseph Melland on Nov. 4, 1989; two brothers, Joseph and Earl Kidder; and five sisters, Grace Richards, Edith Bennett, Rudy Kidder, Ada Montgomery and Beatrice Erickson.

Friends called on Tuesday from 7-9 p.m. and Wednesday from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Memorials may be given to the donor's choice.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

A recent trip to the pharmacy reminded me of three of the more frustrating words that one can occasionally encounter in life — child proof cap. The drug industry, in its heartfelt desire to protect curious little ones, has invented that intriguingly challenging cap to safely keep medicines for those whom they are prescribed. The only trouble is there are some of us out there who have days when those child proof caps might as well say "adult proof." No matter how hard you push down and twist ... Do you know what I mean? Does life really have to be that complicated?

There's another three-word phrase that resonates with frustration in a lot of parents' and grandparents' hearts. If you have ever bought a toy for your child, you've seen it on more than one occasion — some assembly required. You open the box and out pores this massive array of teeny, tiny parts. Unfolding the directions, you encounter plans that require being part archeologist and part engineer. "Insert tab A into slot G. Twist sprocket P onto hub FF." Thankfully I am blessed with a wife that's good at those things. I marvel at her creativity. But really, does life have to be that complicated?

One of the things that I know a lot of folks have made more complex that it needs to be is their faith. Ask someone about that and chances are good to excellent that you'll get a response that centers around what church they identify with.

Don't get me wrong. There's nothing wrong with being a Methodist, a Catholic, a Congregationalist or even a Church of God-er. But the various denominations are not what having faith is about. It's all about trusting the Lord. When we put the emphasis on our church identity, we can make it more complicated than it needs to be for those who are seeking their faith's identity.

The prophet Micah recorded some real common sense wisdom that fits right here. He wrote, "For he hath showed you, O man, what is good and what doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with thy God." To me, that verse says volumes about those moments in life when it seems like everything is so complex and overwhelming. God seeks to be a part of our lives, not to make things more difficult than they already are. He calls us back to the simple pleasures each day can hold when we put our faith and trust in him. There's not a reformed way of doing things. Our various traditions give us a spiritual heritage. That's true. But the bottom line with all of them rests with "thus saith the Lord."

If the complexities of life have caught up with you, take time out and consider what the Lord has shown you. There are a lot of good things going on all around you right now. The sun is rising earlier and setting later. The snow poles show signs of real shrinkage. Birds can be heard to sing more often. The temperatures are on the upswing.

God has been watching over you through it all. If we would refocus on "doing justly, loving mercy, and walking humbly with our God," much of what seems complicated in life could be greatly simplified in short order.

Questions expose diabetes

There are about 371,000 adults in Michigan who have been diagnosed with diabetes. There are an additional 200,000 to 370,000 Michigan adults who unknowingly have diabetes. People usually find out when they see their physician because they are already experiencing complications from the disease.

Diabetes is a disease that affects the body's ability to produce or respond properly to insulin, a hormone that allows blood sugar to enter the cells of the body and be used for energy.

"The saddest part of all these complications is that they might have been avoided with controlled blood sugar levels," said Peggy Spang, R.N., diabetic educator at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

Charlevoix Area Hospital is joining the American Diabetes Association in "Sound the Alert" on Tuesday, March 25. A pamphlet including a "diabetes risk test" and other informational materials will be available at the hospital in the admitting department.

The public is urged to find out if they are at risk for diabetes by answering seven simple questions on the American Diabetes Association's diabetes risk test. For more information, call Peggy Spang at 547-4024.

Shannon LaVoie and her classmates from the high school's modern communications class traveled to the elementary school to read to first-graders recently. The activity was designed to stress the importance of reading to all the students involved.

Boulder detective visits Charlevoix

An investigator from Boulder, Colo., was in Charlevoix Wednesday and Thursday for another look inside John and Patricia Ramsey's summer home at 112 Belvedere Ave.

A second search warrant was obtained from 90th District Court Judge Richard May Thursday. Details of the search are not being released by Boulder or Charlevoix police and the written request has been sealed.

On Thursday, shortly after a warrant was issued, detective Jane Harmer and Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson searched the Ramsey home.

"This department will not make any additional comments on the scope or results of this second visit to Charlevoix by Boulder police," Halverson said. "We responded to the Boulder Police Department request for our assistance but this would not include our release of additional information."

About $89,000 has been spent on the investigation to date as investigators travel between Colorado, Georgia and Michigan to collect information and interview family and friends of the Ramseys.

The Boulder detective has returned to Colorado to continue the investigation of JonBenet Ramsey's murder, which occurred Dec. 26 in her Colorado home.

New fitness center opens in Charlevoix

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Bob and Debbie Jess have taken their love of athletics and parlayed it into a business venture by opening the Harbor Health and Fitness Center.

"We feel very fortunate to be able to offer the community the use of such a fine facility," Bob Jess said.

The exercise will officially begin at 6 a.m. Friday, March 14, with registration for memberships beginning today until 9 p.m. and continuing from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Thursday, March 13. However, people can work out or attend aerobics classes for free during the registration days.

"It's open for the public to come down and try out the facilities," Jess said.

Formerly Charlevoix Fitness Studio, the center's success, as Jess sees it, will be as simple as the product.

"We feel the center will be successful because we offer the best product in the world — better health," he said.

The Jesses have their own jobs and have hired Candy Smith to manage the fitness center. For years Smith has been teaching aerobics in town, and will be lead instructor in many aerobic and exercise training classes. The gym is equipped with a padded aerobic floor.

Jess has many plans for his new gym beyond the aerobics classes and the use of the nautilus equipment. Self-defense classes, seminars on health and nutrition, and beginner classes for novice fitness seekers are in the works. Saturday mornings, children's programs are being planned with senior citizen programs getting special attention Tuesday and Thursday afternoons.

The gym is located at 102 Mason Street. Memberships can be obtained by stopping in.

Regular gym hours will be from 6 a.m.-9 p.m. Mondays through Fridays, 8 a.m.-3 p.m. Saturdays and noon-6 p.m. Sundays. For more information, call 547-8000.

Business in brief

Red Cross gets new resources manager

The American Red Cross has appointed Jody Werner of Petoskey as state resources manager.

From the Red Cross office in Petoskey, Werner will be responsible for providing resources and support for the 39 local Red Cross Chapters in Michigan.

A 1989 graduate of Michigan State University with a bachelor of arts in general business administration, Werner was previously employed as a blood donor recruitment representative for the American Red Cross Great Lakes Blood Region in Petoskey.

Other previous employment included a stint as regional program director for the American Cancer Society, Michigan Division.

Volleyball season ends at regionals

The Lady Rayder volleyball team was downed in the regional semi-final game by Clare in a hard-fought three set match, 14-16, 15-5, 6-15.

Set one was a back and forth affair with each team taking leads before Clare prevailed, but the Rayders bounced back in the second set with typical flair leaving them confident that the determining set was theirs for the taking.

However, Clare jumped to an early set lead, and the Rayders could not muster a comeback.

"Sometimes there's nothing you can do," coach Brenda Bryan said. "You call time outs, or sub people in but it's hard to come back."

Rogers City upended Clare to take the regional crown and advance to Traverse City for the state quarter-final match.

"Unless you win states, everyone ends the season with a loss, so they should be pretty proud of what they accomplished," Bryan said of her team.

Bryan will return with a lot of familiar faces next winter. The team will have to bid adieu to Lisa Wheat, Jessica VanGuilder and Emily Murray.

Bryan called VanGuilder her most talented defensive player she's ever coached, but had high praise for all three.

"They really kept the team together," she said. "They worked hard to make this a good team, and I'll really miss them for that."

Basketball team falls in first-round play

The Rayder basketball team saw their run through March end with a familiar foe.

Boyne City eliminated them from the tournament with a 79-63 win in the district semi-final. It was the third time this winter that the Rayders fell to the Ramblers.

Boyne City went on to squeeze out another neighbor, East Jordan, in the championship game to advance

Beaver Island takes a shot at district title

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

The beauty behind the state basketball tournament is that everyone gets a chance to compete for the title, no matter the school's size or location.

For that reason, an excitement bubbled on Beaver Island, as their high school basketball team traveled to the mainland to compete in a Class D district tournament in Ellsworth.

For the second time ever, the Islanders took a chance at winning a title. Although they lost to host Ellsworth, 66-53, tipping off with hundreds of other schools chasing the same trophy was enough.

"To go to the mainland, compete in districts, and make a show — that's important," coach Greg Carey said. "We went to win, that's what sports are all about."

The Islanders, who finished their season 4-9, were led by senior Dustin Crandall, who averaged more than 26 points a game. Three times he topped the 30 mark, including a 33-point effort against Mackinaw Island, the Islanders' top rival.

Beyond Crandall, Beaver Island's roster differs from most. A fledgling varsity program has many sophomores and freshmen as key contributors, and due to their tiny enrollment, Carey has dipped into the seventh- and eighth-grades to round out the team. Also on the team is a lady Islander, Jessica McCafferty.

Playing in the state's smallest league, the Northern Lights, which is comprised of Mackinaw Island, and Upper Peninsula schools Paradise, Grand Marais, and Hannahville, Carey said rosters like his are the norm.

"We see that in our league," he said. "Because of our size, we can play younger kids, and it's not unique in our league."

Despite the smallness of league schools, competitiveness is not diminished. Carey described league play as more physical than the style seen on the mainland with a little more pushing and body work.

"For us I guess we don't get off the island much and we're trying to prove a point that we can play," he said. "We don't use our hands as weapons, but we will use the body."

The Islanders play a different schedule than most. Because of the hazards of traveling they play all their games on weekends. Traveling by plane, then by bus, they play a game Friday night, sleep in a classroom at the school, and play a game Saturday morning before heading home. They travel with their school's volleyball squad, and athletic events are a volleyball/basketball double-header.

"It's equivalent to a college team's road trip," Carey said. "It can be a challenge to stay mentally prepared, but I tell the kids we're here to do battle with other schools, and make the island proud."

The island's program began eight years ago to give students a winter event. Now more than a quarter of the island's population attends games. Carey plans on playing in districts each year, and perhaps scheduling more games against mainland teams like Boyne Falls, Wolverine and Vanderbilt. His goal is to play a regular 20-game schedule as sanctioned by the state.

"For us it's so new, it's exciting," Carey said. "It's something to go holler and yell about, something to do in the winter months other than watching the snow fall and waiting for spring."

Basketball on the island appears to be riding a wave of Hoosier-like hysteria. Carey, a cement contractor, says he's installed 14 basketball hoops during the last two years.

Still a little rag-tag, the team doesn't have different road uniforms, logos of league teams on gym walls, bleachers or a trophy case.

"We'll rake leaves, wash cars, whatever we have to do to raise money for that," Carey said. "The fact that we don't have any of that just shows how new and virgin we are at this."

Still not many area teams, can claim to have a team plane to fly them from game to game.

to the regional bracket in Gaylord, where they will match up with Lincoln-Alcona.

Against the Rayders, Boyne struck early and often earning a lead of 15 at the half, which grew past 20 seconds into the third quarter. The Rayders, though, took one last stand reeling off 11 points in a row to close the gap, but the Ramblers took the lead up to 15 going into the final stanza.

From there, the going was tough for Charlevoix. Boyne City has been sterling much of the year, scoring with efficiency. Five of their six losses have come on buzzer-beaters of all kinds.

The Rayders could not keep up, but were never out of it until the closing minutes.

Senior Steve Carland paced Charlevoix with 17 points followed by Ben Owens who scored 11. In their final game as Rayders Carland also grabbed eight rebounds while dishing off six assists and Owens snared seven boards.

Charlevoix freshman makes all-state ski team

Charlevoix freshman Tiffany Fisher has been voted to the 1997 Class B-C-D All-State second team.

The voting was done by the Michigan Ski Coaches Association, and 25 skiers statewide placed on one of the lists.

Voting is predominately based on performances in the state and regional meet, with some emphasis on regular season performance.

While the Rayders failed to advance as a team, Fisher qualified for the state meet as an individual, finishing 13 in the Giant Slalom and 20 in the Slalom event.

Young wrestlers place high at invitational

Middle and elementary school wrestlers competed in their first competition Saturday in Cheboygan.

Out of 10 teams, the middle schoolers had seven first-place wins, Chris Loper, Anthony Cesaro, Ryan Leitner and Roy Cooter, and six second-place wins, Delos Lanterman, Danielle Flowers, Jerry Zeitler, Bo Moore and Jesse Hahn. Top finishers for the elementary wrestlers were: first place, Nathan Golovich, Shannon Gillespie and Brett Probert, and second place Raymond Jones.

Charlevoix hosts a home meet at 10 a.m. Saturday, March 15, at the high school.

After having 49 elementary and middle school students come out for the wrestling team, about 30 have taken their technique on the road for Saturday meets. Charlevoix hosts 11 schools this Saturday, March 15, at the high school.

the middle-elementary team. Both men are Charlevoix graduates who traveled the north as Rayder wrestlers. They, too, want to boost the program.

Besides, both men have sons — a total of five next generation Goloviches — on the team.

"We took them to tournaments last year," Craig said of the young boys. "It turned them on. I think they're in it for the long haul.

Danielle, too, wants to wrestle through high school. In one week, she can't even count all the moves her new coaches have taught her and her teammates.

In the elementary school gym, the kids are wrestling against students their own age. Mats fill the half of the gym they're allowed to use. Given more space, the team would increase its practices to five days a week, Probert said.

As March Madness signifies the ending of hoops and volleyball serves come to an end, these young Rayders take their first steps into a new season. They will travel to area schools to be matched on the mats with other wrestlers of similar weight and age. The season began March 8 in Cheboygan. The second tournament is hosted by Charlevoix Saturday. A total of 12 schools will bring their young enthusiasts to pursue points and pins.

The kids don't mind that they are wearing four different styles of hand-me-down uniforms and used head gear. They will be among about 200 other wrestling enthusiasts who see the thrill behind using physical strength and strategy to down the opponent.

Board looks at how to pay for M-66 land

"Cash for this would have to come out of educational programs," Levengood said. Before that is done he would like to see more public and board discussion on the issue.

Funding concerns were echoed by Wieland. She compared the situation to that of a family strapped for cash, but who needed to buy shoes for their children. When do you dip into available resources, and how to replace spent funds are issues Wieland's hypothetical family and the school board would need to settle.

One board member seems ready to purchase the land. "Land prices continue to climb, so this is a good deal," Jerry Owens said, citing that it's time the district looks seriously into the future. "It's the way we should go."

Levengood hinted that the board might have found better land if size hadn't been the main criteria. More could be done with less.

"I don't think there was enough imagination and planning on some of the sites," he said. "Maybe we don't need to get what's ideal, maybe we could make do with less than that."

Telgenhof, while not willing to use general fund money to buy the land, favors this site when considering a long-range facilities project, especially for an entire campus.

Superintendent Roberta Jackson said the money that was planned to be spent on the land will be redirected toward repairing the high school roof. Much of the costs will be covered by the $170,000, with the remainder and other repairs such as asbestos removal, arch and electrical work paid for through a sinking fund. Jackson said she will be recommending at the next meeting that the board put a proposal for one mill for six years on the June 9 ballot. That would generate about $2.56 million.

Money to buy the land can be included in a sinking fund, but Jackson would rather see the board put the expense back into the general fund. Wording on the ballot will clearly state what the fund can pay for.

"It's time for the board to secure land for the long-term," she said. "We need to move on with it."

The next meeting is 7:30 p.m. Monday, March 17, at Charlevoix high school.

Sherri Jones is presented a plaque by Charlevoix Fire Chief, Doug Carver, for being EMT of the Year, for her medical skills, and more importantly, her determination to attain her EMT-Specialist certification. She has been a member of the department since 1994.

Hospice raffles classic car

One lucky person who makes a donation to Charlevoix County Hospice will be traveling in style.

The hospice is holding a drawing for a 1949 Jaguar automobile in terrific shape. Tickets are $100 and only 200 will be sold.

The winner will be drawn at the annual hospice auction June 13 at Boyne Mountain, and need not be present to win.

The car was donated to the hospice by an area man, since deceased, who wished to remain anonymous.

"This is the first time, and possibly the last time, we'll have something like this classic car to raffle off. We're absolutely thrilled, and indebted to the family that donated it to us," said hospice director Margaret Lasater, who added that the non-profit facility receives all of its funding from public donations.

Proceeds will provide care at no charge for the terminally ill and their families in Charlevoix, Emmet and Antrim counties, as well as materials for community outreach programs, according to the director.

Winners of the car will have to provide 6-percent sales tax and plate and transfer fees.

For more information or to purchase tickets, call 536-2842.

Some lucky raffle winner will get to drive away in this classic 1949 Jaguar, and benefit Charlevoix County Hospice programs as well.

Anna Belle Webb

Anna Belle Webb, 96, of Charlevoix, died March 5, 1997, at home.

A memorial service was held at 1 p.m. Monday, March 10, at the First Congregational Church in Charlevoix with the Rev. Philip G. Schairbaum officiating.

Mrs. Webb was born Aug. 1, 1900, in St. Elmo, Ill., the daughter of Presley M. and Anna B. (Howell) Johnston.

She graduated from the National Kindergarten College in Evanston, Ill., and from Columbia University in New York City. She moved to Charlevoix in 1973 from Birmingham, Mich.

Mrs. Webb was a teacher all of her life. She was an active member of the First Congregational Church in Charlevoix, Charlevoix Area Hospital Guild and the Charlevoix Garden Club.

In her later years, Mrs. Webb was particularly interested in developing her garden to attract butterflies and birds. This endeavor was successful and provided her much happiness.

She married Frank D. Webb, and he preceded her in death.

Mrs. Webb is survived by her daughter, Janet Franklin, of Charlevoix; granddaughter, Jill Franklin, and two great-granddaughters, Kah Sandra and Malika, all of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; one sister, Rosalynde Johnston, of Charlevoix; and many nieces and nephews.

Memorial contributions may be made to the First Congregational Church or to Charlevoix County Hospice. Envelopes for memorials are available at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix.

SCRAPBOOK

Pranks part of history at early gas stations

Hometown Chronicles

By Marilyn Boss
Courier columnist

On the corner of Antrim and State streets, in the mid-1930's were three businesses: Iken's Standard Service, Hooker's Garage and horse barn and Hansen's Studebaker car dealership and bicycle shop, commonly known around town as Hansen's garage. The courthouse was on the fourth corner.

One small gas station is still there today, incorporated into the building which houses Judy's Restaurant. There was a private home directly behind the station, which was located where the Michigan Bell building is today. A nice older lady lived there, named Molly Smith. My dad, Glenroy Ikens, and Bud Gill, who operated the station together, were always playing jokes on Molly. They would stand down in the oil change pit, and shoot a water hose up on Molly's windows, and she would think it was raining.

One time, they put a dead skunk on her front porch. Rigor mortis had set in, and he looked pretty good. Another time, they got a long string of sausages, which were twisted in between each one, and placed them on her front porch, stringing them all the way down the sidewalk. At that time, State Street was used by many people to walk to town, and they passed by her front door, which was close to the sidewalk. Thank goodness she was a nice older lady, and could take a practical joke. In spite of it all, they were good friends.

State Street had beautiful islands in the center of it at that time. Street lights and flower gardens embellished the scene, making it a beautiful boulevard.

Hooker's garage and barn were directly across the street, and part of it is the back room of Oleson's food store today. Harry Hooker was a second ward alderman for many years. He and his wife, Rose, their children, and Harry's mother lived in the upper front living quarters. Harry's mother went to the Methodist church every Sunday, and always wore a big wide brimmed hat. The Hookers kept a lot of horses, which were taken every morning to the north side paddock, which was located where Sam Supernaw and Jeff Pines have homes today. It was a fenced in field, on Division Street, between Burns and Prospect. At that location, the horses were rented to resort children who wanted to ride. Local kids loved to go down there and help ride the horses to the paddock. In the early 1950s, where Dale and I first lived at North Point, riders came by our home most every day. North Point was primitive then, with one main grassy road.

Glenroy Ikens and Bud Gill in front of their gas station in the 1930s.

The garage stored all the wealthy summer visitors' automobiles and limousines. Every morning the chauffeurs would be washing and polishing their owners' big, fancy vehicles. Also, early each morning, a large load of manure was hauled by horse and wagon up Antrim Street and out Norwood Road to Hookers farm, located just off the Barnard Road. Hay and straw would be brought back to town for the horses in the building downtown.

In the winter, Hookers had the contract with the city to plow city sidewalks with a horse and V plow. This was done early each morning.

When I was about 7 years old, I would come each day across the hill between Antrim and Hurlbut streets, run down a little path, then over to the station to take my dad a sandwich. Joe Guild owned the old Martha Ayers house on top of the hill. It was four stories high, including a tower on the top. The house was in ill repair, but the men who were in town during World War II, took turns sitting in the tower, watching and reporting all planes coming overhead.

We had curfews when all the town lights had to be out. One day Joe had a billy goat tied up under the big fir tree by the alley. As I ran down the path, I saw the goat too late, and he chased me, until he was pulled up short by his tether. A mighty scared little girl managed to get away and across the street to give Dad his sandwich, but after that, I went home on the far side of the street.

National campaign educates on dangers of inhalant use

A week-long nationwide campaign designed to alert youth, parents and educators in northern Michigan about the dangers of inhalants and poisons will run from Sunday-Sunday, March 16-23.

More than 1,000 common household products, everything from cleaning fluids to spray paint, can be misused by intentionally inhaling concentrated fumes.

A 1995 national household survey indicates that more than 1 million youth nationwide has sniffed or "huffed" a legal product to get high and an estimated 660,000 users tried inhalants for the first time last year. Inhalants are the fourth most popular "drug of choice" for middle school kids after alcohol, tobacco and marijuana, according to the National Institute of Drug Abuse 1996 "Monitoring the Future" survey.

Many kids in our area try inhalants for the same reasons that kids across America do. Inhalants are easy to get, cheap, hard to detect after use and legal. According to Bert Notestine, health educator for Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, "Inhalants harm a person every time they use them; and can kill someone anytime they use them."

To compound the problem of easy access to inhalants, some local shops have encouraged their use. Promotions have included the sale of nitrous oxide to get high at parties. The first use of this inhalant can be the last one.

Harvey Weiss, executive director of the National Inhalant Prevention Coalition, calls inhalant abuse a "silent epidemic." He went on to say that "only recently has it gained the attention of media at the national level.

For more information about inhalants, contact the Emmet County office of the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency (formerly District Health Department No. 3) at (616) 347-6014 or National Inhalant Prevention Coalition at (800) 269-4237.

Intermediate school district helps distant students

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Even though the gift-giving frenzy of December has passed, it always can be remembered that it's the giving, not the quantity or dollar value of the gift, that is important.

The Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District has taken that approach in adopting a sister school in Haiti. The Redempteur School in Carrefour, near the nation's capitol of Port Au Prince, has been receiving donations from their new parent since January, and will continue to do so once a month throughout the school year.

"It's a very small piece of the world, but if we impact one small piece in this way, more kids might get a better education," Jack Dean, district social director, said.

Dean said donations have been pooled together from his colleagues through payroll deductions. They have sent $150-200 a month to Carrefour. Despite the tiny dollar amount, Dean said the impact can still be large.

"One at a time it may not be much, but the cumulative effect pooled altogether, it's a good deal of money," said Dean, whose eyes are set on the impact their idea may have on another corner of the world.

The district approached World Vision Organization, a group devoted to world outreach, about adopting a school in an educational challenging environment.

Dean said that they wanted to pinpoint a place where a need existed, somewhere in this hemisphere so the possibility of visiting would be practical. They wanted to be "supplementing income, and not supplanting money they were expecting to get anyway."

World Vision took their criteria and matched them with the Redempteur School in southern Haiti.

The school is six years old, educates 350 children and has graduated 80 students. It operates on a tight budget of under $15,000, all combed in from the country's various private sectors. Char-Em's contribution could boost the school's income by 10 percent. Carrefour is a semi-rural, agricultural town that can only contribute so many dollars to the school.

"The reality of life is that Haiti's government spends zero percent of its federal budget on education," Char-Em social worker, Paul Brendtro, explained. "They are not a tax-supported entity."

Even though local people have learned about the school, communication with its staff has remained primitive. Dean expected to be E-mailing back and forth, but Redempteur lacks a computer.

Neither Dean nor Brendtro know exactly what the money will be used for, but they do know it is needed to do more than update the school into the modern world of technology. Basic needs are plentiful and take priority over modems, Internet and faxes. Dean guesses from his research on the school that rudimentary supplies like chalk, blackboards, desk, and books will be bought with the new cash influx.

"No matter what your funding is, there are some basic tenants," Brendtro said. "You know you're going to have desks."

Dean and Brendtro expect the money to make a difference in students' lives.

"A strong precursor of democracy is education," Brendtro added. "If we can raise expectations in our and other's lives, it will have a spin-off effect. We need that as the world gets smaller and smaller through technology."

Charter school gets grant

Northwest Academy in Charlevoix was notified Friday by the State Department of Education that they will be receiving a $15,000 grant from the goals 2000 Grant Program.

The grant was applied for by school administrator Pascale Asbury and board vice chair Mark Muniak in November. The money will be used for professional development related to the Internet and curriculum. Staff development will take place both at the school and away. Opportunities to bring professionals to the school to share new knowledge and develop a regional resource network and sending the staff to workshops and conferences will be available.

The money received will be used from April 1997 through October 1998.

Elementary students put on spring show

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Charlevoix elementary students will be cruising through the decades during their annual spring musical at 7 p.m. Thursday, March 20.

The show, entitled So Many Possibilities, will escort the audience through musical memories of the 1950s, 60s, 70s and 80s. The songs will look at possible futures, dreams and careers.

Students have been learning their songs and dances, and have been painting sets in preparation of the annual event. Second-graders are turning 120 pizza boxes into briefcases for their Briefcase Brigade.

"It's a nice time of sharing," said elementary music teacher, Marina LaBlance, noting how proud the students are of their accomplishments by show time.

"They really have a genuine interest," said Beth McGraw, of her art students who are working hard to finish the sets.

For about one-and-a-half hours, parents who once took part in the musical can watch the next generation of Rayders perform.

The show will have a total of 14 songs and five dances. There will be solos and entire grade-levels performing together.

There is no charge for the community events. The public is invited to attend the main performance or a dress rehearsal at 9:30 a.m. that morning in the high school gym.

June election ballot fills with issues

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

June 9 is shaping up to be a busy day at the polls for Charlevoix Public Schools.

Three seats are up for grabs, two four-year terms and a one-year term to round out the tenure of Sulane Hamilton, who resigned effective Monday.

K. Scott Boss and Mark Alan "Barney" Way have already dropped off signed and sealed petitions at the superintendent's office announcing their candidacy.

Should the four men who were up for the three-month appointment until the election follow through on their stated plans to run, and if both incumbents, board president Mary Lee Campbell and Joan Buday seek re-election, at least eight people will be on the ballot. Petitions with at least 20 signatures must be submitted to the superintendent's office no later than 4 p.m. Monday, April 7, to be listed on the ballot.

Beyond candidates for the board, citizens will face at least one, maybe two proposals which will shape the district's future.

In all likelihood, a proposal to form a sinking fund to take care of major repairs at the high school and elementary school will be on the ballot.

Superintendent Roberta Jackson recommended to the board during their last meeting that the proposal should be for one mill over six years. That would generate $2.6 million during that period and according to Jackson cover the costs of the projects that need to be done.

The high school steam lines need to be replaced and converted to hot water heat, roofs at both schools need to be replaced, arches at the high school need to be refurbished, asbestos removal which in turn would necessitate new lighting and floor covering, electrical wiring needs to be updated to the demand of technology use, and bathrooms need to become barrier-free.

Judge favors ZBA ruling on variances

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Part of a court case involving the city and land owners near Depot Beach has been settled. And the second part could disappear if Charlevoix buys the property from the plaintiff.

A written decision from 33rd Circuit Court backed the city zoning board of appeals' vote to deny Waterfront Partners two variances to build a single-family home on a .35 acre strip of land near the beach.

"It shows that the ZBA considered all the evidence before making the decision," said city attorney, Jim Young, as he reported the results to city council Monday.

Waterfront had asked for more than $10,000 in damages in the case, all of which has ended. However, the partnership is still pursuing a second lawsuit that claims the city regulations are over-restrictive and have resulted in limiting all reasonable use of the property. Litigation could continue for months.

The land in question is located next to the Coast Guard Station on the north side of town and has about 650 feet of water frontage on Lake Charlevoix and the Pine River Channel. While the lawsuit continues, the city is applying for a grant to buy the land, which would end the final stage of the lawsuit and give Charlevoix one more public park.

The grant application was ap-

Keeping watch

Ducks guard Christmas tree

December days of hanging Christmas ornaments on the community Christmas tree are long over. But ducks and seagulls continue to watch over the winter-worn creations of Charlevoix's children as they stubbornly hang from the pine's limbs. Soon city workers will give the ornaments their rest as spring is ushered into town.

Islander hurt on sled

Riley Markey was operating a snowmobile on an unplowed road on Beaver Island March 2, and got too close to a County "Not Plowed hy..." sign.

He struck his left shin on the sign throwing him off the machine. Markey got back on the machine and drove to the machine owner's residence. Markey was taken by private vehicle to Beaver Island Rural Health Center, where his injuries were stabilized. He was then taken to Charlevoix Hospital by Beaver Island EMS and Charlevoix Ambulance.

He was treated and released, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

Events in brief

Recreational trail meetings set for tonight

The Top Of Michigan Trails Council will hold a Charlevoix Trail Committee meeting for Charlevoix County residents interested in helping develop a recreational trail from Charlevoix to Petoskey at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 19. The meeting will be at the Charlevoix City Hall, 210 State St.

The council is a nonprofit organization working to develop a multi-use trail system throughout northern Michigan and works as a coalition to form paths for biking, hiking, in-line skating, snowmobiling, equestrian and cross country skiing.

The local committee is working with the council to develop a trail from the city of Charlevoix to Bay Harbor, where an Emmet County trail will connect.

Stolen car recovered

A car stolen from near the middle school on Mason Street March 8 was discovered three days later on the expressway hy the West Branch State Police.

The 1991 Buick LaSabre was stolen from owner Kathleen Murdick's driveway. The keys had been left in the car, along with a wallet and $200, Charlevoix police chief, Dennis Halverson, said.

A Brutus teenager was found driving the car at 80 mph when police located it. The 15-year-old has been transported to McComb County, where he is on probation for malicious destruction of property on a police car.

The car has been returned to Murdick, apparently not damaged. However, the wallet and the money have not been recovered.

Big Rock Point expected to start up late this week

Big Rock Point nuclear power plant is expected to return to service by this weekend. The plant shut down March 2 for repairs to a back-up core spray valve. Once shut down, the outage was extended to repack to core spray pumps and fix an oil leak in the turbine, said plant public affairs director, Tim Petrosky.

"Once you shut the plant down and start to investigate," Petrosky said. "This is when you discover additional work that needs to be done."

The plant has operated for a total of 30 days during 1997. According to Petrosky, Consumers Energy does plan to operate Big Rock until the end of its license on May 31, 2000.

"Our goal is to become the first plant in the United States to operate through the end of its operating license," he said. "However, we do review the performance of the plant on a daily basis. We have to operate and be a benefit to our customers to make it to the end of license. There is no guarantee."

Charlevoix Township to build new water tower on north side

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Everybody could use a sibling, and in Charlevoix Township that goes for the water towers.

The township's south side is already equipped with a red and white, 150,000-gallon tower. In April a second, a twin according to supervisor Oscar Stroud, will be erected on the township's north side in Shanahan Park.

While not maxed to capacity, Stroud said expansion of the water system is necessary to keep up with area growth.

"It's time to be prepared to meet the challenge," he said, pointing out that the township has seen more than 50 new homes huilt in the last year. "In order to take care of the population growth, we have to expand our water system, or else get out of it."

In addition to residents, the township also provides water to Hayes Township residents along North Point Woods and Charlevoix Country Club.

Currently, three pumps help supply that water, but the new tower may store 50,000 extra gallons. Also if an electrical outage occurs, the area would lose water. According to Stroud, residents could withstand a power outage for four or five days and still have water with the new tower in place.

The pumps, sheltered in a storage shed at Shanahan Park, will remain as a substitute should something falter with the tower.

According to Stroud, initial construction costs will hover around $430,000, hut that doesn't include tapping and drilling wells to get the water. Stroud said the money will come out of the township's general fund.

> "In order to take care of the population growth, we have to expand our water system, or else get out of it."
> — Oscar Stroud, township supervisor

Gosling and Czubeck, an engineering firm in Traverse City, will he designing the tower and drilling the wells. According to Tim Roach, associate of the firm, two wells will be dug in the Charlevoix Country Club, on the south side of Stonebridge. The wells will be 200 feet from each other.

The tower should he running by fall.

As the north side gets its new tower, the south side predecessor will be taking on a new look. The township has leased space on top of it for antennas to improve cellular phone reception in the area.

Noverr Publishing Inc., a communication company out of Traverse City, approached the township to build a tower for its antennae. When representatives spotted the water tower they inquired about its availability.

"We were willing to try it," Stroud said.

The township is awaiting word from their attorneys before the deal is finalized. Stroud said the length of the agreement will be five years with renewal options.

Noverr's antennae will be six feet long, 18 inches wide, with six inches extending above the top of the tower. Stroud said the possibility exists for an antennae on the new tower also.

Arrest made for Ritalin theft from school

After a three month investigation, the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department has arrested a school bus driver and charged her with stealing Ritalin from the Charlevoix Elementary School nurse's office.

The 43-year-old woman is a resident of Emmet County. She is also a bus driver for the Charlevoix Public School system, the sheriff's department reported.

Lasater arrested the woman Monday morning on a felony warrant of illegal entry without breaking, but with intent. This is a five-year felony. The warrant was authorized by Charlevoix County Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Larry Burgess and a $5,000 personal recognizance bond was set by 90th District Court Magistrate David Kurchinski.

Sheriff Lasater commends the Charlevoix Elementary principal and staff for their cooperation and assistance throughout the investigation.

Arraignment has been scheduled for Monday, March 24, in 90th District Court.

The name of the defendant is being withheld until arraignment.

Charlevoix school board needs to slow down

EDITORIAL

The school board, the community, isn't ready to buy land.

Regardless of a failed millage request last September, the board continues to travel toward three new schools — an educational empire, as some people in the community are calling it.

We understand that future planning is necessary, and the board is taking a positive step by planning to ask voters for a sinking fund June 9 that will generate about $2.6 million over six years for building repairs. This shows respect for a community that has said no to the grand plan.

However, as the shaping of a five-year budget continues, there is still a danger that $170,000 could be spent out of the district's general fund for 117 acres across from Castle Farms that the community doesn't necessarily want.

Not much objection has been raised by taxpayers regarding the purchase of the land. We think the community is tired of fighting with the board at every turn. Many of them are withholding their speeches until they are made at the polls. The land isn't worth much if voters repeatedly turn down millage requests to build.

The board needs to address why the schools' current locations are no longer acceptable.

Many people believe that new schools can eventually be built next to the old buildings, before tearing them down. This was the case when the middle school was built downtown.

The board needs to find the pulse of the community and represent them as elected officials should.

In turn, voters need to actively pursue answers to their questions. Many people don't have the time or energy to sit through school board meetings twice a month. Instead, present written requests to the board, make phone calls to its members and write letters to the editor. We can't get or stay frustrated and commit to saying no regardless of the request.

Until the community and the school board are less segregated on what Charlevoix students need, buying land appears to be a stubborn approach to getting one's way. The school board needs to step back and give the community some time.

The way the system is set up, the board has the responsibility of burden of proof. It must present a believable and compelling case to the taxpayers as to why they should part with hard-earned money for either new schools or major repairs.

The board has done a good job showing the community what is broken. But all the while, it has looked toward discarding the old and building brand new. Now, it must figure out how to responsibly fix what is broken until the community decides it's worn out.

If the board questions the community's stand on the purchase of the proposed land, it should ask taxpayers for the money to buy the land on June 9. This is risky. They could say no. But at least the elected officials would know that their constituents are not in agreement with a plan that is being presented as Charlevoix's educational future.

Let the people speak where they are most comfortable to be open and honest — at the polls.

Charlevoix schools need drug testing

Editor:

I guess Ms. Harrington and I could disagree more, I am just not sure how. Zero tolerance. That is the only answer for drugs and alcohol in the school system. Drug and alcohol testing should be part of policy for Charlevoix schools.

A responsible society (school) has laws (rules) to protect citizens (students) from the behavior of others and, unfortunately, at times, from themselves. Erratic driving may cause the police to stop a motorist. Clues during the interview may prompt the officer to administer a test for blood alcohol. Does anyone feel this makes for a police state? Does anyone really believe this to be an unjust infringement on the liberty of the drunk driver? As a condition of employment many corporations require drug testing. There may also be specific drug testing requirements if an injury is sustained on the job. If you want a job you must agree to these policies. These are the facts of life in our society. Why should students be protected from similar rules. The goal of the school system is to educate and help prepare students to become integrated members of society.

Testing students for suspicion of drug or alcohol is entirely reasonable. Random testing of athletes is the price of admission to be part of the team. Athletics remain a privilege, not a right. The policy should also be specific on punishment. Students should be removed from the team for the season if they are participating in athletics and suspended from school.

Most importantly, the policy must include family counseling before the student is allowed to return to school. The board of education must be willing to stand behind such a policy. This commitment may involve defending against expensive litigation initiated by unhappy parents.

A zero tolerance policy does encourage learning. Peer pressure to drink or take drugs is eliminated. Young people can be accepted for who they really are, not some mind altered, cool (dates me) fantasy, of what they think their drug-using friends would like. Students will find it easy to become involved in activities.

I do agree this policy does not release the parents from the responsibility of educating their children on the danger of drugs and alcohol. Unfortunately, the best parents need help watching their children. Teachers and coaches are some of the most important authority figures interacting with the children. Schools become the center of social life for many students. Teachers and coaches already take responsibility for our children many hours a day. Because I believe the teachers and coaches have the welfare of the students as a high priority, they will continue to monitor for drug and alcohol use and administer testing appropriately. This ability makes the teachers' jobs easier. They are able to act upon suspicions and make necessary interventions to keep the school drug

I think we are lucky here in Charlevoix. I hope I don't have my head in the sand, but I don't believe we have a large drug problem. My suggestion would be to encourage the school board to enact a policy that makes drug and alcohol testing available to continue to keep the schools safe. Will this cost taxpayers a few dollars? Yes, no doubt. I think whatever the cost, it is worth the price to protect our most valuable resources, our children.

Questions remain on M-66 property

Editor:

The Beta Design Group created a Charlevoix Site Master Plan for the 117-acre school property last Dec. 13, 1996. That plan includes a 84,000-square-foot middle school, and a 124,000-square-foot high school. If each school were 100 feet wide, and one story high, the middle school would be 840 feet long, and the high school would be 1,240 feet long, almost one quarter mile long.

How many non-teaching personnel would be required to maintain a 117-acre campus?

The plan shows septic fields for the schools. The adjacent property was declared unsuitable for septic fields because of a high water table.

Genders shouldn't be mixed during wrestling

Editor:

I read your front page story about our young Charlevoix wrestlers with some concern. My concern is allowing young ladies and young men to wrestle against each other. This is dangerous and may promote improper future relationships for budding adolescents.

Sports involving physical contact should keep men and women separate. In the case of wrestling, there is nothing but physical contact. If you want to win, then you must handle your opponent physically. You cannot defeat them with your strategies or mental thoughts.

My first reason for not allowing co-ed wrestling is what it is teaching our young men. They are indirectly being taught that it is fine to physically control a young lady. Look around and read the statistics about domestic violence or date rape. Our young men need to be taught just the opposite. They should be taught to honor and respect our young ladies. This is not an equality issue. It is an issue of character. Our young men should be taught how to open doors for young ladies, not drive their skulls into the mat; how to protect the young ladies, not use any opportunity to crush them as opponents.

Secondly, we should keep a high standard of proper inhibitions between males and females. I wrestled through middle school and high school. I know the holds; I know the moves. And no one will ever be able to convince me that it is proper for young ladies and men to be touching each other in those ways outside of marriage. God has set a standard of purity in the natural inhibitions we have. We break down these areas of restraint when we allow excessive physical contact between the genders.

Let me encourage our parents, our schools, and our community leaders to take a second look at allowing co-ed wrestling. Compare the pros and the cons with the future moral standards between young ladies and young men. I would also encourage our Charlevoix wrestling coaches to take a stand at the wrestling meets and not allow co-ed matches to take place. If there are young ladies who would like to wrestle, establish an all-female team.

God has created us equal; however there are distinct differences between males and females. I, in no way, wish to communicate that the former is not true. I only wish to illuminate notable difference and establish proper respect among our young people.

Thanks for support with extravaganza

Editor:

I want to take this opportunity to thank the community for their wonderful support of the annual Charlevoix Middle School Extravaganza! We had over 100 personal and business contributions that made this year the best yet!

Half the money raised will be used to purchase "luxury" items that are not normally put in the school budget. The other half of the money is divided among the sixth, seventh, and eighth-grade classes at CMS.

I would like to personally thank Marilyn Sliger, Sandy Meredith, and Lori Foster for their exceptional organizational help. They were extremely efficient and worked long, hard hours to make this a very successful event. It was a pleasure to have their help.

I hope to continue this tremendous response from the community for next year's extravaganza. Thanks again to all who contributed to the CMS Extravaganza.

Sincerely,
Lynn Crowley
Chair, CMS Extravaganza

Wedding

Gebott-King

Eliana Alexis Gebott and Joseph Norman King were joined in marriage at 3 p.m. Feb. 1, 1997, at the Ellsworth Christian Reformed Church before 100 guests. The Rev. David Weemhoff performed the double-ring rites.

Eliana is the daughter of Jack and Barbara Gebott, of Charlevoix. Joseph is the son of John and Carol King of Wayland, Mich.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Jack D. Gebott, Jr. She wore a cathedral-length, ivory and satin gown with re-embroided lace and embellished pearls and sequins. The gown was off-the-shoulder with short sleeves of ruffles and fabric roses, The fitted bodice had a deep basque waistline with beaded lace. The veil was ivory and double-tiered with a corded ruffle edge. It was attached to a halo of ivory and mauve silk rosebuds.

She carried a cascade bouquet of ivory silk roses with mauve rosebuds and ivory hyacinth, and complimented with greens and silk ribbons.

During the wedding, Sharon Alofs, of Petoskey, played organ for soloist, Donald Heeres, cousin of the bride from Mancelona. He sang the theme from Karate Kid II, "The Glory of Love" and "The Lords Prayer."

Maid of honor was Stacy Massey, sister of the bride from Sturgis, Mich. Dawn Craigmyle, of Coldwater, Mich., was a bridesmaid. They wore jade T-length, satin dresses with a scalloped neckline and tulip sleeves. They carried silk, ivory long-stem roses with greens.

The flower girl was Sydney Cecelia Aravis King, the groom's 4-year-old daughter. She wore an ivory dress with mauve rosebuds. She carried a basket of pastel rose petals.

Ring bearer was Jonathon Long, the 7-year-old son of the best man from Flint.

The best man was Thomas Long of Flint. Groomsman was Randy Craigmyle of Coldwater, Mich. Usher was Robert Massey, of Sturgis, Mich., brother-in-law of the bride.

A reception was hosted by the bride's parents at the Ellsworth town hall.

Rehearsal dinner was held Jan. 31, 1997, at the Ellsworth Christian Reformed Church fellowship room. It was hosted by the bride's family.

A wedding trip was spent in southern Michigan.

The couple are making their home in Charlevoix, where Eliana is a certified nurse's aide at Boulder Park Terrace. Joseph is employed at East Jordan Iron Works.

Ellen Addington rehearses the Charlevoix Area Community Chorale Thursday in preparation for Sunday's performance of "The Passion According to St. Matthew."

Bach's passion arrangement celebrates Palm Sunday

"The Passion According to St. Matthew," by J.S. Back, has been called the greatest work in sacred music literature. It will be performed at 4 p.m. Palm Sunday, March 23, at the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix by the Charlevoix Area Community Chorale, soloists and chamber orchestra.

Like the oratorio "The Messiah," by Handel, the passion production is seldom performed in its entirety because of its length. The abridged version to be sung Palm Sunday was edited by the late David McKay Williams when he was choir master and organist at St. Bartholomews Church in New York. It maintains the continuity of text and music. This work has been called "the flowering of protestant church music," according to show conductor, Ellen Addington.

The show will include four soloists: Julie Pierpont, soprano, Barbara Windham, mezzo-soprano, Carl Kaiser, tenor and Jeffery Norris, bass.

In addition to the main soloists, four area singers will be singing roles of Judas, Caiaphas, Pilate's wife and Pilate: Bob Munn, Jack Jones, Marilyn Jones and Phil Schairbaum.

There is no charge for viewing the performance. A free-will offering will be accepted.

A reception in the church's fellowship hall will follow the program.

Viola Ranger Wade

Viola Ranger Wade, 93, of Charlevoix, died March 16, 1997, at Boulder Park Terrace Nursing Home in Charlevoix.

A memorial service was held at 11 a.m. Tuesday, March 18, at the First Congregational Church in Charlevoix. The Rev. Philip G. Schairbaum officiated and interment will be in Brookside Cemetery, Charlevoix.

Mrs. Wade was born Sept. 6, 1903, in Horton Bay, the daughter of Robert and Caroline (Spura) West. She attended Horton Bay School and Boyne City School.

On Oct. 4, 1922, she married Arthur Roy Ranger in Horton Bay, and he preceded her in death on Nov. 27, 1965. They made their home in Charlevoix where she operated "The Rangers," a summer guest house, from the mid1930s until the mid1960s.

On Jan. 30, 1969, she married Ralph M. Wade, and he preceded her in death on Aug. 2, 1984.

Mrs. Wade was a lifelong member of the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix, the Mary Brewster Circle of that church, the Charlevoix Garden Club and the Dickens Club. She was a trustee of the Lenore Goldman Myer Memorial Fund, a local foundation which provided emergency assistance to families. She enjoyed sewing, knitting, quilting and playing bridge with friends.

She is survived by one daughter, Virginia Lahde and her husband, James, of Rock, Mich.; one son, Alvin Ranger and his wife, Patricia, of Charlevoix; one brother, Joseph B. West and his wife, Maxine, of Greenville; two sisters, Esther Ballard and her husband, Donald, and Arbutus Pfeiffer of Petoskey; four grandsons, Jared Finney and his wife, Linda, of Troy, Arthur Ranger and his wife, Beth, of Charlevoix, Robert Ranger and his wife, Lisa, of Midland, and William Ranger of Bloomfield Hills; two granddaughters, Janet Hisey and her husband, Kenneth, of Mt. Pleasant, Corinne Vita and her husband, Paul, of Chicago; six great grandchildren, Jared and Thomas Finney, Kayle and Charles Hisey, and Scott and Alissa Ranger. She was preceded in death by an infant daughter Betty Jane Ranger, and three sisters, Lillie Allen, Elizabeth Trautmann and Francis Swanson.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Horton Bay United Methodist Church and to the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix.

Arrangements were handled by the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix.

Beverly J. Levitski

Beverly J. Levitski, 63, of Charlevoix, died March 10, 1997, after battling a brain tumor for the past six months.

Funeral was 11 a.m. Thursday, March 13, at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix. The Rev. Perry Fowler officiated.

She was born Jan. 22, 1934, in Flint, the daughter of Raymond E. and Mabel H. (Fother) Brinker. She graduated with honors in 1952 from Central High in Flint.

She lived in Owosso, and had been a resident of Charlevoix for the past 17 years.

She was a secretary and had been employed by Schmeltzers Corp. in Durand, Mich., by the Petoskey M.E.S.C. office for five years, and then at Big Rock Point nuclear power plant from 1991 until her retirement. She also owned the Literary News Center in Charlevoix.

She enjoyed sewing, crafts, herb gardening and spending time with her grandchildren.

Survivors include her daughters and their spouses, Luanne and John Rosser of Vernon, Mich., Susan and Raymond Werbicki of East Jordan, Laura and Tony Kleiber of Charlevoix, and Frances Levitski and her fiance' James Marsh, of Charlevoix; her son, Darrell "Mick" Slough, of Owosso; grandchildren, John B. and Matthew Rosser, Lyman and Daniel Harris, Joshua Love and Lauren Moore, Michael Slough and Andrew Levitski, and Angel Werbicki; three sisters, Margaret Dolan and husband, George, of Linden, Mich., Nancy Hogue and husband, Larry, of Scottsdale, Ariz., and Betty Joyce and husband, Greg, of Whitehouse, Tenn.; and brothers, James Brinker and wife, Kay of Iron Mountain, and John Brinker and wife, Ronnie, of Utah.

Memorial contributions by be made to the Amie Silva Fund through Big Rock Point nuclear power plant, or to the Charlevoix County Hospice. Envelopes for memorials are available at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix, where visitation was held from 7-9 p.m. Wednesday, March 12.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Lowell Anderson
Charlevoix Assembly of God

Over the last decade or so there has been a dramatic change in the city of Colorado Springs, Colo. There has been a significant increase in the number of people who attend the city's churches on Sundays. There has also been a significant decrease in the crime rate in the city, despite the fact that the population has greatly increased.

I believe, as do the pastors of the churches of Colorado Springs, that what is taking place is due to the fact that the churches of the city have come together in unified prayer and witness. On a regular basis, scores of pastors and hundreds of lay people gather to pray and lift the name of Jesus Christ over the city of Colorado Springs. Periodically, the churches join arms in united efforts to present the claims of Jesus Christ to the people of their city. Together they are making a difference that wasn't being made when they functioned independently.

The power of unity and united effort is portrayed in the Bible from cover to cover. The principle is so beautifully stated in Ecclesiastes 4:9, "Two are better than one because they have a good return for their work." In the same chapter it is stated, "Though one may be overpowered, two can defend themselves. A cord of three strands is not quickly broken." (v. 12). The united efforts of the churches in Colorado Springs have certainly made a marked difference in their city proving the fact that two really are better than one!

The pastors and churches of Charlevoix share a wonderful fellowship and participate in many cooperative efforts under the auspices the Charlevoix Ministerial Association. Through these cooperative efforts we are able to present a better witness for Jesus Christ than we could functioning independently.

There are four upcoming events in which the churches of Charlevoix are called to unite in worship and witness. On Friday, March 28, an annual Good Friday Service will be held at the Methodist Church from 1-3 p.m., and the Procession of the Cross will precede the service at 12:30 p.m. beginning in Oleson's parking lot. Thursday, May 1, is the National Day of Prayer, and our local observance will be held at city hall from 12- 1 p.m. The annual March for Jesus will be held on Saturday, May 17. A community Praise Gathering, an evening of congregational singing, is scheduled for 6 p.m. Sunday, May 18, at the Assembly of God church.

Join your brothers and sisters in Christ in these events and discover that two really are better than one!

Daniel J. Wojan

Daniel J. Wojan, 59, of Charlevoix, died March 11, 1997, at his home. Funeral Mass was 10 a.m. Friday, March 14, at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Charlevoix. The Rev. Thomas Neis officiated. Burial will take place at St. Mary's Cemetery, Charlevoix.

Mr. Wojan was born April 12, 1937, in Pellston, the son of Anthony and Sophie (Danij) Wojan.

He was a lifelong resident of northern Michigan, except for residing in Casper, Wyo., for 10 years from 1975-1985. He then returned to Charlevoix.

Mr. Wojan is survived by two sons, Gregory Wojan and his wife, Beth, of East Lansing, and Tim Wojan of Lames, Iowa; one daughter, Terri Wojan, of Charlevoix; one granddaughter, Amanda; four brothers, Walter Wojan of Georgia and Beaver Island, Ted Wojan and his wife, Irene, of Charlevoix, Tony Wojan and his wife, Donna, of Charlevoix, and Al Wojan of Charlevoix; five sisters, Delores Gallagher of Riverdale, Ill., Mary Wood and her husband, Pete, of Roseville, Mich., Stella Duberville of Union Lake, Mich., Phyllis Switzer and her husband, Norman, of Howell, Mich., and Madelyn Renaud and her husband, Mel, of Charlevoix.

Memorial contributions may be made to St. Mary School. Envelopes for memorials are available at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix, where friends called from 6-8 p.m. and a rosary was held at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, March 13.

Eleanor J. Moran

Eleanor J. Moran, 79, of Charlevoix, died March 14, 1997, at Charlevoix Area Hospital. Funeral was 11 a.m. Tuesday, March 18, at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Charlevoix. The Rev. Thomas Neis officiated. Burial will take place in St. Mary's Cemetery, Charlevoix.

Mrs. Moran was born Nov. 27, 1917, in Chicago, Ill., the daughter of Anton C. and Gizela A. (Prekale) Olszewski. She graduated from Argo High School in Argo, Ill., in 1937, and also attended Charlevoix schools.

Mrs. Moran enjoyed sewing, gardening, cooking, and especially spending time with her family.

On Sept. 28, 1940, she married Patrick J. Moran in Charlevoix. He preceded her in death on Oct. 10, 1985.

Survivors include one son, Jack P. Moran, and his fiancee, Margaret Bachman, of East Jordan; two grandchildren, Melanie Malpass and her husband, Tim, of East Jordan, and Jack Moran, Jr., and his wife, Celeste, of Rapid City, Mich.; six great-grandchildren; and two sisters, Adeline Reese and her husband, Jack, of Georgia, and Marge Mayville and her husband, Lionel, of Bend, Ore. Mrs. Moran was preceded in death by two sisters, Dorothy Luhrs and Ruth Wasel.

Memorial contributions may be made to Charlevoix Area Hospital. Envelopes for memorials are available at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix, where visitation was held from 6-9 p.m. Monday, March 17.

Roma Pauline Hallock

Roma Pauline Hallock, 89, of Charlevoix, formerly of Pontiac, died March 16, at Boulder Park Terrace Nursing Home in Charlevoix. A memorial service is planned at a later date and interment will be in Roselawn Cemetery in Royal Oak.

Mrs. Hallock was born Oct. 8, 1907, the daughter of Francis Eugene and Verna Mae (Blackman) Hubbard.

She graduated from Michigan State University in 1930 with a degree in home economics and interned as a hospital dietitian at Harper General Hospital in Detroit and at Philadelphia General Hospital.

She was an active Red Cross Volunteer and enjoyed playing bridge.

In 1932, she married Frank W. Hallock in Saint Joseph, Mich.

She is survived by her husband, Frank W., of Charlevoix; one son, James W. Hallock and his wife, Cilla, of Ann Arbor; three daughters, Cynthia M. Lombard of Atlanta, Ga., Julie Ciuk and her husband, James, of Charlevoix, and Mary F. Smith and her husband, Tom, of Kalamazoo; twelve grandchildren and twelve great-grandchildren.

Arrangements were handled by Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix.

Charlevoix school board nearly appoints member through lottery

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Pat McKeown, Jr., was appointed Monday over three others to fill the vacated school board seat left in the wake of Sulane Hamilton's resignation.

While the appointment lasts a mere 105 days, McKeown's voice comes during a pivotal time for the board. The development of a long-range facilities plan, a ballot proposal for a sinking fund to take care of needed repairs, how to pay for the M-66 land, drug testing Charlevoix students, and coaching evaluations are all on the horizon and could crop up for decision anytime in the next 100 days.

And McKeown's appointment nearly came from a blind draw out of a hat. Like a casting director stuck with the decision between budding stars. The board discussed that all the candidates were qualified.

However, board member Ardeth Wieland expressed concern over appointing someone who was planning to be a candidate in the upcoming election. All four possible appointments, McKeown, Dwight "Ike" Boss, Michael MacMillan, and Merle VandenBerg had said they planned to run for one of the three seats up for election.

McKeown

"It's an unfair advantage to one of those people," Wieland said. "In essence we're taking away the community's real right to choose fairly."

She wanted to table any decision, and try to find someone who had served on the board in the past to substitute until after the election.

Superintendent Roberta Jackson said she approached two former members, and both declined the free post. She, however, did not mind if someone might be receiving an unfair election advantage.

"As a superintendent that doesn't bother me," she said. "If elected it may ease the transition."

Wieland's idea to delay the decision received some support. Board member Allen Telgenhof expressed his discomfort in talking about prospective board members in such an open forum. The idea of holding a special meeting to discuss the candidates was mentioned and quickly canned due to spring break commitments.

Jerry Owens, though, said the candidates deserved an immediate decision. After all they had done what was asked, and criteria not to run for election in June was not stipulated criteria when advertising for a new board member.

A celebration of his life was held Monday, March 17, at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix.

Ray was born July 7, 1922, in Grand Rapids, the son of Ray and Gladys Samantha (Sprigle) Bier.

He married Helen Roselle Mankel and they had eight children, three sons, Ray Bier and his wife, Tami, of Charlevoix, Glenn Bier and his wife, Mary, of Coldwater, Ken Bier and his wife, Leslie, of Hammond, Ill.; four daughters, JoAnne Beemon and her husband, Rick, of Charlevoix, Sandra Bier of Grand Rapids, Sally E. Bier of Detroit, and Karen Bradley and her husband, Gary, of Kewadin. Ray was preceded in death by a daughter, Patty Rae. He is also survived by 15 grandchildren; one great-grandchild; a sister in-law, Dolly Bier of Grand Rapids. Ray was preceded in death by two brothers, Rolland and Loren, and one sister, Marie.

Ray loved nature and worked to protect and preserve the environment. He served as president of the Michigan Lakes and Streams Association, president of the Land 'O Lakes Association, and was a member of the Tip Of The Mitt Watershed Council.

He made his home in Charlevoix the past five years and became active in the community. He was acting chairperson of the Pine River Place Tenants Association.

He was a tool and die maker by trade and enjoyed the arts. He was a writer, photographer, potter, and singer having performed with the Grand Rapids Symphony.

Most important to Ray was his children and grandchildren and the active role he played in their lives.

Memorial contributions may be made to : Saint Clair-Six Mile Lake Natural Area, c/o Grand Traverse Regional Conservancy, 624 3rd Street, Traverse City, MI, 49684.

Lindy Morrow (left) prepares to collect on some expensive French cuisine from her teacher, Tom Sheldon, when she travels to Paris next week with her French IV class.

Spring break settles French bet

Plans are being made everywhere for spring break. Tom Sheldon, Charlevoix High School French IV teacher, has had his plans set for months. He will be chaperoning a group of high schoolers to France for a two-week lesson in culture and survival in a foreign country.

What he did not have planned was springing for dinner for one of his students. Sheldon challenged one of his students, Lindy Morrow, that if she earned an "A" during the last marking period that he would take her out to dinner at one of Paris' fanciest.

Morrow earned her "A," and as she and her group will embark across the big blue ocean Monday, March 25, for France, she can't be blamed if fancy French cuisine dances in her head.

"She held up her end, now it's my turn to do my part," Sheldon said.

A restaurant has not yet been chosen. Also as part of the bet, Sheldon must play in the faculty basketball game at the high school at 7 p.m. Friday, March 21.

Spring breaks announced

Spring Break, words which inspire fear in some Floridians, is around the corner for area schools.

Charlevoix Public Schools' last day of classes is Wednesday, March 26. K-5 will dismiss classes after the morning hours. Classes resume Monday, April 7.

Northwest Academy will be dismissed after morning hours Wednesday, March 26, and will begin again Monday, April 7.

Concord Academy will be dismissed Friday, March 28, and will resume Monday, April 7.

St. Mary School will be dismissed Wednesday, March 26, and will resume Monday, April 7.

Area residents attend Lansing farm meeting

Representing Charlevoix County at the 1997 Michigan Farm Bureau Lansing Legislative Seminar were Michelle LeButt, Tom Wieland and Tim Matchett. They joined nearly 400 others from across the state at the annual Lansing Legislative Seminar, held Feb. 19, at the Lansing Center. The event was conducted by Michigan Farm Bureau to give county Farm Bureau leaders an opportunity to discuss key issues with their state senators and representatives.

"Every year, this event proves to be an important one for farmers," said Howard Kelly, Michigan Farm Bureau legislative counsel and coordinator of the seminar. "Not only does it give farmers the chance to meet with legislators from their own districts, but they're able to talk with lawmakers from other areas who also have influence on agricultural issues."

Key issues that farmers discussed with more than 100 legislators at the seminar included property tax assessing and classification, farmland preservation, funding for road repairs and truck weight limits.

At the Lansing Legislative Seminar, Michigan Farm Bureau recognized two state representatives for their legislative contributions to agriculture. Rep. Don Gilmer (R-Augusta) and Rep. Gerald Law (R-Plymouth) both earned the Silver Plow Award.

Rep. Gilmer was recognized for his efforts to secure funding for the Michigan Department of Agriculture and Michigan State University. Rep. Law was honored for his work to enact insurance and tort reform legislation.

Michigan Farm Bureau is a statewide agricultural organization with more than 150,000 member families.

New chiropractor comes to town

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

For those waking to sore backs and necks, help is on the way. Absolute Chiropractic has been opened by Dom Collino on a part-time basis in Charlevoix.

Collino is a graduate of Western State Chiropractic College, a four-year institution in Portland, Oregon. He has begun shuffling between Charlevoix and a chiropractic office in Cheboygan.

Collino is overseeing the Cheboygan office until the owner completes her own studies. He and his wife plan on settling in Charlevoix full-time for business and personal life by April of 1998.

For now, the doctor will be in from 9 a.m.-1 p.m. and 2:30-6 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays.

"All in all Charlevoix had everything we were looking for," Collino a native of Monroe, Mich., said. "The location, the size, and the people were very friendly."

Chiropractic is not just care after an injury. For Collino, he sees it as everyday practice to better patients' overall health, much like regular brushing of teeth has become for overall dental hygiene.

"My philosophy is very preventative," he said. "Athletes, for example, who are prone to injury should have tune-ups, it keeps them from having an injury, and they won't have to sit out with a bad back."

Collino calls himself a hands-on chiropractor. Most patients, he said, may spend just a couple of minutes in a session with an average chiropractor, but he visits with his patients for about 15 minutes.

"Doctor means teacher," he said. "I want to tell to them what it is that is going on with their body, and hopefully they can take steps themselves to prevent it," he said.

Dotted throughout the waiting room are pieces of one of Collino's hobbies, photography. A handful of photography books with pictures from every corner of our country are available for patients to flip through. Two nature pictures that Collino snapped himself hang on the wall.

For those seeking an appointment, local calls will be immediately forwarded to his Cheboygan office on the days when he is not in Charlevoix. The office is located at 12900 U.S. North, Suite 2 and 3. For appointments call 547-0995.

Rates for appointments begin at $25.

Business in brief

State bank earns five-star award

Charlevoix State Bank has earned a five-star superior banking award.

The award is based on an analysis of financial data filed by the bank with federal regulators, supplemented by historical data.

The analysis was conducted by Bauer Financial Reports, an independent bank analyst out of Coral Gables, Fla.

"Although the nation's banking industry has shown remarkable health recently, Charlevoix State Bank's five-star performance places it in the highest tier of banking," said Paul Bauer, president of the research firm.

The bank was established in 1994 and provides banking services to Charlevoix County and the surrounding communities.

First Michigan named to prestigious list

First Michigan Bank Corporation has been named to the Wright Junior Blue Chip List by Wright Investors' Service, a leading international money management firm based in Connecticut.

The list consists of companies nationwide which have been selected as the most financially secure, consistently profitable and fastest growing.. Wright has identified these stocks as meeting the highest standards of investment quality and are suitable for long-term investment holdings. The list is updated continually to ensure the standard of performance.

FMB has experienced 15 consecutive years of record annual earnings and increased cash dividends, and a five percent stock dividend each year since 1973.

Former Charlevoix employee promoted

Cathie L. Faucher has been appointed as financial center supervisor of the Bellaire Financial Center of CB North.

Faucher is responsible for ongoing financial center operations. She has more than 20 years of banking experience, and previously worked at Charlevoix Federal Credit Union and Republic Bank.

Swisher Sweets win girls' recreation league

The Swisher Sweets smoked their competition en route to winning the Charlevoix Recreational Girl's Junior High Division basketball championship.

In the tournament's final, they downed the Purple Puffalumps, 33-31. Kari Miller scored 25 for the victors while Kelly Reid's 15 led the Puffalumps. Miller won the most valuable player award.

Placing third through eighth were the Space Jammer, Revolutions, Big Toes, Up North, Swish Phish, and Bad Dogs, respectively.

Top players in the girl's recreational league

The most valuable players from this year's competition are Kristy Skippergosh, elementary division, and Kari Miller, junior high division.

Young wrestlers take third

Back in January, the high school wrestling team was forced to cancel their annual wrestling tournament because of blizzard-like conditions. However, their middle and elementary school counterparts made up for that cancellation by hosting their invitational over the weekend.

On Saturday, 312 students athletes from 14 schools competed in the Charlevoix Middle School Invitational. More than 500 bouts were held over eight hours, ending with Onaway taking the team title. Benzie Central placed second, with the home-town Rayders finished third with 19 top four place winners.

Placing first for Charlevoix was Jesse Hahn, eighth-grade; Ryan Leitner, eighth-grade; Josh Christ, fifth-grade; Brett Probert, fifth-grade; Shannon Gillespie, third-grade; and Nick Gotshall, second-grade.

Second place winners were Ryan Novotny, eighth-grade; Delos Lanterman, sixth-grade; and Raymond Jones, second-grade.

Third place winners were Jordan Burke, eighth-grade; Roy Cooter, eighth-grade; Jerry Zeitler, seventh-grade; Chris Loper, seventh-grade; Tony Miller, fourth-grade; and Jeff Golovich, third-grade.

Fourth place winners were Bo Moore, seventh-grade; Spencer Bryan, sixth-grade; Jason Stilwell, sixth-grade; and Kyle Jones, first-grade.

Elementary division produces champs

The Bulls took the championship in the seventh annual Girl's Youth Basketball Tournament, elementary division, by defeating No Limits in the finals, 34-28.

Kristy Skippergosh scored 22 points for the Bulls as she won most valuable player honors for the tournament. Rachel Wyniawskyj scored 12 for the runners-up, No Limits.

The Pistons finished in third place, and Shooting Stars fourth.

Also, No Limits bested the Pistons, 20-18. Brooke Blanchard scored 10 for No Limits, and Alyssia McDonough 15 for the Pistons.

The Bulls with Skippergosh leading the way with nine points defeated the Pistons, 20-18. McDonough scored seven.

The owners, Kris and Barney Way, of Trademark Clothiers have given the business a lighter look. New carpeting, shelves and additional clothing lines for younger people and businessmen are now part of the long-standing downtown business. The Ways plan to specialize in men's big and tall, with about 50 percent of its stock being men's clothing. This summer, children's clothing will be added.

Grant sought for lakefront land

proved by city council Monday. An estimated price for the property is $350,000, $106,750 of which could come from local taxpayers in the form of a grant match. However, there has been no set price for the property, according to mayor Josh Barnes.

"The land will sell for what it is appraised at," he said.

The unofficial agreement between Waterfront Partners and the city is bound only by word for now. Barnes said he doesn't expect the land to cost $350,000 in the end, especially since the recent court decision quashes any change for variances. The property is currently zoned scenic reserve. Building a home on the property would not provide for sufficient setbacks from the water and the neighboring Coast Guard station to meet zoning requirements.

Even though the city and the partners are in court against each other, civil negotiations are ongoing regarding the possible sale of the land, Barnes said. The city will not know if the grant has been awarded until summer.

Barnes calls the acquisition of the .35 parcel his pet project: Buying the land will provide a quiet park where people can just sit and relax. City council has indicated that it has no intentions of improving the property. It would not have swings or an extended beach.

"I'm pleased with the judge's decision, and that the council sees fit to set this aside this land for future generations," Barnes said.

Money to pay for the land would come from the city's recreation improvement fund. It is not currently budgeted but could be covered in the 1998 budget, when the land would be purchased, said city treasurer Rick Brandi.

Board narrows down bond options

in support of the ballot initiative compared the high school to the "Titanic" and said: "Everyday is a new challenge around here."

None of the necessary repairs are slated for the middle school.

"Hopefully, we will be replacing that building real soon," Jackson said.

The board seemed in favor of the sinking fund proposal. Allen Telgenhof said it "sells itself," as the repairs are warranted. Buday quipped the repairs all should have been done yesterday.

Voters may also get a voice on the possible purchase of property off of M-66, across from Castle Farms. It may be combined with the major repair sinking fund, but, more likely, appear on its own.

The land still may be paid for out of general funds, which board member Jerry Owens said he favors.

President Campbell noted that Owens may not be in the minority with that sentiment.

However Telgenhof broached the idea of a separate sinking fund to pay for the land. His thought was that with new members coming aboard, taking money from general funds "binds the district where this school will be, and binds the next board."

"If people don't like schools up there, they can give us a thumbs up, or a thumbs down on this site," he said. "It will guide us on our next decision."

Whatever means the board uses to pay for the land is still up for debate. Beyond taking money from general funds, or tying it together with the sinking fund or creating a different sinking fund options are little. It can be tied into a long-range bond proposal, or as Jackson joked it could be donated. No surprise when Campbell asked if there were any takers, the room became silent.

The board's next meeting is 7:30 p.m. Monday, April 7, at the high school. They will be voting to approve what exactly to place on the June ballot.

Weight loss contest ends

Charlevoix County and City of Charlevoix employees will be ending their challenge diet with a weigh-in held from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday, March 26 and 27, at city hall.

The group that loses the most weight, based on the number of participants, will win the cash pot.

Official Notice

WEED CONTROL NOTICE CITY OF CHARLEVOIX

Pursuant to Section 6.74 of the City of Charlevoix Weed Control Ordinance, Chapter 63 of the Code of the City of Charlevoix.

NOTICE: No grass shall be permitted to grow higher than twelve (12") inches. No growth of noxious weeds is permitted on property within the City. The cutting, removing or destroying of such weeds or grasses at least once every three (3) weeks between June 1 and September 15 is deemed compliance. After May 1, the City may cut, remove or destroy grass or noxious weeds on property which is not in compliance with this ordinance. The actual costs of compliance by the City of Charlevoix may be charged against the owner of the property pursuant to Section 6.73 of the ordinance, and may be a lien against the property. A property owner who refuses to destroy noxious weeds may be subject to a fine of up to $100.00 or, if applicable, a municipal civil infraction. Flower gardens, shrubbery plots, vegetable gardens, small grain plots, easements, public lands and lands of indefinite ownership are exempt from this ordinance.

Local reformed church hosts missions conference

The Community Reformed Church in Charlevoix will host a second missions conference Saturday-Sunday, March 22-23. Mission booths, special music and challenging messages based on Romans 10:14 will be featured. The theme for the conference is "By His Love Compelled."

The keynote speaker for the conference will be Ray Badgero, professor and chair of the Department of World Missions and Evangelism at the Moody Bible Institute. As of this summer Badgero will assume the position of General Director of NAIM Ministries, (North American Indian Mission), a mission based in the state of Washington and British Columbin, Canada.

Badgero

Badgero served as a missionary in Europe for 15 years before taking a teaching position at Moody in 1981. Ten of those years he and his wife, Lois, worked in the then communist country of Yugoslavia. Badgero was arrested and deported but continued his work among the Yugoslavs scattered throughout Europe.

He accepted an assistant professorship at Moody in 1981, and became chairman of the department in 1992. In 1996 Badgero received the Faculty Citation Award "in recognition of significant contributions in Christian higher education and faithfulness to the Word of God." Under his chairmanship, the missions department has grown and gained in reputation as an effective training force in the world wide missions.

Both Ray and Lois are graduates of Moody Bible Institute, Northwestern College and Wheaton Graduate School. After graduate school Badgero pursued Leadership and Education Policy Studies while Lois chose Judaic Studies.

The Badgero family is comprised of seven adopted children ranging in age from three months to 25 years. The children are from four continents with a variety of ethnic diversity and color. Four children are six years old or younger, the result of a personal family commitment to the socially disenfranchised in the Chicago area.

Badgero will be speaking at 7 p.m. Saturday and both morning services at 9 and 11:15 a.m. on Sunday. The public is invited to hear these messages. A nursery and a children's program will be provided.

The church is located at the corner of U.S. 31 and Meech Street. For more information, call 547-9482.

Dance lessons offered

Learn to ballroom dance this spring at the McCune Arts Center. The Crooked Tree Arts Council Community School of the Arts is offering Beginning Ballroom Dance lessons for adults with instructor Marie Therese Buday.

The four week session will be offered from 6:30-8:30 p.m. on Mondays, April 14, 21, 28 and May 5, at the McCune Arts Center.

Cost is $48 per person. Couples and singles are invited to join the class. Class size is limited, therefore it is suggested that those interested register soon.

Buday offers the opportunity to learn beginning dance steps for waltz, foxtrot, swing, and if time allows one choice from tango, cha-cha, or polka.

If you can walk, you can dance, Buday said.

Buday teaches creative dance for children and taught ballroom dance in Charlevoix this winter, in addition to having experience teaching aerobics, jazz for children, choreography. She holds a master of science degree in dance/biomechanics from the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

To register for lessons, call the McCune Arts Center in Petoskey at 347-4337.

County board nears vote to fill new administrator position

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

The long and crazy ride of the proposed position of county administrator appears to be rounding a final corner.

A resolution has been drafted, and is ready for vote, which will clarify the "essential responsibilities" of such a job.

Planning, organizing, researching, maintaining relations, and implementing policies sums up in short what county commissioners want an administrator to do.

The criteria is meant to "describe the general nature of the work," and is not intended to be "an exhaustive list of all job duties," according to the final listing on the resolution draft.

It does, however, list specific resume requirements for the job. The prospective employee must have a bachelor's degree in a business management related field, five years of experience in governmental administration and two years in an administrative position.

Board chairman Phil Johnson, who is eager to see a vote, told his fellow commissioners that any changes they would like to make to the list best happen soon.

> "Iron it out by the next meeting, because we are voting on it."
> — Phil Johnson, county board chairman

"Iron it out by the next meeting, because we are voting on it," he said.

Commissioner Shirley Roloff, whose district represents the City of Charlevoix, admits she's still "sitting on the fence" with the issue.

The list of criteria seems reasonable, but the need to have an administrator is what Roloff questions.

"The county board has done well for themselves," she said. "I guess I'm from the 'if it's not broke don't fix it' mind. Why create another job if you don't have to."

Johnson seemed confident of the criteria's passage to the point that he offered an idea on how to find prospective candidates. He pointed to Boyne City's search for a new city manager and that cross-referencing off that list could be a way to start the search for a county administrator.

"It's something to look over," he said. "It's the same type of person we're looking for. Let's get those resumes and go from there."

Commissioner Joan Blanchard went further, suggesting that the board eliminate people off that list, and then seek out those who are remaining.

The commissioners' next meeting will be be 7 p.m. Wednesday, March 26.

Some candidates refuse lottery

Buday then came upon the idea of drawing out of a hat as all four prospectives seemed equal. "Let it be for chance, I would be comfortable just going for chance," she said.

And so it nearly was. However, as slips up paper were being torn and names penciled on them, the candidates spoke up.

Both MacMillan and Boss withdrew their names. MacMillan called it "ridiculous" and "not good leadership." Boss didn't want his selection to come about in this "lotto," saying "You need to take the bull by the horns and pick one person."

So the board did. Levengood nominated Boss, but the motion was not seconded, and died. Owens then nominated McKeown, which was seconded by Telgehof. The motion passed 4-2 with Wieland and Buday dissenting.

McKeown, 30, is a 1985 Rayder graduate. During his interview, he told the board that his youth would add to the board's perspective.

He hopes to elevate the athletic program to something the whole community can be spirited about, and seems to be in favor of at least one new school.

SCRAPBOOK

Ship building once a bustling part of Charlevoix's business

By Geoffrey D. Reynolds
Courier columnist

From the Archives

With little of the water surface showing lately, people must wonder what the marine industry did in Charlevoix when it was a bustling port of call for the many scows, schooners, and steamers that docked here during the winter months. The majority of the time, vessels were either being repaired or improved for the upcoming shipping season. Other times the boat yards were building new boats for rental to tourists or contracts that had been made many months ago.

Besides the well known history of Roy Ranger and his family's impact on the history of the Mackinaw sailing and steam craft, is the history of many lesser known men. One such builder was Joseph A. Beauvais.

Beauvais built boats near the Belvedere Club Resort bayou. While little is known about this man, he advertised his wonderful watercraft in 1892, a time heavily influenced by the summer resorts located in Charlevoix. This is known because of the wonderful brochure he published that year advertising his many models of fine water craft, which subsequently was donated to the Charlevoix Historical Society archives along with the sign shown here. His list of models included "steam and sail yachts, built to order, from our own, or any desired model, skiffs and canoes of the finest quality," and oars of any size desired. One of their designs, the Clinker, ranged in price from $30 to the $250 model made from 17 different types of wood.

Another small, but popular boat building firm was located on the shores of Lake Michigan, near what is now the Dunes condominiums. This business was under the name George W. Smith and Sons Naval Architect and Yacht Builders. One of their most prized designs, built during the mid-1920's, was a vessel Zenda, a yacht measuring 55 by 16 by 3 feet. The original plans were preserved by the family and donated to the archives for public viewing.

Another little known, but impressive builder was James Washburn, who also called Charlevoix his home. A native of Maine, Washburn learned his trade from his father, a builder and owner. After building and repairing boats in Maine for several years and serving a stint in the naval service during the Civil War, he temporarily relocated to Charlevoix to repair a few local vessels in the winter of 1880. But soon, after contracting with the Charlevoix Summer Resort (Belvedere Club) for the construction of several row and sail boats, as well as several scows for the newly founded Pine Lake Iron Co., located in Ironton, he decided to stay and established his ship yard on the south side of Round Lake.

The last ship builder I will mention is Captain T.D. Smith. Smith moved to Charlevoix in 1871 from Hog Island aboard the small, open boat Mary Ellen to begin his career as a shipbuilder and captain of the lakes. Here he built and sailed the small, 11-ton schooner Ida May in 1873. In 1875 he built the 32-ton schooner Fleetwing and used her for the wood and bark business between here and Milwaukee. Together with his son Oscar, they sailed the Fleetwing and the Sea Gem, eventually establishing a mercantile business supplied by their ships and eliminated the middle man.

This early painting was painted by Lester Clark decades ago. It depicts Beauvais' business on Round Lake. If anyone knows more about the origin of this painting, call the historical society at 547-0373.

The "Womenless Wedding" was staged by area residents on March 21 and 22 in 1929 at the Charlevoix High School gymnasium on Mason Street.

Bethany hosts holiday services

Bethany Lutheran Church is hosting special services for Passion Week and Easter Sunday.

Beginning with Palm Sunday, March 23, interim pastor Walt Kreger will lead the worship with Holy Communion, at 10:45 a.m. Maunday Service will be held on Wednesday, March 26, with Holy Communion.

The Good Friday Service will be held at 7 p.m. Friday, March 28, with Pastor James Moehring leading the service.

Easter Sunday will begin with a breakfast at 9 a.m. served by the men of the congregation. The holiday service will follow at 11 a.m. with pastor Kreger leading. Communion will be served.

Group grief recovery meetings held

A series of five weekly sessions for those coping with a loss will be held from Thursday, April 17, to May 15, from 7-8:30 p.m. at St. Joseph Catholic Church, 207 Nichols Street in East Jordan.

The Grief Recover program is sponsored by Charlevoix County Hospice, Charlevoix Area Hospital, Community Mental Health and Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, to provide help for anyone who is recovering from a loss.

Rev. Buzz Walls, Charlevoix County Hospice spiritual advisor, will conduct the grief recovery sessions. Anyone is invited who has suffered a loss, or who is helping a loved one deal with a loss, and who would benefit from the support of others. These informative discussions will provide assistance in dealing with grief. Class size is limited to 10. Those interested must preregister and registration will be closed with no one admitted to the sessions after the first class.

Please call the hospice office at 536-2842 to indicate your desire to participate in the free program.

Charlevoix family maintains open-door to children

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

Charlevoix has a Noah's Ark for children.

They don't always come in twos, but they come.

Pat and Bill Keehn's country home on Marion Center Road is a place where children can take their seat around the 12-foot long kitchen table.

Coming into a family that already has 12 children isn't everyone's dream. But whether there's five, 10 or 14, Bill and Pat live for family.

The Keehns' ark doesn't float on water. It offers a refuge to children who have lost their home — for whatever reason.

The couple of nearly 25 years has welcomed more than 80 children into their home since coming to Charlevoix in 1990. Many of them needed shelter during an upheaval in life. Others were adopted into the clan that came to town as two parents and five children.

In most ways, the Keehns can't begin to resemble "the Cleaver people," as Pat calls the all-American family from television.

As children, Pat and Bill came from opposite backgrounds —Pat an only child raised with a maid in the Upper Peninsula and Bill a southern-California boy whose home bustled with four children.

The two blonde-haired, blue-eyed people met in Phoenix, Ariz., where Pat was studying to be a teacher and Bill was making more than a comfortable living using his mechanical engineering degree from Berkeley. They were on their way to success.

Pat took to the classroom, an early surrounding of children that she didn't know would be followed by decades of mothering unwanted, neglected or abused children.

The Keehns were introduced to adoption by Pat's physician, who suggested they consider making the move since their desired pregnancy was not coming to pass.

Within two years of marriage, the couple held their infant baby boy — Paul.

"I just had a baby," Pat yelled out in the teacher's lounge when she received the news of Paul's birth.

Three years later, Daniel entered their family. Both boys were adopted, and together were the final swipe of the average-family brush that painted the early Keehn picture. They were four fair-skinned members of an

Bus driver arraigned for Ritalin theft

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Adela Foltice, the bus driver for Charlevoix schools, was arraigned Tuesday morning in Charlevoix County's 90th District Court on charges that she broke into the nurse's office at the elementary school to steal Ritalin.

The official title of the crime is illegal entry with intent to commit larceny. The crime, a felony, is punishable by a maximum of 5 years in prison and $2,500 in fines. No plea was entered during arraignment, but a pretrial hearing has been scheduled for 3:15 p.m. Tuesday, April 15.

There, prosecutors must show probable cause that these crimes were committed by Foltice. If the judge rules with the prosecutor, the case will be bound over to circuit court.

Police allege that on March 12 a school counselor found Foltice in the main office at the elementary school, near the nurses office. Both offices are locked at the end of each day.

Foltice, 42, was arrested March 21. In an interview with Charlevoix County Sheriff, George T. Lasater, she admitted to taking the drug from the nurse's office a handful of times over the last few months.

Foltice lives in Emmet County and remains free from jail on $3,000 bond.

Easter bunny coming to town

The Easter Bunny will make his sixth trip to Charlevoix Saturday, March 29.

The day begins at Stafford's Weathervane Restaurant with a luncheon from 11:30-1:30 p.m. The egg hunt in East Park begins at 2 p.m.

Old U.S. 31 section gets paved

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Hayes township residents may have to live through the sounds of road crews this spring, but will do so with smooth driving at stake.

The township plans to resurface a two-and-a-half mile stretch of Old U.S. 31 between Burgess and Murray roads.

According to township clerk, Ethel Knepp, the cost of the project is about $208,000, with money collected from the 1995 road millage to pay for the work.

The Charlevoix County Road Commission will bid the work out, and the township will pay 40 percent up front and the remainder when then job is complete.

"It definitely needs it before it gets worse," Knepp said of the road, the length of which runs through the middle of the township. She explained that the township wants to redo all of Old U.S. 31 in the next few years.

Knepp said to redo the entire road, the township will have to dip into general funds. However, it warrants repairs.

"It's like driving through pothole alley," Knepp quipped.

The road commission wanted the resurfacing to accompany a widening of road from 20 to 28 feet. However Knepp said the road will not be widened.

She explained that the final bill would be too high, homes are already too close to the road, and, in certain spots, trees would have to be uprooted to widen the road.

Events in brief

City planners meet tonight

The city planning commission will be reviewing the city's planning and zoning functions, several planning acts and land use at tonight's 7 p.m. meeting at city hall.

Recruitments scheduled for preschool classes

The Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District, East Jordan PREP Program, Project FREE and Northwest Michigan Human Services Head Start will hold a joint preschool recruitment for the 1997-98 school year during the months of March, April and May.

Joint recruitment insures that families are made aware of each of the free preschool programs available to them and to enroll as many eligible children as possible.

Parents of 3- to 5-year-old children can come to the recruitment and learn about programs offered in their school district. They should bring the child's immunization records, birth certificate, proof of income, Medicaid card or private insurance number, Social Security number of each family member, food stamp card, if applicable, and their child.

For more information on local recruitments for Charlevoix, call 347-9070.

Big Rock Point still not operating

Big Rock Point nuclear power plant continues to be shutdown. An outage that was estimated to last a week is extending for personnel to analyze and modify the core spray system.

Plant public affairs director, Tim Petrosky, said Monday that the plant should be down for 10 more days.

The system is being changed to increase the pressure needed to lift the spray valves. Currently, the valves lift each time the system is tested, which causes concerns about whether they recede correctly.

"We can eliminate that concern if they do not lift anymore when we test," Petrosky said.

The tests are conducted to make sure the water system is leak tight. The plant shut down for repairs to a backup spray core valve March 2.

Odd Fellows win cribbage tournament

The Charlevoix area Mason and Odd Fellows Cribbage Tournament is finished for 1997. The Odd Fellows are winners by a 328-point spread.

Dinner was prepared by the losers at the mason building on March 19.

The 1998 Cribbage Tournament will start Jan. 8. New players are welcome.

Each player is a single entry whose score is added to the total score of the group.

The tournament consists of eight games held on Thursday nights.

Warm days welcome maple syrup production

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Some sure signs that spring and warmer days are soon to be upon us: A robin red-breast chirping a tune, the drawbridge raising, traffic bottle necking on the streets, and the simple sound of a ball meeting a bat.

For some though, the sign of the long-awaited season comes in a more sticky fashion — sap.

The pursuit of nature's sweetest topping has begun in earnest, despite winter continuing to reinvent itself with come-lately snowstorms.

Still, the collection is on. Taps have been placed on Maple trees throughout the area. Warm, sunny weather has sap flowing like the wind. Many collectors will use whatever means they have — milk jugs, buckets, jars, and plastic garbage bags — to reel in the sweet stuff. The hardest item to find on hardware store shelves these days are five-gallon buckets.

"It's still in its infancy," said Jim Ruster who taps, boils, and bottles syrups for local markets. Ruster, from Ellsworth, said his sources tell him that south of northern Michigan sap season is right on schedule. Peak season for Charlevoix is almost here.

March 10 though mid-April is what Ruster calls "prime season." For him, they are long days.

"When it's really running you spend a lot of time just trying to keep up," he said.

Ruster uses a gravity-feed system to collect the sap into large containers until he gets through to empty them.

One local family is spending most late afternoons hand gathering the clear, light fluid. They have a jump on the process. Charlevoix resident Doug Reynolds has been tapping trees since February. Buckets of sap have been emptied almost daily into large plastic containers. The sweet beginnings are held until the family gathers for the annual boil-off, which began Saturday in the woods near their Charlevoix Township home.

Warm days of sunshine and 40-degree weather whetted the Reynolds' appetite to start early. They spent the weekend boiling about 90 gallons of sap into the coveted maple syrup.

The day-long process begins with chucking an old outdoor woodstove full of wood. The sap is poured into a big pan that sits on top of the stove. The sap is kept to a boil until it thickens and takes on an amber color.

Making maple syrup has been a family hobby for the Reynolds since Doug's great-grandfather bought the property back in 1898. The land was punctuated by a rocky ridge, which has been removed over the years. Still, every bottle that the Reynolds fills dons a fitting

Crack, pot bust happens near middle school

Two Charlevoix residents were arrested and charged with a variety of drug charges after a late-night police raid of their home.

Michael Kenneth Russell, 38, and Pamela Stoncham Fuller, 34, of 214 Mason Street, were each charged with two counts of possession of cocaine with the intent to sell, one count possession of cocaine, and one count of possession of marijuana.

The delivery charges are felonies punishable by one to 20 years in prison. Possession of cocaine, also a felony, may be punishable by one to four years in jail, while possession of marijuana, a misdemeanor, may be punishable by a year in jail.

The arrests, made in the early hours of Tuesday, March 18, stemmed from knowledge authorities received through a confidential informant, and subsequent staged buys between that informant and the accused.

Charlevoix City Police and the Straits Area Narcotics Enforcement (S.A.N.E.) team worked the case.

Russell and Fuller were arraigned Thursday. Bond was set at $10,000, and a preliminary hearing is scheduled for Monday, March 31.

Woman sought to help floral shop fire investigation

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

An unknown woman called the owner of Expressions Unlimited where he was eating breakfast 12 minutes before 9-1-1 was called about the floral shop fire.

The woman asked the waitress at Juilleret's Restaurant, where owner Ron Taepke dines regularly, if she would tell Ron that there's a fire on his back porch.

The Charlevoix Police Department would like to talk to the woman.

"We don't think she's involved," said police chief, Dennis Halverson. "But we want to talk to her about her initial observations."

The cause of the fire that destroyed the floral shop and Taepke's apartment upstairs is still under investigation.

"We're still in a fact-finding mode," Halverson said. The Charlevoix Police Department has taken over the investigation for the fire department.

Police would like to learn where the woman was when she spotted the smoke or fire and where it was located in the house. Early statements by fire investigators indicated that the fire originated in the back of the basement, in a work area.

The fire was reported to 9-1-1 at 8:32 a.m. by a man, about 20 minutes after Taepke had left for breakfast. It took firefighters from three departments and about 50,000 gallons of water to douse the flames.

OPINIONS

Scouting values should infiltrate entire ranks

EDITORIAL

We've seen the best and possibly the worst of Charlevoix scouting recently.

One young Boy Scout stepped out of our office to help an elderly lady across the ice and into the front office during one of our recent winter days.

A day later, we see troop leaders at each other's throats just to prove a point.

Divide and conquer. This is a long-standing strategy to defeating the enemy. We hope that the local scouting leaders don't defeat themselves by letting division rule their ranks.

The Boy Scouts of America is known as an honorable organization comprised of people who care about country and community. In Charlevoix, however, the division among the troops presents a much different picture.

Through our recent contact with some troop leaders, we have been introduced to a side of scouting that we didn't know existed — a side we want to cease existing. Differences between some troop leaders must be set aside for the sake of the kids. Children learn more by example than by instruction.

According to the Official Boy Scout Handbook, a scout is: trustworthy, loyal, helpful, friendly, courteous, kind, obedient, cheerful, thrifty, brave, clean and reverent. Leaders of these boys should strive to live by the same standards. After all, they are the ones who set the standards.

Leaders must "Be Prepared" to act according to the challenges encountered when helping to lead these young boys into manhood.

"Be Prepared for life — to live happy and to die happy, knowing that you have done your best," the handbook says. "That's the big idea."

Scouting may not be as popular as it was before the days of multiple recreation leagues and school activities. But we believe it's one of the best programs a boy (or girl) can join.

The life skills taught through the program reach beyond what most kids could hope to learn through school or from most parents.

Scouts are taught to "do a good turn daily," to respect nature, identify plants, cook, tie knots, be involved in community-service projects and respond correctly to emergency situations. Mostly, however, scouts are encouraged to be dependable, honest, helpful people — the kind every community could use more of.

We laud the volunteers who spend their evenings training up these young men to be citizens who contribute to society. However, we challenge some of the scout leaders to take a rake to their own campsites before wanting to set fire to the site next door.

Womenless wedding held in 1941

Editor:

The picture in last week's Courier of the womenless wedding brought back many memories, but I believe you were given the wrong date.

I researched my many scrapbooks that I have compiled over the years and found the attached cast of characters, and I spent the deep depression year of 1929 in Grand Rapids. I think you will find that the correct dates are April 24 and 25, 1941. I knew all 65 individuals in the program. Some were my close friends and relatives. It was a joyous affair although, each character only had a few seconds to be recognized.

Walter Bergeon, the groom, was short and Harold Miller, the bride, was tall and massive. My brother Ray, late Mayor of the city, depicted Charlie Chaplin. I portrayed the character of "Gov. Dickinson," who reporters said "had a pipeline to Heaven."

We drew a large audience, and it was a profitable event. As I look over the cast, I believe Jay Oliver (Shirley Temple) and I are the only still living characters, but there may be others. If so I would enjoy hearing from them, maybe we can have a reunion of 56 years.

Respectfully,
Ralph Hamilton
Charlevoix

Editor's note: After receiving Mr. Hamilton's letter and his copy of a brochure on the 1941 event, we looked into the mystery. Clips provided by the Charlevoix Historical Society and Mr. Hamilton each cover separate Womenless Weddings. Does anyone else have information on such a wedding? It could have been a tradition.

Courier columnist read nationwide

Editor:

This winter I visited my daughter, Ruth Chapman, in Texas. We drove to Fredericksburg and saw a copy of Edith Gilbert's book, "The Complete Wedding Planner" displayed in the bookstore.

My daughter then told me that she had recently enjoyed using Edith's ideas for a football party theme from her earlier book, "All About Parties." Ruth served refreshments on her dining room table, which she decorated with a green felt cloth and added two small goal posts at each end. She added pennants and pompoms, and everyone loved the look.

I just thought you'd like to know that your Courier columnist is a popular author and well-received in other parts of the country.

Sincerely,
June Riley

EDITH

EDITH GILBERT

Once in awhile, one runs into a great story teller — someone who reminds us how much times have changed — a person, who clearly remembers and is able to vividly describe, unusual events that took place many years ago. Bob Wise is such a man.

Reminiscing in front of the fire in the lobby of The Lodge, Bob recalls that day in May, 1963, when he was attached to the Coast Guard. Ordered to report to the Sundew, stationed in Charlevoix, he was fresh out of boot camp. It was his first time away from home, and he didn't know a soul in town. After stopping for a bite to eat at the Sugar Bowl Restaurant, on Bridge Street, he returned to his car, and it wouldn't start. A kind stranger offered to tow him to the nearby Uhrick's Garage, where he was told that he needed a new transmission of $125. At that time, Bob barely had 125 cents on him, and he knew it would take a month for his payroll record to catch up with him.

What to do?

Walking up Bridge Street, Bob noticed the Charlevoix County State Bank on the corner. He walked in and spoke to the man at the desk, Mauri Foster, and told him his tale of woe. Mauri glanced over to the bank president, Robert Bridge, who quietly nodded, "yes."

"Here's $200," Mauri said. "That will give you some extra money until your payroll records catch up with you!"

Can you imagine that happening today, anywhere?

The next unusual event took place the following year. Bob was talking to a friend on the street, when he noticed a girl he didn't know riding by on a bicycle.

Couple give up 'prim and proper' for a dozen children

Arizonan family.

"We were doing all the prim and proper things in life," Pat said.

Pat had become a housewife to spend time with their sons. They lived in an upscale home for 10 years that was built from desires within their imaginations.

But as the years have passed, the Keehns forfeited "home beautiful" for their inflating family and a move to Charlevoix they said was prompted by God.

Pat Keehn

"We continue to adopt because it's our way of impacting the world around us," Pat said. "It's our way of impacting the world one life at a time."

Pat and Bill had found their niche — raising children. They began following a new dream after having two children for 10 years.

Three more children were adopted within six months. The family of four grew to seven, bringing the Keehns their long-awaited daughter. Amanda Joy, who is now 12 years old, had been named for years as the family wove its way through adoption requirements and experienced "a number of heartbreaks," Pat said.

Amanda's half brother was adopted and their miracle son, Joel, was saved from starvation in Peru. Being a newborn of a poor mother, Joel was left to die in the hospital. Missionary friends of the Keehns rescued him three days after birth and carried him into the ark when he was four months old.

After Pat began to look for a new location for a pottery and weaving gallery, the family increased Charlevoix's census slightly. Pat opened The Village Shop of Scottsdale downtown.

Within a year, all the Keehns came to town. And since then, there have been seven children added — three of which came from Texas last summer. They are a sibling group of African Americans. Some of the Keehns' children just never left their home after they were placed in their protective shelter.

In all, 12 children have been adopted. Pat has never given physical birth to a child, but they have created a cherished family where differences are embraced.

"We select a child after months of prayer, consideration and reading mounds of information," Pat said, noting the lengthy biographies that are mailed and the assessments made. "Can we cope with the special needs of that child?"

The family is now considering adopting a teen-age girl who has been in foster care most of her life.

"We have turned down three times the number of children we have adopted," Pat said. "If everybody would take just one more child, we'd have no more waiting. That's why we have to take more, not everybody will."

The Keehns don't consider their family perfect. They are open about "the warts." When children first come there is often disciplinary problems. Some kids have arrived heavily medicated and have had to be weaned off several prescriptions. They have adopted themselves out of qualifying to be a foster home or emergency shelter, which limits family size. And the children take time and seemingly endless energy for a couple that is now in their 50s.

"Many times you think you're at the end of your rope," Pat said. "But then you get more rope."

> "If everybody would take just one more child, we'd have no more waiting. That's why we have to take more, not everybody will."
> — Pat Keehn

Some of them have learning disabilities, are academically years behind other students their age and see counselors to work through past hurts. Noise in the house is kept to a minimum through frequent reminders. And the family usually travels in more than one vehicle at a time.

Their church gave them an old mini-bus that does squeeze everybody in. However, traveling through town in a blue bus that says "Bible Baptist Church" on the side doesn't go over well with the older kids.

A mini-van is used to shuttle some of the children off to school five days a week. The family is educated at five different schools to meet their individual needs. Bill is the unofficial bus driver. After school, there are daily paper routes to organize and travel.

Pat is at home cooking dinner on the stove and electric skillets as the routes wind down. Even though the oldest two boys are graduated and away from home — Paul is in the Marine Corp and Daniel attends Alpena Community College on a scholarship — there are 12 mouths to feed each night. Pat starts early to prepare for the coming home of the troops.

When making hamburger patties, six pounds of ground beef is used. When a grocery store sale includes Kool-Aid, Pat buys 200 packs. A summer lunch can mean mixing up 12 cans of tuna fish, using two to three loaves of bread and making four packages of Kool-Aid. The family goes through about 20 gallons of milk a week.

Bill, Karissa Keehn

Pat laughs as she recalls how she once specialized in shop until you drop. Now her big thrill each week is going to Oleson's to buy the family's food.

There are days of great rewards, when a child learns something new or the parents hear their older sons advising the young children to help out around the house. There are also days when Pat wonders are they accomplishing anything.

As the family travels between 4-H activities, gymnastics, swimming lessons, ice skating and high school sporting events, they tend to draw stares.

"We're an oddity," Pat said, laughing as she recalls her husband's way of carting the batch of multi-racial kids around town. "We're scrutinized a lot. Sometimes we want to roll up the driveway and just go inside."

Pat admits that her priorities do not include keeping all the children's faces smudge-free. The older kids help with the other children's hair and clothes as the family prepares for an outing.

Before adopting the last three children in 1996, Pat sought counsel with friends in Charlevoix about their acceptance in a predominantly white community. She found the community fairly open about race.

Regardless of acceptance, the Keehns are not an average family. Pat and Bill teach their children that it's okay to be different. They don't have to be the same.

The size of the family isn't the only difference between the Keehns and some other local families. They don't allow the children to watch much television. After dinner, they care for the guinea pigs, play board games and do homework. Rock 'n' roll is not allowed to be played in the house. And the children must wait until they are 16 years old to date.

Pat and Bill considered themselves old-fashioned. Dinners are spent around the table, with family members sharing about their day. They address the children's concerns or address curiosities in life. One night the family discussed dogs in heat. Pat read from a book about what happens to the dogs' bodies.

"We take time to teach them," Pat said. "We're not preoccupied with other things."

Providing for a group as large as the Keehns has required some creativity.

Throughout the years, Pat has been involved in sales — Tupperware and retail. She currently sells books from her kitchen table, with about 200 sellers underneath to help provide monthly checks. About six times a year, she travels to various conferences to sell the reference materials en mass.

> "We're scrutinized a lot. Sometimes we want to roll up the driveway and just go inside."
> — Pat Keehn

Bill had worked full time until his job at Northern Michigan Hospital was eliminated two years ago. The couple has had a rural driving route with the Petoskey News-Review for years. Some of the children walk their own routes in town.

The national winning team of Future Problem Solvers is made up of ninth-graders (from left) Laurel English, Tyler Lieberman, Shaun MacMillan and Joel Trubilowicz.

Academic team makes international competition by solving problems

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Need a problem solved? If so, questions should be sent directly to Charlevoix ninth-graders, Shaun MacMillan, Tyler Lieberman, Joel Trubilowicz, and Laurel English.

The quartet took top honors over the weekend in the Michigan Future Problem Solvers Conference at the University of Michigan.

The team competed in the intermediate division for students in grades seventh through ninth. The next step is the international conference. Again held on campus in Ann Arbor, the international conference includes state champions from all U.S. states, and teams from Europe, Canada, and Australia.

After advancing through earlier rounds by tackling topics such as homes of the future, extraterrestrial life, and cashless societies, the team had to weave through the topic of "competition."

The team was prepped through research and discussion with coach Tom Sothard. There, the topic of "competition" became more specific: What problems may arise if students are trained to be more competitive?

The contest was divided into two parts. Part one was written. The quartet went behind closed doors to develop problems and solutions.

Next they had to give a visual presentation of one of their top solutions.

"The writing is just half the battle," Sothard said. "You have to convince people that this is the right thing to do."

The day was intense and their work was evaluated four times as judges whittled down competitors. In the finals, along with the Charlevoix quartet, were Livonia, Berkeley, Troy, and Avendale.

The international conference will be in Ann Arbor Friday, June 13, through Sunday, June 15.

Sothard said the topic will be everlasting life.

Parents frequently ask what I think of R. L. Stine's "Goosebumps" series for kids. With titles like "Welcome to Dead House" and book covers dominated by creepy scenes, it's easy to understand the concern. Rest assured, the titles and covers are where the horror begins and ends. Goosebumps is a kid-thriller combination of spookiness and silliness. They are not violent or vulgar, and I have yet to talk with a child who has actually experienced goosebumps while reading one of these books.

Spurred by the success of his "Fear Street" series for young teens in 1990, Stine created Goosebumps in 1992 for the 8- to 12-year-olds. There are now 54 books in the original series with a new title released every month. It's the No. 1 best selling series in America with more than 180 million books in print. There is no sign that Stine is going to let up, although Goosebumps sales in Charlevoix are on the decline as kids discover other excellent fiction.

Goosebumps is easy, recreational reading set in a kid world with all the usual kid stuff. Sibling rivalry, silly humor, curiosity, suspense — it's all there. Big issues such as loyalty, trust, good versus evil, acceptance, and betrayal do figure into some Goosebumps books, although not heavily.

Goosebumps is written in first-person narration, which is standard for middle-reader fiction. The emphasis is on plot, not character, and herein lies my biggest complaint. Goosebumps is not creative. The writing is repetitive and formulaic with the same basic plot hauled out for each new title. The plots do move swiftly, providing a few twists and turns, with a nice mix of fear and fun to keep the reader interested. The short chapters usually end with a cliffhanger to make a child want to continue reading. Toss in the fact that the books are under 130 pages and you have all the necessary ingredients to entice the reluctant reader. R. L. Stine has contributed to the excitement of reading for kids who might not otherwise pick up a book.

While I do not promote Goosebumps as good literature, these books are harmless works of entertainment. To parents who are alarmed by Goosebumps, relax and be grateful your child is reading. Pushing other books may only make your child detest reading. Children who enjoy reading eventually become bored with Goosebumps and find their way to more sophisticated books. They appreciate guidance when they are ready.

Obituaries

Harriett R. McClelland

Harriett R. McClelland, 89, of Mendota, Ill., and Bellaire, Mich., died Tuesday, March 18, in Mendota. Mrs. McClelland was a resident of Lake Bellaire for 70 years. She and her husband owned and managed McClelland Laundry and Dry Cleaners in Charlevoix from 1957-1974.

She was born May 16, 1907, in Cleveland, Ohio, to Fred A. Riddell and Harriett (Sherwood) Riddell. She married Robert J. McClelland on Nov. 23, 1929.

Survivors include one son, Gordon C. McClelland, of Sturgeon Bay, Wisc., daughter-in-law, Ann McClelland, of Mendota and Bellaire, three grandchildren, two nieces and four nephews.

She was preceded in death by her parents, two sisters, her husband, and one son, Robert S. McClelland.

Cremation was accorded, and a private memorial service will he held when interment takes place in Lakeview Cemetery, Bellaire.

Donations may be made to The American Cancer Society, or The Antrim County Grass River Natural Area.

Church hosts music workshop

The 14th Annual Church Music Workshop "Using Music and Movement in the Service of Worship" will be held from 8 a.m.-3:30 p.m. Saturday, May 3, at the First Congregational Church.

Mel Larimer will be the choral clinician.

Larimer recently retired from 43 years of teaching and conducting public school and college choral groups. He taught for 17 years in the public high school, eight of those in Traverse City, 31 years at Interlochen Fine Arts Camp, and was chairman of the music department and director of choral at Olivet College. For the past 20 years, he has taught at Albion College, where he was also chairman of the music department and director of choral.

Larimer

The objective of the choral session is to provide practical guidance and information to choir directors and members. Choral techniques will be used to teach pieces in the choral packet.

The bell session will address issues ranging from first-time ringing to advanced bell technique.

The organ session will emphasize basic organ skills and registration, present accessible music and encourage participants to bring short pieces to play, share and discuss.

The liturgical dance, or sacred movement, will present material designed for everyone to take part in and teach.

The workshop will begin at 8 a.m. with registration. The Rainbow Book Store will open and Larimer's first session will begin at 9 a.m. and run until noon. Following lunch, there will he a liturgical dance with Bobbie Bates, sessions for bells and organ and a closing service at 3 p.m. for participants to share their experiences.

The workshop is $12 to register and $12 for a choir packet, two may share.

For more information, call the First Congregational Church at 547-9122.

Marine Corps offers two scholarships

The Northern Michigan Detachment of the Marine Corps League is offering two $500 scholarships for Emmet and Charlevoix county 1997 high school graduates. These scholarships are available to all graduating students.

The applicants will be judged on their participation in school, community activities, scholastic attainments and potential. In addition, financial need may be considered. For those applicants that will be seriously considered, a short essay will become important.

Anyone interested may contact Paul H. Michael at 536-3411 or P.O. Box 210, East Jordan, MI, 49727, for an application.

. Applications must be returned by the end of April. The scholarships will be awarded on the Monday, May 19, at the regular meeting of the Marine Corps League.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Philip G. Schairbaum
First Congregational Church

By the time you are reading this, the Christian community in Charlevoix will be well into Holy Week, the days between Palm Sunday and Easter. This is the most significant week in the Christian calendar, as it marks the last days of Jesus' earthly life. Recently, the following lines were shared with me from the devotional book "Kneeling in Jerusalem" by Ann Weems:

HOLY WEEK

Holy is the week ... holy, consecrated, belonging to God. We move from hosannas to horror with the predictable ease of those who know not what they do. Our hosannas sung, our palms waved, let us go with passion into this week. It is a time to curse fig trees that do not yield fruit. It is a time to cleanse our temples of any blasphemy. It is a time to greet Jesus as the Lord's Anointed One, to lavishly break our alabaster bottle and pour perfume out for him without counting the cost. It is a time for preparation.

The time to give thanks and break bread is upon us. The time to give thanks and drink of the cup is imminent. Eat, drink, remember: On this night of nights, each one must ask, as we dip our bread in the wine, "Is it I?" And on that darkest of days, each of us must stand beneath the tree and watch the dying if we are to be there when the stone is rolled away. The only road to Easter morning is through the unrelenting shadows of that Friday. Only then will the alleluias be sung; only then will the dancing begin.

Even as we anticipate the joy of Easter, let us not forget the great sacrifice of love which Jesus made through his death on the cross.

Won't you join in our Charlevoix community Good Friday service at the United Methodist Church on Friday, March 28? Your Easter will surely take on new meaning if you do. It begins at 1 p.m., proceeded by a cross processional from Oleson's parking lot at 12:30 p.m. Both events are sponsored by the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.

Ordinance will call for cash upfront to sell airplane fuel

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Charlevoix City Council is amid a second round of public hearings over a proposed fuel tank ordinance which would require customers to front as much as $2 million for the right to sell fuel at the city's airport.

The city is worried about potential damage and liability. Mayor Josh Barnes cited a fuel spill at Pellston Regional Airport in October of 1987 as to why the ordinance is being pursued.

While possible damage was great, actual damage was limited. According to Pellston airport records, costs for the clean-up totaled nearly $100,000. However if the fuel had caught on fire, or a plane had landed on the slick surface, the day could have been worse.

"We just can't put city funds at risk," Barnes said. "We cannot buy insurance to cover an unnamed provider."

The proposed ordinance requires that those who want to sell fuel stored in underground storage tanks must pay at least $2 million for a performance bond issued by an A-rated insurance company.

As an alternative, applicants may simply deposit $2 million with the city. Interest earned on those funds would be paid back quarterly.

"We'll leave both doors open," Barnes said.

Barnes said the ordinance may be the first of its kind in the state, and that other cities may be following suit, as "airport fueling inherently is not a really safe thing."

City council was to vote on the ordinance during their regular March 17 session, but tabled the matter in favor of a second public hearing. Barnes explained Wednesday that the decision was postponed to further clarify the chain of command so applicants can follow the guidelines with more efficiency. The city attorney's suggested wording changes can be reviewed by the public before the next public hearing, which is set for 7 p.m. Monday, April 21, in council chambers.

> "We just can't put city funds at risk."
> Mayor Josh Barnes

As the airport ordinance takes final shape, so is the contract with Paul Welke to continue on as Charlevoix airport manager.

"We're all very comfortable," Barnes said. "We are dotting the 'I's and crossing the 'T's."

Welke owns and operates Island Airways, a charter service based in Beaver Island, and has overseen airport operations for the past 12 years.

According to Barnes the agreement between the city and Welke differs in that both parties will split evenly all the revenue and expenditures incurred throughout the facility's operations.

Any company that wants to sell gas at the city airport once the new ordinance is passed will have to put up as much as $2 million to protect the city against spillage.

Parents consider full-time jobs as raising children

Because most of the family's children are considered to have special needs, some of them come with subsidies that cover some basics. The subsidies range from $300 to $600 a month. The amount fluctuates between children depending on their needs, both medical and psychological.

Since Bill has been home from work, and three children added, the Keehns are finding their hands full with parenting. It has become their full-time jobs.

There have been times when Pat has wanted to write to Percy Ross for help, but she never has. Between sales, deliveries, odd jobs and subsidies, the family adds food, clothing and shelter to their relationships.

They have redefined need and want, and pay cash for items rather than incur debt.

Regardless of the changes the couple has gone through since taking on 12 children, whose ages ranged from newborn to 12 years old, the Keehns are living their dream.

"It's a whole different lifestyle," Pat said. "We've made a conscious decision that relationships are what counts in life."

Their relationships have brought many little people into their home who speak words that are sweet to Pat and Bill's ears — mom and dad. The voices have moved through puberty, with the oldest son now being 22 and the youngest four.

"All I want is a big house on a hill, out in the country with lots of kids," Pat told a friend years ago.

Pat has no doubt that she's living her dream and doing what she was born to do. There are no pats on the back, just lives that grow toward adulthood each day.

Bill and Pat are advocates of adopting special needs children, which can include developmental problems or just mean that they are past the preferred age of adoption.

Rather than stare at their children's needs and differences, the Keehns recognize them, find educational opportunities and counseling to prepare them for success as adults and focus on their strengths.

As the years progress, each child is given a hand-knitted afghan and a letter of blessing from Pat that explains the heritage of being part of a group of young people that is headed by parents whose hearts have surrendered to words like: "I feel so safe here," and "We just want someone to love us."

"They each have a gift," Bill said, beginning to name qualities of each child like any proud father would. Fourteen gifts later, they make a family unlike any other in Charlevoix. They make up the Keehns.

> "We've made a conscious decision that relationships are what counts in life."
> — Pat Keehn

Accountants count down final filing days

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

As April 15 nears, the ticking of of the tax filing deadline becomes louder.

Perhaps it's more prevalent for area accountants, who this time of year are flocked with people and small businesses needing their returns done with perfection and promptness.

"It's a seven day work-week," said Charlevoix accountant Robert Hoffman. "I loose track, is it a week day or weekend?"

Sam Supernaw divided tax season into two parts. Corporate returns are due March 15, and of course once those are complete total focus is on the individual returns that are due April 15.

"You run pretty hectic," he said. "There's a big push from March 1 to April 15. It always goes down to the wire, and you have got to get it done."

Hoffman said he is "bottle necked" with work, while Ronald Agnello said he usually stops taking new appointments about two or three weeks before the due date.

"By then you're already burned out," he said. "You've got to pace yourself because you're burning the candle at both ends."

All those hours are spent gearing up for the Ides of April, an ides more dreaded than its predecessor in March, and the end of the craziness.

"That day is just incredible," Agnello said of the upcoming deadline..

That day will be earmarked from start to finish with appointments just to go over and double check with his clients their returns. None of those jam sessions can be ignored as statements are finalized and signed.

"They are not little 1040s," he joked.

However as the sun sets on that day, the burden becomes lighter. Soon after Supernaw said he plans a vacation down south. Hoffman also said the breathing becomes easier.

"Less pressure, and things begin to slow down. The deadline is behind us," he said with anticipation.

Accounting, by nature, is complicated. Those who fear numbers and mathematics need not apply as it's a field loaded with equations and formulas. Agnello pointed out that there are probably more than 100 different bottom lines on each return.

"To do this you have to be able to take a cold hard look at the numbers," he said.

The accountants say the key is to pore over the numbers and double check that everything has been properly computed. Agnello said one of the best ways of beginning and ending the process is to compare past years' returns.

He said it will help jog a memory of what needs to be reported as well as what a person may be entitled to. Hoffman said that with all the numbers, all the formulas, and all the hours, when it comes down to it signing the document is key.

Robert Hoffman works his 10-key calculator during the late afternoon Friday to finish yet another tax return before the federal deadline — April 15.

Business in brief

Joseph Kanine has passed the Uniform Certified Public Accountant Examination. The two and one-half day test entitles successful applicants certification from the Michigan Board of Accountancy after two years of public accounting.

Kanine graduate from Central Michigan University with a bachelor's of science degree in accounting and is employed by William R. Kanine, P.C., of 300 E. Mitchell St., Suite 2, Petoskey.

He resides in Petoskey with his wife, Christy, and their daughter, Stephanie.

Fund-raiser fury

Senior Shawn Kimble (center) goes up to dunk as cross country coach, Ken Plude (left), looks on during Friday's game when the seniors took on the faculty at Charlevoix High School. Bribes were accepted. Each point to boost either team cost $1. The adults dipped deeper into their wallets and the teachers made more baskets than students during the benefit for the Spanish class. More than $300 was raised through entrance charges and bribes to the scorekeeper.

Volleyball teams take title in two recreation divisions

(Left) The weight loss war between Charlevoix County and city employees is coming to a close. Treats continue to be carted between offices, trying to entice competitors into snacking between meals. A poem accompanied this tasty flower garden that was delivered to the county building recently. "For each and every one of you, that has no willpower, we bring you a flower. There's only one more week to go: You haven't much time to blow. Won't it be a pity ... when you are beaten by the city!

Book Shelf, Continued from page 7

After children grow tired of Goosebumps, good literature will be there that is written with honesty, dignity, and respect for the intelligence and emotional maturity of young readers. Every once in a while a child may fall back to Goosebumps to enjoy a quick and easy read. It's okay. As adults we do the same when we grab that good, easy "beach read."

Speaking of beaches, spring break is here. I'm not headed to a beach, but I will be reading. My choice for spring break is "The Scarlet Thread" by Francine Rivers (paperback, Tyndale House Publishers). It's a story of two women joined through a tattered journal. Sierra Madrid is a bold and determined woman of the 1990s. Mary Kathryn McMurray is a young pioneer on the Oregon Trail. Though centuries apart, they share a remarkable journey. I'll tell you more in my next column.

Serviceman settles in Charlevoix

Bob said to his friend, "See that girl on the bicycle? I'm going to marry her!" and sure enough, a year later he married Susie Smith!"

When Bob returned to civilian life in 1967, he accepted the job of cook at Juilleret's. One day he again stopped by the Sugar Bowl for a cup of coffee, when the owner uttered these prophetic words, "I wish I could get someone to wash these windows!"

"I'll do them for you," Bob offered.

"How much?"

"Oh, how about $3.25?"

That evening Bob's phone rang. It was Dick Edwards, who owned the IGA grocery. "Can you do my windows once a week?"

The next day, summer visitor, Sue Darnton's father knocked on Bob's door and asked him to wash the window of their cottage on Raspberry Bay. When Bob was finished, Sue called him over and said that there is a real need for his services.

"Go put an ad in the Courier, and you'll get a lot of business," she suggested.

Bob went to the Courier office and put an ad in the paper for 85 cents. "Don't you leave now ... ," the editor said. And Bob got another window washing job for $12 a week.

Within the week, the Petoskey News-Review called, and Bob will always remember the inspiring words of its owner, Albert Schaller.

"There is no such thing as work. Just different degrees of fun!"

Of course, by this time, Bob was no longer working as a cook. By doing conscientious work, and word of mouth recommendations, he founded what was to become the very prosperous Wise Window Cleaning and Floor Care Co.

He soon employed 18 people and owned nine vehicles, and was in business for 13 years. In 1978 he sold the profitable business, because it was so demanding.

Today Bob Wise owns the All Area Towing AAA service business, which covers the south side of Charlevoix, plus East Jordan and Ellsworth. He owns five trucks and he and his son, Jim, have all the business the two can comfortably handle.

"But nothing made the money like the cleaning business," he says with a chuckle.

With a far-away look in his eye, Bob sighs: "When I first came to Charlevoix, I had never seen such a beautiful town. There were no condominiums and it looked like a small Scandinavian village, with gorgeous open views of the lakes, tall trees and blue sky. I'm very happy to have found it."

New drunk driving law takes effect April 1

New drunk driving laws take effect in Michigan on April Fool's Day, and it's no joke. The four laws — Public Acts 490, 491, 492 and 493 — provide stiffer penalties for minors and first-time violators, and clamp down on repeat offenders.

"We applaud state legislators for taking a firm stance against drunk drivers," said Jerry Basch, AAA Michigan Community Safety Services Manager. "Alcohol continues to play a major role in Michigan crashes. In fact, alcohol was a factor in 36.9 percent of all fatal crashes in this state during 1995 — an increase of 7.8 percent."

Vehicles of drunk drivers can be seized

According to Basch, about one-third of those arrested or convicted of drunk driving are repeat offenders. As many as 75 percent of convicted drunk drivers nationwide continue to drive with a suspended license.

Young drivers are also at risk. One of the most hazardous driving behaviors reported among high school students is the consumption of alcoholic beverages before driving. Studies suggest that as many as 61 percent of all dangerous driving events involving high school seniors involve alcohol. Following is a summary of the four new Michigan laws, which are designed to help reduce the number of alcohol-related injuries and deaths:

— PA 490 allows for the warrantless arrest of an intoxicated person found in the driver's seat of a vehicle, if any part of that vehicle intrudes onto the roadway. The warrantless arrest provision also applies to boat operators who have been involved in a crash and are suspected of being drunk.

— PA 491 gives judges the power to seize a vehicle for a first-time drunk driving arrest, a second impaired conviction within seven years, three drunk driving convictions within 10 years or an alcohol conviction where a driver caused serious injury or death.

— PA 492 outlines that penalties pertaining to underage drinking or possession include fines of up to $100, and/or 90 days in jail; community service and substance abuse counseling for first-time offenders. Police can arrest minors based on the results of a preliminary breath test, and a driver's license can be suspended or restricted after just one conviction.

— PA 493 allows for the owner of a vehicle used by a minor in transporting of alcohol could have his or her vehicle impounded for 15 to 30 days (if that person had knowledge of or gave consent to the use of the vehicle for transporting alcohol). Police are required to notify a minor's parents or legal guardian following a drunk driving arrest.

SCRAPBOOK

Boiling syrup a family tradition

Rocky Ridge Farm label.

The family's outdoor still is sticky and sweet. So is their hair after hours of skimming impurities off the top of the liquid and filling the stove with wood.

Doug admits that boiling maple syrup is more trouble than its worth. But so is making leek soup, a springtime tradition he enjoys with his grandson who lives nearby.

Betsy Reynolds said that although making syrup the old-fashioned way is a lot of work, her grandson learns about the process and the family enjoys the aesthetics of their outdoor project.

Friends and family gather for the boiling parties, that end with final purification happening on the inside stove.

Doug's daughter-in-law is a banker, and she gives syrup out to people when they close their mortgage. Betsy and Doug hand them out as gifts.

Although the light brown delight is great to give away, Reynolds prefers personally savoring his syrup, on pancakes, ice cream, "or whatever it is you want to sweeten up," he said.

This picture, taken in 1886, shows the government ship "Andrew Johnson," a regular caller at Charlevoix for many years. She was the last government boat on the Great Lakes of the side wheeler type. Being too wide to get past the first steel bridge, she would tie up in the channel just west of the roller mill. All subsequent government ships were propeller driven.

Marion Shea-Light, of Norwood, entered two watercolor paintings of Michigan wildflowers in the University of Michigan exhibit, "Exotics: Botanicals by Michigan Artists." Both of her works have been accepted for display in this juried show, which begins Saturday, April 5, at the Alfred Berkowitz Gallery in Dearborn. The botanical exhibit, which celebrates and showcases Michigan artists and promotes the resources of the U of M, will then travel to the University of Michigan Matthaei Botanical Gardens June 1-29 and to the Oakland County Executive Office Building Galleria July 7 - August 1, 1997. Some of Mrs. Shea-Light's work can be seen currently at the Acorn Cafe, in Charlevoix.

Kindergarten registration set

Kindergarten registration for fall 1997 classes will include a 90-minute mini-kindergarten class for the enrolling child. This should show the child what a day of school would be like.

Parents must reserve a space by Tuesday, April 11, in one of four sessions: 9-10:30 a.m. or 1-2:30 p.m. Tuesday, April 15, and 9-10:30 a.m. or 1-2:30 p.m. Wednesday, April 16, by calling 547-3215.

Parents will meet in the gym to register their child while he or she is in class. The following information will be needed: a certified copy of the child's birth certificate, Social Security numbers for the father, mother and child, up-to-date immunization records, and a photograph of the child, which will be returned at a later date.

The Charlevoix school board recommends that children entering kindergarten be 5 years old by Monday, Sept. 1, 1997. Also, if a child is not living with their parents, guardianship papers or court placement papers must be presented to school personnel during registration.

Woman starts 4-H leader dog program

By Janenne Irene Harrington

Laura Smith and her puppy, Bentley, are teaming up to help guide someone who's blind.

Bentley may walk on four legs and be put outside to go to the bathroom, but he's more a Charlevoix resident than most canines.

He ventures into restaurants, attends service club meetings and goes shopping. Bentley is training to be a leader dog for the blind.

His training involves "making him a person because he's going to be a person's eyes," said Laura Smith, who has taken Bentley in as family for 12-15 months.

"For Whither Thou Goest," is a motto of the organization that entrusts future leader dogs to families. Bentley "goest" most places that Smith travels.

Bentley wears a "Future Leader Dog" bandanna around his neck. Its denim blue is accented with red letters that announce his goal.

"He won't let me spoil him," Smith said, as she directs pet traffic from her kitchen table. "He won't cuddle. He knows he's a leader dog."

The German shepherd was born at the leader dog headquarters in Rochester. Smith picked him up Jan. 27, when he was seven weeks old. The puppy moved in with Smith, her husband, Charlie, a full-grown dog, Chester, four guinea pigs, a cat and 14 rabbits that live in the garage.

Bentley will return to Rochester, where he will undergo four more months of training. At any time during the organization's evaluation, he can be rejected from the program that has supplied legally blind people with another set of eyes since 1939.

"Our hope is that he passes," Smith said, even though she knows that passing means never seeing Bentley again. "If he graduates, I'll get another puppy. This has been fun."

Reasons Bentley can be rejected include if he is too aggressive, nervous, unfriendly, suspicious, protective, physically weak, or if they pull too hard, are inconsistent, lack responsibility or are overly gentle. If he doesn't become a leader dog, he will likely become Smith's permanent pet.

However, Smith is focusing on preparing Bentley for success. She is currently teaching him how to lead with a leash, respond to specific commands and get used to traffic and strangers. Training dogs isn't new to her. She's taught various dog obedience courses in Charlevoix and Boyne City.

However, training Bentley is different. She's doing more than teaching a dog how to not embarrass their owner in public. She's

McKeown Ford fire destroys pickup

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

A fire at Pat McKeown Ford Lincoln/Mercury Monday night destroyed one truck and damaged about six more vehicles.

Charlevoix Township firefighters were called dealership's body shop on U.S. 31 South at 7:28 p.m. When arriving, they faced a wall of black smoke, said fire chief Curt Thompson.

"It was impossible to see," he said, noting that the difficulty in dousing the flames came from having to negotiate through what seemed like a maze of cars in the dark.

Thompson said that initial inspection indicates that the fire started on the truck, which was being welded late Monday afternoon. The shop had closed and all employees left by about 6 p.m.

"Sparks could have gotten into some insulation," he said. However, an investigation continues to discover the cause and exact origin of the fire.

The truck was destroyed.

"Fortunately, there doesn't appear to be a lot of structural damage to the building," Thompson said. There is, however, smoke damage that reaches into the sales area.

Thompson said the black smoke was caused by burning tires and plastic. "There was a tremendous amount of smoke and not really much fire," he said.

The flames were doused, with assistance given by the City of Charlevoix firefighters.

The dealership and service departments are open for business, regardless of the scent of smoke. However, the body shop is temporarily closed, said sales manager Kevin Tucker.

Between six to seven customer vehicles were damaged. Insurance adjusters will be assessing the damage.

helping the blind. As a member of the Charlevoix Lion's Club, it's a cause Smith has been involved with for one-and-a-half years. She has also had a dog grooming business for years.

Raising Bentley is somewhat like raising a child. When getting out, Smith must take extra time to prepare for the journey. She carries plastic bags and paper towels everywhere to clean up after his messes. She has to watch him as she goes through the store or has breakfast. He just ended his "terrible twos," which for dogs come when they are a few months old.

> "If he gets with a blind person, all the more power to him. He's done what I've planned for him to do."
> — Laura Smith

Unlike parenting, Smith must ask business owners or managers for permission to bring the dog inside, which is part of Bentley's socialization training.

She must also comply with many rules that are not her own. Bentley isn't allowed to be off a leash unless he's in a fenced-in area. There is no playing ball. Leader dogs cannot go diving after a ball or frisbee when they are leading their master around. Bentley could not be paper trained or be allowed to jump on the furniture. Discipline is only given through verbal reprimands and tugs on the leash.

As Bentley matures, Smith hopes that interest in the leader dog program will grow. She is starting a 4-H class in Charlevoix County for interested foster families. Dogs generally used in the training are German shepherds, labrador retrievers and golden retrievers. Families can specify their preference between the type of dog and gender.

For Smith, raising a leader dog has two-fold satisfaction. She once had a German shepherd die prematurely of cancer. Now she has a new friend of his breed. And, she's always talked about taking in a future leader dog.

"Think about what you're doing for the person," she said, remembering the blind leader who could be awaiting Bentley's guidance. "If he gets with a blind person, all the more power to him. He's done what I've planned for him to do."

To learn more about being a foster family, call Smith at 547-2916.

Events in brief

Beaver Island students to perform plays

Fifth- and sixth-graders from Beaver Island Community School are putting on two plays at the Holy Cross Hall at 7 p.m. Wednesday, April 30. The plays are called "The Princess Knight" and "The Princess and the Princess."

Garden Club hosts water quality speaker

"Water Quality and Gardening Practices" will be the topic at the next Charlevoix Area Garden Club meeting at 1 p.m. Tuesday, April 8, at the home of Marge McGoff.

Ann Boughman, Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council Water Resource Program Director, will speak about the water quality of Lake Charlevoix and Lake Michigan.

Careful use of fertilizers, pesticide management and control of soil erosion designed to save resources and still have a satisfying garden will be covered in Boughman's presentation.

The Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council will also have a formal display at the Garden Club's August Garden Show to help educate on water quality.

For more information, call Joan Knecht at 547-5072. The Charlevoix Garden Club is a member of the Federated Garden Clubs of Michigan, District V.

Senator's representative coming to hear concerns

A representative for Sen. Walter North, R-St. Ignace, will be in the area to meet with constituents Thursday, April 3, at area senior centers.

Don Weeks will be at the Boyne City Senior Citizen's Center in city hall from 11:30 a.m.-noon and at the East Jordan Senior Center, at 116 Main St., from 12:30-1 p.m.

Any senior citizen with a concern regarding state government is encouraged to attend and should bring all relevant information pertaining to their case.

For more information, call the senator's Lansing office at (517) 373-2413.

Downtown development authority meets

The downtown development authority will meet at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday, April 9, in city hall's upstairs conference room. The authority will discuss downtown street furnishings, alleyway signs, Bridge Park sign proposals and future projects.

Fund-raiser benefits historical society

The Charlevoix Historical Society will be hosting a fund-raising dinner to honor Ralph Hamilton, the first president of the reorgaized society.

As a historian, Ralph has been a valued member at recording and correcting errors of Charlevoix history. Ralph has been a booster of Charlevoix for years.

The dinner will be held at the Grey Gables Inn at 7 p.m. Tuesday, April 22. Cocktail hour will begin at 6 p.m.

The cost of tickets will be $16. They may be purchased at the Shop of the Gulls, Don's IGA or through Betsy Reynolds at the Harsha House.

Lost pounds paid off

Area pets benefit from weight-loss war

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

County employees say they are calling for a grand jury to determine whether Charlevoix city employees actually shed more pounds during the weight-loss war.

"The county lost, allegedly," said Charlevoix County Prosecutor Mary Beth Kur. "We're very interested in checking for accuracy."

According to city treasurer, Bea Parton, her group is willing to hire an auditor to verify their findings that the county fell eight pounds shy of victory.

After the official weigh-in, the city had lost 99 pounds while county employees left 92 behind. The competition to say goodbye to flab began at the New Year and ended at Wednesday's weigh-in.

Throughout the three-month process, both sides have been tempting their opponents by sending snacks that dripped in chocolate sauce and frosting across State Street. There have been 15 dieters for the county and 11 for the city.

To encourage both sides, Richard Simmons penned a letter to Parton on the last day of January. "I love your idea and hope some of the employees not only lose some weight but learn a few things about good health and nutrition for life in the process," the letter said. "Keeping a positive attitude is one of the most important allies you can have in the 'battle of the bulge.'

> "Keeping a positive attitude is one of the most important allies you can have in the 'battle of the bulge.'"
> — Richard Simmons

"Good luck to all of you, and I promise, I'll be cheering for everyone on both teams ALL THE WAY," Richard went on. "Now, you remember our 'battle cry' and that is you must NEVER GIVE UP!"

Though the contestants haven't officially given up, they have finished this race, with an average of 7.34 pounds lost per person.

County commissioners finalize administrator job description

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

The debate surrounding the hiring of a county administrator had reached a familiar impasse.

Commissioner Phil Johnson's open enthusiasm about the future position was doused by commissioner Shirley Roloff's dogged disapproval of a county administrator.

Johnson placed the commission in the top 5 percent of those in the state. And with the help of a county administrator, he said it could be No. 1.

Before voting, the board discussed the position and its job description.

Roloff sounded off unchanging opposition, questioning the need for the hire, and a high price tag that would come from taxpayers.

Prospective budgetary figures show $70,000 being lopped off for an administrator's salary and expenses. Not included in that, though, is whatever benefits package may accompany the job.

Roloff claimed that her mind remains open to the subject, but only if her fellow commissioners could give her a list of reasons why the county needs an administrator.

> "You can only go so far on the committee structure and volunteer people."
> — Paul Lenahan, Emmet County Commissioner

Johnson, frustrated over months turning into years of discussion and failure surrounding an administrator, turned to an unusual source for support — the audience. He asked if onlookers thought the idea of a county administrator was sound.

The pickings were slim as three of the eight audience members represented the media and a fourth, Charlevoix resident Bernie DeVries, had already spoken against the position. He said he wondered if the county's desire for an extra hire stemmed from commissioners wanting to decrease their own workload.

In his search of the audience, Johnson did find some help.

Paul Lenahan, an Emmet County Commissioner, said his county's government has improved

All of Charlevoix is due its spring cleaning

EDITORIAL

Signs of spring are everywhere — longer days, melting snow and wide smiles worn by people walking the streets.

However, there are less sightly signs of spring that can be seen in Charlevoix, like abandoned cigarette butts on the sidewalks, dirt-covered streets from wintertime sanding and an array of litter.

Spring cleaning is a term normally recognized as airing out the house and scrubbing from end-to-end. Charlevoix, as a community, is due its spring cleaning. And if everyone pitches in, the town will soon sparkle.

Unfortunately, people are apparently careless with their trash in the winter months. We have noted bags of garbage being exposed in melting snow that should never have found their way to the roadside or Round Lake. Cigarette butts that are frequently swept away during summer months by city employees have accumulated under the snow for months, unnoticed until now.

Snow makes carelessness disappear as it blankets the north. But now that it's leaving, it's revealing lazy secrets.

We are all responsible for our homes and yards. Residents become frustrated when they spend hours raking and planting flowers to beautify their area and a neighbor lets their lot remain a mess.

Man those rakes. Take a garbage bag and pick up trash along the street.

Let's not rely on city employees to do all the work in making Charlevoix live up to its name, Charlevoix the Beautiful. We contributed to the mess. We can become part of the spring clean-up.

The fire department will again be spraying downtown streets later this spring. Store owners have been in front of their shops sweeping and clearing pine from flower boxes.

If we each bend over and pick up the trash at our feet, instead of leaving it for someone else, Charlevoix will be ready for our outdoor activities and the many people who are currently making plans for their trips up north.

Letters to the editor

Young wrestler defends purity of sport

Editor:

My name is Danielle Flowers from the front page article on wrestling on March 12. I would like to respond to what Pastor Duane Nelson wrote in his letter to you. I feel that wrestling is just a sport like basketball or football. If they had an all-girl team, then I would be on that, but they don't. The contact that is made in wrestling is not sexual contact and should not be thought of that way, it's just a sport.

Yours truly,
Danielle Flowers

Inappropriate touch occurs in adult minds

Editor:

I would like to address the letter from the Pastor. I'm Danielle Flower's mother.

If it is improper for quote "young ladies and young men to be touching each other in those ways outside of marriage" then what is it if two young men are touching each other in the same way? Why is one way a sport and the other perverted or immoral in some way?

You speak of God and the differences between men and women. Danielle is being raised in a very Christian home, and she knows the difference between appropriate touch and inappropriate. When she gets on the mat she does not see her opponent as a male or female, just an opponent.

During the course of my daughter's life she is going to touch and be touched by men, unless she becomes a nun, it is unavoidable. And if the touch that occurs on the mat is all I have to worry about then I breath a sigh of relief.

As for her teammates. They are wonderful young men. They treat Danielle as an opponent on the mat and have a respect for her off the mat that I don't see from the young men who are not on her team.

There is one more thing I would like to say. I have nothing but praise for our coaches. The Golovichs, Mr. Probert and Mr. Johnson are doing a great job with the kids. They are building character, self-esteem and promoting good sportsmanship and team work, which I cannot say about all of the coaches my children have had in the past. They believe in doing your best no matter the outcome.

Last night my daughter had a match in Elk Rapids. She beat her male opponent 14-6, and I couldn't have been prouder. I wasn't the only one. All of her teammates and two-thirds of the audience were cheering her on, yes even Elk Rapids parents. The father beside me (from Elk Rapids) clapped as loud as I did when the referee raised her hand in victory.

The only inappropriate touch involved in the sport occurs in the minds of adults who twist things that aren't there instead of just letting kids be kids.

Sincerely,
Vickie L. Flowers

argument between two troops. We wish to clarify this point.

We, the leaders of Troop 11, are taken aback by this editorial since we in no way had any involvement with this tiff. Nor did any cub or webelo leader. Your information regarding scouting in Charlevoix is wanting. If it were complete you would not have left Troop 11 out of your annual scout week pictorial. Troop 11 has been active in Charlevoix for 56 years. In December one of your staff members wrote an excellent article about the two Eagle Scouts from Troop 11, and then you print an editorial about a disagreement between two troops.

In your editorial you say scouting is "one of the best programs a boy (or girl) can join," so why did you just make it difficult for this organization to grow in Charlevoix, especially at a time when numbers are down? In your last paragraph you say, "We laud the volunteers who spend their evenings training up these young men ... " Apparently you do not know what it takes. It means weekends away from our families almost every month, or a week at scout camp, meetings with the troop committee, time planning outings and meetings, and much more.

Before you write an editorial you should have your facts correct and leave the innocent out. This editorial is damaging to scouting and in poor taste. It never should have been printed, and we expect an apology for including all scout leaders in Charlevoix in a tiff, that has been settled, between two troops.

Respectfully Yours,
Tim May, Scoutmaster Troop 11

Editor's note: Unfortunately, Troop 11 was not included on a list that was provided to the Courier for the annual salute to scouts. Until this letter arrived, we were not aware that any troop had been omitted from the community-service pages.

McClanaghan - Robinson

Barbara McClanaghan and Galen Robinson announce their engagement to be married. Barbara is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lionel McClanaghan of Charlevoix. Galen is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Robinson of Boyne City.

A Saturday, Aug. 30, 1997, wedding is planned at the Charlevoix United Methodist Church. A reception will follow at Nubs Nob.

Barbara is a graduate of Charlevoix High School and Michigan State University. She has attended the Thomas Cooley Law School and is working as an escrow and closing agent for Northern Title Co. in Charlevoix.

Galen is a graduate of Boyne City High School and Michigan State University. He is currently working as a landscape technician for Robinson Landscaping in Horton Bay and is a minister/exhorter of the Pentecostal Church of God.

Endowment helps hospital

A new endowment fund to help support ongoing needs of the Charlevoix Area Hospital has been established with the Charlevoix Community Foundation. The Charlevoix Area Hospital Fund, a special trust, will be used to purchase equipment, provide community health programs, address emerging medical needs, and enhance the health and well-being of those who live in the hospital's service area.

According to Mary Jason, chairman of the hospital board of trustees, this is the first time the hospital has created an endowment for future needs.

"With the recent expansion and renovation of the hospital, we now have a wonderful health facility here in Charlevoix," Jason said. "This endowment will give us the means to respond to the health needs of our community for years to come, even as our area changes and grows."

The endowment was started with a gift from the estate of Joanne Cummings, a frequent summer visitor to the area who died in 1996. Cummings became a benefactor through her friendship with local resident and hospital supporter Edith Gilbert, whose late husband Julius was a hospital trustee.

The Charlevoix Area Hospital began as a 19-bed community hospital in 1919. Since that time, it has grown to 44 beds, with a medical staff of 27. In 1994, the hospital completed a major renovation, adding a new birthing center, a modern surgical suite, and upgrading its kitchen and dining room. Last year, the facility treated more than 20,000 patients from Charlevoix, Antrim, and surrounding counties. The hospital also has two satellite facilities located in Boyne City, Boyne City Rehab, and the Boyne Area Medical Center.

Like other funds held and professionally managed by the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, the hospital fund will be permanent. Since only earned income will be used to support projects, the endowment can continue to grow and serve the institution well into the future. Trustees of Charlevoix Area Hospital will make recommendations for using the endowment's income.

Now that it's established, other individuals, families, businesses, and organizations who share a concern for the area's health resources are invited to contribute to the fund either directly, or through planned gifts and wills. Donations are tax-deductible and, as they are made through the foundation, they also qualify for a special Michigan Income Tax Credit.

For more information about the hospital fund or other projects for the foundation, please call 536-2440, or write P.O. Box 718, East Jordan, Michigan 49727.

VanDeCar usually writes poems that involve themes based on domestic life, religion, children, friends and nature.

Foundation manages new scholarship

A new scholarship has been established with the Charlevoix County Community Foundation to apply toward traditional college studies in business or accounting.

The Michigan Association of Retired Personnel Scholarship Fund was set up by the Charlevoix County chapter, a group of former public school employees who support educational and literacy efforts.

The fund will award a $250 scholarship each year to a graduate of a public high school in Charlevoix County who will attend an accredited trade or vocational education school, or technical program.

"Our foundation was established to build a bright future for those who live in Charlevoix County — and investing in the education of our young people is one way to do that," said foundation president, Mike Stowe. "We welcome this opportunity to help donors who support higher education or who want to honor loved ones in this special way."

The foundation now manages 17 different scholarship funds.

Memorial may be directed to St. Mary's Catholic Church, 2300 W. Jackson St., Muncie, IN, 47303.

Walter A. Graff

Walter A. Graff, 90, of Columbia, Tenn., and formerly of Ironton, died March 25, 1997, at Columbia Health Care Center in Columbia following a lengthy illness.

Funeral was held 11 a.m., Tuesday, April 1, at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Charlevoix. The Rev. Francis C. Partridge officiated.

Burial will take place at Brookside Cemetery in the spring.

Mr. Graff was born April 13, 1906, in Detroit, the son of Charles E. and Elizabeth (Short) Graff. He attended school in Detroit and earned a high school diploma.

On August 9, 1930, he married Stephanie Kozak. She preceded him in death on Oct. 3, 1994.

Mr. Graff was a resident of Detroit for 60 years until his retirement from the City of Detroit, where he worked as a refrigeration engineer. After his retirement, he and his wife moved to Ironton where they lived for 25 years. Mr. Graff had lived in Columbia, Tenn. for the past five years.

Survivors include one son; William Graff and his wife, Vivian, of Columbia, Tenn., five grandchildren and 5 great-grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements were handled by Winchester Funeral Home of Charlevoix.

Free diabetes screening offered

Charlevoix Area Hospital and the American Diabetes Association are conducting a community foot screening from 9 a.m.-noon Wednesday, April 16, at the Char-Em Intermediate School Administrative Building on Mercer Blvd., off of U.S. 31 north of Charlevoix.

Dr. Thomas De Korte, will be doing the screenings for people with diabetes. The screening will be free and open to the public. Material on home foot exam and ways to reduce amputations will be provided.

For more information, contact Peggy Spang, RN, Diabetic Educator at Charlevoix Area Hospital, 547-4024.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

Garrison Keeler has his tales from Lake Woebegone, and the Hamilton clan celebrates their sagas at Lester Lake. It's been about three years since we were last there, but we're headed that way again for a portion of our spring break. To find it, you would have to know the location of a very small town called Grand Junction. It's one of those places where you find the "welcome and y'all come back" signs on the same post. About a mile outside of the downtown, you'll find our getaway.

On the first night we're there, we'll probably build a fire in the fireplace. Have you ever listened to the music that comes from burning logs? Someone once told me that logs were kind of like the good Lord's version of a compact disc. When a log whistles, it's playing back the song of birds that once sat in its branches one spring. When it pops, it's sharing the sound of thunder from a summer rain that once watered it. When it cracks and splits, it's reminding you of the ice that once encased it during a cold winter storm. You'll never watch a fire in the same way again if you stop to think about the music it plays to an open heart.

I've already promised my son that we would either go fishing or canoeing on the lake while we're there. It has always fascinated me to think about fishing from the fish's point of view. He's hungry and looking for a good meal. If I get the worm on the hook just so and it wiggles good enough, maybe he'll like what he sees and take a bite. Oh, I'll tell you straight away that I'm not into the cooking and cleaning department when it comes to angling. Any fish willing to chomp on our hooks will live to fight another day.

There's something to be said for being away from the city lights at night. We're taking a telescope with us in hopes of getting a closer look at the Hale-Bopp Comet and more. An evening sky is like a stage show unfolding before your eyes. The first hints of crimson and orange serve as prelude to the coming diamond studded display as the sun begins to touch the horizon. You search the ever deepening purple for the first beacon to break through the twilight. An orchestra of frogs along the bank plays an etude that says all nature is in harmony with the end of the day.

In the midst of such joys is the most precious treasure of all, simply being together as a family. There'll be walks in the woods, the temptation to leave a penny on the railroad tracks that run near the cabin in hopes of finding it squashed flat, and the chance to talk and share without the pressures of deadlines or appointments that hit mother, father, and son alike.

It is a Psalm of David that comes to mind as I share this window on my heart with you. "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me, Bless His holy name. Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all His benefits." If your spring break is good for nothing else, may it be good for reminding you of how blessed we all are. We need to stop, slow down, and renew our ties with those who are most important to us. We especially need to refresh our souls in the things of the Lord. The schedules and the demands of life will be there when we all return. But for a little while, may your heart be encouraged and your spirit strengthened by being reminded that God will continue to love you through it all!

Medusa Cement grants scholarships

Each year Medusa Corporation awards scholarships to graduating high school seniors who are dependent children of its employees and retirees.

Scholarships are awarded on a competitive basis by a committee of three non-employees of Medusa Corporation. This year's committee consisted of a professor from John Carroll University, a dean from Case Western Reserve University, and a former principal of Fairview High School.

This year's awardees are:

— Daniel P. Crowley, Jr., who will graduate from Charlevoix High School in June 1997. He plans to study civil engineering at Michigan Tech. Daniel has been a member of the honor roll for all four high school years. He is also active in sports and has participated in a math competition. Daniel's father, Daniel, is the maintenance superintendent of the Charlevoix Plant.

— Carrie E. Estes will graduate from Homestead High School in Mequon, Wisc. Carrie's father, Terry, is the sales manager of the Wisconsin sales office.

— Ashley L. Herdina will graduate from Sturgeon Bay High School in Sturgeon Bay, Wisc. Ashley's father, George, is captain of the Medusa Challenger.

The award for each student is $2,000 for the freshman year.

Annual renewals are available for the students enrolled in a normal four-year college program if the students maintain high academic proficiency, a full schedule of classes, and otherwise remains in good standing at any accredited college or university.

County board majority favors hiring

since hiring their county administrator.

"You can only go so far on the committee structure and volunteer people," he said.

Alexis Kaczynski questioned how any board or business could smoothly oversee a multi-million dollar budget without the aid of an administrator.

As a board, little convincing was needed. Previous attempts at filling this position have only been derailed by hiring malfunctions with a lack of job description being the given reason that their last candidate dropped out.

During the meeting, commissioners were voting on a job description requiring the county administrator to do a variety of planning, organizing, researching, overseeing, and budgeting chores. The list passed with ease, 5-1, with Roloff casting the dissenting vote.

The board could have approved the criteria last fall, but waited because half of its members were being replaced with new county representatives.

After introductions, the issue quickly resurfaced and appeared in consecutive goal sessions and scheduled meetings over the last six weeks. The three veterans — Carl Price, James Behling, and Johnson — remained in favor of the hire while newcomers Vic Patrick and Joan Blanchard leaned toward approval. Patrick said he's convinced.

He said that issues come before the board so fast that the commissioners are not able to give them all full attention.

Whether Charlevoix County hires an administrator is not set in stone. Blanchard pointed out that voting on a job description doesn't equate to actually hiring and paying someone to fill the role.

Still another step has been passed, and Johnson seems eager to leap onto the next stone.

"Next we probably need to set a salary schedule and find someone we think can do this job," he said.

The board's next meeting is 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, April 9, in the board's chambers adjacent to the county clerk's office.

New dentist joins Porter's practice

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Patients who need their teeth worked on, will have less of a line to stand in. Dr. Jeffrey Porter has expanded, hiring another dentist.

Dr. Harry Suckert, a Massachusetts native, will begin work with Porter April 1. Suckert is a graduate of Loma Linda University of Southern California.

Suckert and his wife moved to Charlevoix in 1991 and have two children Michelle, 3, and Andrew, 1.

Suckert said he is excited about his new position, as it keeps him and his family in Charlevoix. After college, the family researched small towns throughout the states, settling on Charlevoix as their favorite.

The dentist has been working at District Health Department No. 3 since his arrival in Charlevoix. There, he was instrumental in organizing, setting up, and working in their dental clinic in East Jordan.

With the new job in town, Suckert said he feels Charlevoix will be home for good.

"I knew I always wanted to go back to a small town," Suckert said. "I love Charlevoix, it's where I want to be. Everything is geared around family and kids."

Despite earning a degree in sunny California, his upbringing in central Massachusetts prepped him for winters that cross over into spring in this neck of the country.

"The snow is a little deeper, and it lasts a little longer," he said of northern Michigan's contribution to Old Man Winter.

As for dentistry, Suckert has more than five years experience in the field. His first year in practice he devoted himself entirely to working with children. He said it helped him grow into his field as most patients — even the adults — revert to being children once they are sitting in the dentist's chair.

"I like to joke that I treat kids of all ages," he said.

Drs. Jeffery Porter (right) and Harry Suckert have joined efforts in keeping Charlevoix teeth white, bright and healthy.

Business in brief

Charlevoix firm opens second office

John Dziurman has opened a field office in Rochester for his architectural and planning firm, John Dziurman, Ltd., according to Tiffany Dziurman. The firm specializes in institutional, educational and governmental projects. It was founded to integrate architecture with the latest technology. The firm's current clients include Saturn Electronics and Engineering, Inc. and North Central Michigan College. The Charlevoix office is on Lake Shore Drive.

Grant helps unemployed

A grant to help dislocated workers in Charlevoix and other nearby counties has been approved. The Michigan Jobs Commission awarded $87,327 to the Northwest Michigan Council of Governments, a Michigan Works agency based in Traverse City.

Charlevoix County is one of 10 counties that will share the funds.

Some job hunting expenses deductible

Job-hunting expenses whether prompted by a job layoff or a desire to advance your career may be tax deductible, even if your job search didn't result in landing a new job. The Michigan Association of CPAs explains that how much you benefit from such a deduction depends on your 1996 income and the amount of your job-related expenses.

Qualified job-hunting expenses include:

— Costs associated with preparing a resume,

— Placement of advertisements in newspapers and trade magazines,

— Fees paid to recruiters, career consultants, and employment agencies,

— Telephone calls made to prospective employers, and — Fees for legal or accounting advice related to employment contracts.

If you traveled out of town to interview for a job, you may be able to claim a deduction for transportation, lodging and 50 percent of meals and entertainment. Even if you linked business with pleasure by visiting an acquaintance while you were out of town, you may write off your travel expenses as long as the purpose of the trip was primarily to find a new job. If the trip was primarily personal in nature, however, only the actual expenses of the job search are deductible.

These costs are deductible only if you are pursuing a job in the same trade or business. For example, if you are a salesperson looking for a managerial position in sales, you may be able to claim a deduction for job-related expenses. However, if you want to make a move from sales to, for example, personnel work, you would be denied a deduction. If you were unemployed when looking for a job, the kind of work you did for your previous employer is considered your occupation.

Those looking for their first job, such as college graduates, cannot deduct job-related expenses. Nor can people returning to work after a long period of unemployment.

Job-hunting expenses are considered miscellaneous itemized expenses. That means they're grouped with other miscellaneous expenses, such as investment-related expenses and fees paid for tax planning advice or tax return preparation. After you total your miscellaneous expenses, you can claim a deduction for those that exceeds 2 percent of your Adjusted Gross Income.

Here's an example, suppose you incurred $2,000 of qualified job-hunting expenses in 1996 and had other miscellaneous expenses equaling $3,000. If your adjusted gross income was $40,000, you may claim a deduction for the amount above $800, or $4,200.

However, there is a limitation for higher-income taxpayers. If your 1996 adjusted gross income exceeds $117,950 (or $58,975 if married filing separately), itemized deductions must be reduced by 3 percent of the income in excess of this threshold.

As with all other deductions you claim on your 1996 tax return, be sure you have the documentation to support them.

Keep receipts, canceled checks and credit card slips showing amounts paid for job search expenses and resume printing. Also, it's wise to have a log that details job-related meetings, including the time and place of the meeting.

CPAs say you'll also need a record of automobile mileage and a log allocating the time spent while traveling on personal activities versus time spent looking for a job.

Math, science night scheduled for families

SEE-North, a regional center for science, mathematics and environmental education, is having a Family Math and Science Night on from 6:30-8:30 p.m. Tuesday, April 8. Adults and children can learn together as they explore ideas, solve problems and do hands-on experiments with pendulums, roller coasters, electricity and the human eye. The activities are geared for third- through sixth-grade students and their parents.

Family Math and Science Night will be held at SEE-North's headquarters at the Mort Neff Outdoor Education Center at Camp Daggett. Admission is $4 per person. Advance registration is required because space is limited. Refreshments will be served and prizes will be given away.

SEE-North serves residents, students and teachers in 13 counties of the northern Lower Peninsula. Family Math and Science Night is one of many events conducted by the non-profit organization.

For more information or to register, call SEE-North at 348-9700.

Empty fields

Little League draws closer to its first pitch of the season

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Spring is in bloom, and soon Charlevoix ball fields will be bustling with play.

Little League baseball begins play during the first week of May, with registration continuing until Saturday, April 12.

"All a kid needs is a glove and a desire to play."
— Karen Bakker, parent organizer

Charlevoix's Little League again will be divided into two leagues, the minors and the majors. The minor league, ages 8-9, will field four teams playing once a week, while the major leagues, ages 10-12, will field four teams playing a couple times a week.

In summertime, a league consisting of high schoolers is formed.

Before recreation leagues began forming in a variety of sports, there was always Little League. It has endured the times, and every spring children's hopes and dreams are manifested on the baseball diamond.

"All a kid needs is a glove and a desire to play," said parent organizer, Karen Bakker.

The season will run like it has in most years, but Bakker said the continuation of an experiment done last spring in the minor league will continue.

Because of their youth and undeveloped arms, minor league pitching is done by a pitching machine. It always throws strikes, and batters would have up to four chances to make contact in fair play.

However, last spring they allowed the final inning to be pitched by one of the players.

"It made for some longer games," Bakker joked. It was, though, well received and will continue this spring. Major league pitching is always done by the players.

Bakker said anyone still interested in registering can do so through her. It costs $30 per player, but costs can be offset, Bakker said, by selling candy. Registration will continue through Saturday, April 12.

Bakker said the leagues could use more volunteers to umpire, help run concessions, maintain the field, or sponsor a team.

"They're the ones," she said of sponsors, "who if we were without, we'd have a much tougher time financially."

Sponsor money goes to helping the league as a whole register within the parameters of a national Little League, hats for Charlevoix teams, and various equipment.

In the coming weeks, ball fields on Grant Street will be drying. Little League can't begin until home plate can be found.

Fishing licenses, regulations change

Fishing licenses are needed and regulations went into effect Tuesday, the Department of Natural Resources reported.

"Conservation officers will be checking for valid licenses," said Herb Burns, chief of the law enforcement division.

"It's spring in Michigan, and it's time to go fishing," said John Robertson, chief of fisheries division. "I've bought my 1997 license, and I'm ready for another exciting year of fishing in Michigan."

Fishing license fees and structure have changed, as a part of the new hunting and fishing license package passed by the Legislature last year. These are some of the changes specific to fishing:

— Stamps are no longer used. Anglers now purchase either restricted licenses, which are valid for all species except trout and salmon, or all-species licenses. A restricted license for anglers ages 17- to 64-years-old costs $26.

— Senior fishing licenses cost $5.20 for restricted and $10.40 for an all-species licenses. There is also a $3 senor daily fishing license. As a part of this package, the free senior spouse fishing license has been eliminated.

— A voluntary $2 young angler all-species fishing license is available for anglers 12- to 16-years-old, with all proceeds going to the DNR's Youth Education and Outreach Fund. Purchase includes a colorful patch available only to licenses young anglers.

— The previous sportsperson's license has been replaced with the option of purchasing any four fishing and hunting licenses at one time, with the exception of waterfowl and 24-hour licenses, at a 15 percent discount. This discount is applied in addition to already reduced costs for seniors and juniors.

Significant fishing regulation changes are numerous and are listed in the 1997 Fishing Guide.

For more information, contact the DNR Fisheries Division at (517) 373-0908, call the fishing hotline at (800) ASK-FISH, or access the DNR Internet website at www.dnr.state.mi.us and click on fisheries division.

Big Rock Point grants nearly $13,000 to area nonprofits

The Consumers Energy Foundation and Big Rock Point nuclear plant have approved contributions totaling $12,900 to six local organizations.

The foundation approved a $10,000 grant for North Central Michigan College's Partners in Progress campaign. The campaign was initiated to raise money to build a student and community resource center.

Big Rock Point general manager Ken Powers said support of the campaign took on additional significance as Big Rock Point nears the end of its operating license.

"Many of our employees are preparing for life after Big Rock Point by returning to school to study new professions, brush up on dormant skills, or to pursue advanced degrees," Powers said. "While our employees have historically taken advantage of the educational opportunities offered at North Central Michigan College, the success of the college is even more important to us as we prepare to close the plant."

The foundation also approved grants totaling $650 on behalf of two Big Rock Point employees. The grants were allocated through the foundation's Volunteer Investment Program.

Charlevoix-based Troop 6 of the Boy Scouts of America will receive $400 in the name of nuclear control operator Gary Ruehle. Ruehle spends more than 300 hours a year assisting the troop's scoutmaster with camping trips and other outings. The grant will be used to support future trips and to purchase supplies and equipment.

The Harbor Springs Baseball Commission will receive a grant of $250 in the name of senior engineer Jacob Toskey. The money will be used to purchase new equipment. Toskey serves the organization as an umpire and coach of two teams.

Volunteer program grants are awarded to recognize employees who give their time and talent to non-profit organizations and to encourage greater levels of volunteerism by employees.

The foundation is the philanthropic arm of Consumers Energy. In 1997, the foundation will make about $1.5 million in charitable investments throughout Michigan.

In addition to the foundation grants, the Big Rock Point Community Partnership Team approved three grants from the plant's budget totaling $2,750.

A $1,000 grant was approved to help sponsor the annual Sue DeYoung Memorial Walk. The walk is held under the auspices of the American Cancer Society and raises funds for breast cancer research. The walk is scheduled for Saturday, May 17, in Charlevoix.

A grant of $750 was awarded to help support the Charlevoix Senior Center.

The local Math Counts program received a grant of $500. Several Big Rock Point engineers help organize the annual event that is held to encourage math proficiency in students. The money was used to support the recent local competition and to purchase prizes for the participants.

The plant donated $1,000 to help sponsor the walk.

School board candidate added

Michael MacMillan officially has entered his name into the pot of school board candidates.

MacMillan will be vying for the one-year term left to fill out the tenure of Sulane Hamilton, who resigned in March.

Mark Alan "Barney" Way and K. Scot Boss have already entered the race for the two four-year terms that will be open at the polls.

Election day is Monday, June 9.

Potholes cost money: Few taxpayers reimbursed by state

In Wayne County alone, road crews fill approximately 200,000 potholes per year. At an average depth of four inches, stacked one on top of the other, that's two Mt. Everests or 45 Empire State Buildings.

Those four inches can cause significant damage to your car, with most pothole claims reported in late winter and early spring. AAA Michigan typically receives between 10,000 and 15,000 pothole claims annually. This winter, pothole claims are increasing from prior years.

Potholes cost the average American more than $100 per year in vehicle repairs for new shock absorbers, blown tires, wasted gas, body work and even broken windshields, said Jerry Basch, AAA Michigan Community Safety Services Manager. And with today's sophisticated technology, pothole vehicle damage can cost several thousand dollars to repair.

How can motorists avoid these expensive repairs?

"Keep your eye on the road, " Basch said. "If contact with a pothole seems imminent, slow down and try to steer around it without endangering traffic in adjacent lanes."

Preventive maintenance can also lessen jarring effects of an unwanted encounter of the pothole kind.

"Be sure to take your car in for a check-up if steering, ride, tire or noise problems appear," Basch said. "Keep your tires properly inflated and steering and suspension components in good condition. Especially critical are the shock absorbers or struts, which prevent excessive rebound or bottoming out on severe bumps."

Potholes are created when snow or rain seeps into cracks on the road surface. The moisture freezes during cold weather, causing the ground and pavement to expand upward. When temperatures rise, a cavity is created as the soil returns to its normal level.

Heavy traffic causes the pavement to crack and fall into the cavity beneath, creating a pothole. Due to weather conditions and roads in need of repair, potholes appear to be "blooming" more this season than in past years.

Cross carriers

Charlevoix pastors and parishioners carry a cross up State Street Friday to symbolize the cross that Jesus Christ carried to his crucifixion nearly 2,000 years ago. The community gathered for a Good Friday service at the United Methodist Church after the cross was set up in the sanctuary.

Hollanders adapt after migration to northern area

By Nancy Ritsema
Courier columnist

Dutch settlers, known as Hollanders, arrived from across the Atlantic Ocean to organize a small struggling colony in southwestern Michigan 150 years ago. The colony would become Holland, Mich.

The Hollanders, at that time, were escaping economic distress and religious persecution in the Netherlands. They brought with them to Michigan their Dutch customs, an almost Puritan-like religion, and hope for a better life and educational opportunities for their children. The Hollanders continued to arrive at the Dutch communities around Holland such as Borcula, Zeeland and Graafscap, and eventually made their way to northern Michigan.

Most Dutch immigrants were poor. Many sold all they owned in the Netherlands, in order to book passage to America. Old-timers remember stories about their Dutch fathers and grandfathers coming from the Netherlands to Michigan's vast forests. They had no experience in clearing the land of trees. The inexperienced Dutchmen girdled trees with an axe and ineptly chopped around them until they finally crashed to the ground. Experienced American woodsmen taught the immigrants how to notch tree trunks on one side, and to cut them down so that they fell exactly where the woodsmen wanted them.

Twenty-five-year-old Hemke Elzinga, my great-grandfather, and his 24-year-old bride Jantje, my great-grandmother, immigrated to the Holland, Mich., area in 1869. After homesteading a small farm there and raising 10 children, Hemke and Jantje, and their unmarried children, purchased Atwood pioneer Richard Knight's farm and moved north to Atwood, near Norwood, in 1898. Hemke acquired 350 acres of land in all.

Jobs had been scarce in the Holland area, and northern Michigan offered cheap land for families and job opportunities, as well as Dutch neighbors in the Atwood and Ellsworth areas.

Hemke and his sons farmed the land and even tried unsuccessfully to turn a cedar swamp on their property into a muck field for growing celery as the farmers around Holland had done. What had worked in southwestern Michigan didn't work in the cedar swamps of the north.

This chinked log home, originally built on Hemke Elzinga's farm in Atwood, was torn down, re-erected, and restored. It stands today just off U.S. 31 beside an antique mall north of Traverse City.

Dutch immigrant settlers in northern Michigan stuck together. They shared a common language and religious practices and built their own churches with preaching spoken in Dutch. The Bay View Methodist congregation near Eastport, which met in a log school house, discontinued preaching services and Sunday school in the late 1800's. Declining attendance at their Methodist services occurred after a large number of Dutch families moved into the Atwood area and built their own Dutch churches.

Different ethnic groups in northern Michigan, as elsewhere, often viewed each other with suspicion or distrust and even ridiculed each other's customs. Dutch boys and girls were taunted by a few for their broken English and foreign ways, or were chased home from school with jeers of "Wooden shoes! Wooden shoes!" Dutch farm families wore hand-carved wooden "klompens," or shoes, in the barn for milking and other chores. Some Dutch parents tried to keep their sons and daughters from marrying northern Michigan "Americans," whom they thoroughly distrusted!

Jantje Elzinga, my great-grandmother, brought her midwifery skills as a young bride with her from the "old country" to America. During the 42 years Jantje lived and raised her 10 children in Michigan she was a local midwife. She assisted in births of more than 100 infants.

Jantje's midwifery lore in the late 1800s included procedures taken from her Dutch traditions. Shortly after birth, a very small amount of cool strong coffee was given to the newborn as a stimulant and to help clear the baby's throat passage. After the umbilical cord was tied, a plump cooked and cooled raisin was placed on the navel and bound in place with a narrow cloth that circled the newborn's abdomen. The raisin and cloth were changed daily. This continued until the umbilical cord was ready to drop off.

Today, Dutch families still reside in northern Michigan. Midwifery is again popular among women for assistance during childbirth, but medical knowledge has replaced folk lore in caring for the newborn. The wooden "klompens" and Dutch accents have disappeared.

Hemke Elzinga's farm on U.S. 31 in Atwood remains in the Elzinga family, nearly a century later. It is the site of John and Phyllis Elzinga's apple orchard and the locally popular Elzinga Farm Market.

Dutch farmer Hendrik Wassenaar homesteaded a farm near Atwood in 1887. He has on wooden klompen shoes as he carries pails of fresh milk from the barn to his house.

Applications for summer health care volunteers being accepted

The Northern Michigan Hospital Auxiliary is accepting applications for its summer Volunteen Program. The program gives teens 14 to 17 years old the chance to learn about health career opportunities while providing help to patients, families and hospital staff.

Twenty-five teens will be accepted into this year's program. Participants will be selected in May.

Following are the requirements for participation in the program:

— Send a letter of recommendation from a teacher, advisor or employer.

— Send proof of a 3.2 or higher grade point average.

— Attend a required meeting with a parent or guardian from 7-8 p.m. Monday, June 9, 1997, in the Gamble Auditorium at the hospital.

— Attend a three-day orientation from 8-4 p.m., Mondays-Wednesdays, June 16-18, or June 30-July 2.

— Volunteer at least eight hours between 7 a.m. - 9 p.m., each week during June, July and August. This requirement may be fulfilled in four hour segments. Volunteering more hours is possible and encouraged.

— Receive free TB skin test, immunization and health assessment and Hepatitis B vaccine if working in patient care areas.

— Wear the designated uniform and name tag while volunteering.

Teens interested in becoming a volunteen should send proof of grade point average and their letter of recommendation to: Northern Michigan Hospital Auxiliary, attn: Ruth O'Gawa, Volunteer Manager, 416 Connable Avenue, Petoskey, MI 49770. Questions about the program should be directed to Ruth O'Gawa at 348-4568.

Marathon runner raises money in honor of friend with leukemia

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

When Rolly Scheels began running, his body ached with pain. His lungs, accustomed to the smoke of two packs of cigarettes a day, heaved. His muscles screamed to stop at four-tenths of a mile.

Six years later, Scheels has jogged his way beyond initial discomfort and is preparing for his first marathon — a race that will raise money for leukemia in honor of a long-time friend who's about to face a bone marrow transplant.

"He's my honored person," Scheels said of Arnie Silva, a preventative maintenance worker and fellow employee at Big Rock Point nuclear power plant.

The 48-year-old runner is extending the miles covered in his workouts in preparation for the June race in Alaska. As he does so, his thoughts often turn toward Arnie, who is off work to gain strength to endure the transplanting of his own regrown bone marrow.

Arnie is moved by Scheels commitment to his cause. Since being diagnosed with acute leukemia last November, he knows the far-reaching effects of cancer. He was told of the disease's hold on him after going to the doctor for a cold. While there, he happened to mention a leg cramp that had persisted for two days. The news of the disease was a huge surprise — for Arnie and his coworkers. And as it progressed rapidly, realization took hold.

"It's closer to home having someone you know with the disease," Scheels said.

While in Grand Rapids for a weekend race, Big Rock Point's outage scheduler saw a booth for the Leukemia Society of America. A name that once would have been ignored drew his attention. Arnie had leukemia.

Scheels' 26.2-mile run is raising $3,800 for the leukemia society. Arnie said that although the bone marrow transplant should cure him, he may need the research that will be funded by the sponsors who are backing Scheels.

"They hope to find a cure by 2000," Arnie said, noting that the money raised will not only indirectly help him, but all the people he's met with the disease since having to undergo chemotherapy and hospital stays. "The race is for everybody."

"Maybe it will make a difference somewhere down the line," Scheels said.

The leukemia society is providing Scheels with a trainer to help him prepare for the marathon. Through their agreement, Scheels is committed to raising the money, 50 percent of which will go to the national organization (which includes research), 13 percent to pa-

School will ask voters to approve land purchase

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Worried over what messages they may be sending, the Charlevoix Board of Education approved putting on the ballot a sinking fund to purchase the M-66 land.

The fund, to appear on the Monday, June 9, ballot, will ask taxpayers to pay 0.5 mills over one year to cover the 117 acre's price tag of $170,00 as well as additional realtor costs.

The board's collective message, though, was mixed as the election measure squeezed by with a 4-3 vote. Board members Allen Telgenhof, Larry Levengood, Ardeth Wieland, and Pat McKeown, Jr., voted for the measure with Mary Lee Campbell, Joan Buday, and Jerry Owens dissented.

The dissenters, backed by superintendent Roberta Jackson, had hoped the land could be purchased directly out of the district's general fund.

"We should buy this while we have it," Owens said. "It's a good price and a nice piece of property."

Telgenhof, however, labeled extracting the money from general funds "backward."

"It's not our money, it's the community's," he said.

Telgenhof also noted a 180 degree turn to consider spending that

City wants flower shop remains removed soon

By Janenne Irene Harrington
Courier editor

The charred remains of Expressions Unlimited are about to disappear. The building has been released from the investigation of the Feb. 11 fire. And the city is seeking immediate removal of the remains.

Flower shop owner, Ron Taepke, is being notified that the building must be demolished.

"We're going to be working on it as soon as possible," said city manager Mike Wiesner.

The notice could give Taepke five to seven days to remove the structure, which is now spread throughout the yard.

"You give people 30 days to mow their lawn," said city councilman, Bruce Reid, at Monday's meeting.

City planner, Gerry Harsch, said that the building has become a serious health and safety concern.

Charlevoix Zoning Administrator, Kathy Staton, said Tuesday that removal of the building will be handled like any other violation of the blight ordinance. She said she realizes that fires are sad situations for the owners and that there are insurance companies to deal with.

"We'll request that he start the cleanup in seven days and progress in a timely manner," she said.

Currently, city officials are not sure where to contact Taepke. Harsch said they are contacting a local person who has represented him since the fire. He was scheduled for a trip out of the country shortly after the fire occurred.

"We're looking for immediate action," Harsch said. "If youngsters get in there, it's an unsafe situation. It's unsightly."

The city police department reported that children have been seen playing in the rubble of the floral shop, which was topped by Taepke's apartment.

The investigation as to what caused the early morning blaze is not over. However, the Charlevoix Police Department has collected all the evidence found at the scene.

Spring brings people out of winter slumber

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

"Sun, sun, sun here it comes."

Those words penned by Beatle George Harrison were undoubtedly sung, whistled, or hummed by many Charlevoixians as they ventured south for their spring break pilgrimage.

However, those left behind may have sung the words loudest.

Throughout the week, the town bustled with activity. During spring break's soaring temperatures, everyone practiced for summer. Bridge park was filled with frisbee tossers, hacky-sackers, and loafers catching long forgotten rays.

"People are anxious to get out in the warm weather," said Mary Eveleigh of Compulsive Cravings.

The store had a busy week, she said, as hungry wanderers have come in looking for picnic sandwiches or at least snacks to take outside.

"There is definitely a crowd around," she said. "The warm weather is really bringing them all out."

Elinor Thompson of Points North Hotel said the rooms were not filled to the max, but the hotel did reach 70 percent capacity for the week. She noticed that some people were spending their spring break in Charlevoix. Some people from Beaver Island stayed in town for a couple of days before heading elsewhere while others were corporate people towing along their families with a business trip conveniently wrapped around spring break.

Dairy Queen couldn't have picked a better time to open for the season. While usually busy through any weather during their reopening, Pat Hayden said it felt a little more hectic than usual.

Events in brief

Cub Scouts hold flag disposal ceremony

The Charlevoix Cub Scouts Pack 11 is conducting a Flag Disposal Ceremony at their 7 p.m. Monday, May 19, Pack Meeting. This ceremony is for those flags that are no longer serviceable to individuals or businesses in our community.

If any individual or business has a flag that needs to be disposed of, you can bring it to the pack meeting or call 547-6862 to arrange for pick-up.

The community is invited to attend the pack meeting at the elementary school.

Annual dinner raises money for Legion post

The American Legion, Leslie T. Shapton Post #226 and its auxiliary will host their annual spring salad and casserole dinner on Tuesday, April 15th, at the American Legion Hall, 106 E. Garfield.

The "all-you-can-eat" dinner will be served from 4:30-6:30 p.m. Cost is $5 for adults, $3 for children 5 to 10 years old, and free for children under 5.

The dinner will feature ham, chicken, Polish sausage with sauerkraut, tuna, hot and cold vegetable casseroles, varieties of potatoes, beans, gelatin salads and all types of other vegetables, salads, relishes and desserts. All post and auxiliary members will be contacted for their food donations.

Proceeds from the annual spring dinner will assist with necessary repairs and remodeling of the American Legion Hall.

Auxiliary president Katie Curtis, 547-6943, and vice president Rosalyn Goldstick, 547-2636, will chair the dinner.

Planners discuss zoning changes

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

City planners may be revising commercial zoning ordinances in hopes off stopping strip mall like development as seen with the flat non-descript roof of the laudromat and Carl's bakery (above). Bridge street businesses could be asked to look more like a residence like Passageway Carlson Travel (below).

City planners are looking into tinkering with commercial zoning ordinances in an attempt to have, in city planner Gerry Harsch's words, "buildings that develop more of a traditional, residential character rather than the look of a strip mall."

In a written proposal to the city planners, Harsch targeted two areas that he feels are threatened by a strip mall invasion — east of Bridge Street, between Clinton and Belvedere, and west off of Bridge Street from Clinton to Hurlbut.

His concern stems from the departure of the car wash on the corner of State and Hurlbut, as well as the tire outlet on Bridge Street across from the Dairy Queen. The areas are zoned commercial and Harsch said he fears that more buildings with the flat-roofed look — similar to the building where the laundromat and Carl's Bakery are located — and parking lots to the street curb will begin to take over unless some fine-tuning of the city's commercial ordinance takes place.

"We need to maintain the character of the streetscape," Harsch said.

Some of Harsch's recommendations include a 15-20 foot front yard setback, similar to those found in residential zoning, requiring buildings to have a resident appearance with pitched roofs, and allowing parking only to the side and rear of the buildings.

"One of the ways to encourage people to walk around, is to have buildings to walk by, not parking lots," Harsch said of Charlevoix's foot traffic.

Harsch said that the tweaking of the ordinances has not gone beyond basic discussion. With the Bridge Park renovation still on the top of everyone's list, and new members of the commission still feeling their way around the job, Harsch said he guessed that serious discussion on the subject could wait until May. He did say, however, that he believes city planners will be receptive to the initiative.

"The visual character of Charlevoix is a very high community priority," he said.

The planners next meet at 5:30 p.m. Monday, April 14, in city council chambers.

Jail will expand before joining regional plan

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

Representatives from Charlevoix, Emmet, Cheboygan, and Otsego counties have been meeting periodically to discuss creating of a regional jail. But the two factors that may warrant its construction — overcrowding and inability to expand — are not present in Charlevoix.

"We are consistently filled to capacity, but there is always room at the inn," Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater said.

The jail at the sheriff's office has 25 block cells, a juvenile holding cell, and a drunk tank.

Lasater said typically the jail holds 20-35 prisoners a night with stays running the gamut from just a few hours of sobering up to more permanent stays that last up to a year.

At times, prisoners double up in a cell, so someone has to bed down on a mattress on the floor, but Lasater feels that comes with the territory.

"I served my country, and slept in worst places," he said. "If they have to sleep overnight on the floor, I can't get too excited about that."

Any signs that the jail is overcrowded may result from the county accepting prisoners from other counties where the jails are full.

Lasater said that recently two prisoners from Emmet County stayed with them, and now three inmates are there from Cheboygan County.

The county charges $38 a night to keep prisoners from other counties.

While appearing to not be interested in a regional jail, the county is planning to expand its jail, something other area counties can't do because of a lack of building space.

"As a county we have room to grow," Charlevoix County Commissioner Phil Johnson said.

Lasater said a plan is being conceived which would expand the jail out into the backyard. The project could begin in the next two or three years.

"Whoever was on the county board of commissioners in the 70s should be complimented," he said. "They had more land then they needed, but they were thinking ahead."

The sheriff's building was established at its Grant Street address in 1971.

The possibility of Charlevoix expanding on its present site hasn't

School board waits on layoffs

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

"In reference to agenda item 2A, new business," lead off numerous public comments at the onset of Monday evening's school board meeting.

The item was the lay-off of one elementary school teacher, Krista Martin.

Teachers packed the meeting to voice their disapproval of the lay-off. Martin was hired as a second-grade teacher to help get second grade classrooms down to a 1:20 teacher-student ratio. Her hiring ended weeks of frustration as how to solve the problem, and with the first-grade class as large as this year's second-grade, teachers were concerned that a problem solved now would again be an open wound.

Sue Tillotson said Martin brought a relief to the crowding and the problem will be permanently solved with a permanent hire.

"It's a shame Krista Martin can't be that teacher," she said.

"She's one of the better teachers we've had in a long time," Chris Bentley said. "You don't find ones like her very often."

Parents showed their support for Martin as well.

Laurie Foster said many parents would have requested Martin as a teacher. Sue Goss called her a "nice person for little girls to look up to," and that by laying her off the board would no longer be making any headway in solving the K-5 overcrowding problem.

The board apparently agreed with the testimonials, ignoring the resolution before them, creating a type of parliamentary pocket veto.

Scott Mays pressed the board as to what not voting on the issue really does.

"I read it as the board is not

OPINIONS

Charlevoix should welcome more industrial acreage

EDITORIAL

Charlevoix needs to continue to develop its economic base beyond tourism. Summer residents and visitors are crucial to the community's livelihood, but we cannot rely on seasonal dollars for survival or certainly not for growth.

A city subcommittee is searching for land on which to expand the city's industrial park. We applaud its vision for Charlevoix's future, and encourage the members not to abandon their foresight amid negative pressure.

The city is far from becoming an industrial giant. Seeing cities that have horizons dotted with smokestacks should not frighten our elected officials away from pursuing a solid, economic future for their constituents.

Seasonal jobs are important because they offer employment to the additional people who come into town during the summer. They expand businesses to accommodate the crowd of shoppers who need timely, courteous attention. But they do not help the working parent who needs a steady paycheck throughout the year.

Tourism and industry are Charlevoix's main businesses. Hand-in-hand they make the community a vibrant place to live — year round or for the warmest months.

According to figures released monthly by the Michigan Employment Security Commission, the amount of manufacturing in town and in the county stabilizes unemployment during the off-season. Emmet County experiences higher unemployment for its extra reliance on tourism.

Additional acreage to welcome industry to town means open arms to jobs and an enlarged tax base.

The jobs offered at most of the businesses built on the current industrial park's 22 acres pay more than minimum wage and offer flexible schedules. Many of them welcome high school graduates who are either not ready or not interested in attending college.

All the lots at the park are now sold. There is nowhere left to expand. The city has made the most of the property by applying for a grant to move the storm water retention pond and sell the lot on which it sat. It's time for more land. And we hope that the new park will be developed as tactfully as the one between Mercer Boulevard and Martin Road.

Charlevoix has one of the most impressive industrial parks that we know of. Most of the buildings are sheltered within the woods, making it a welcome neighbor to north side homes and businesses. Many people not affiliated with local government don't know that area is even called an industrial park.

Rather than continue to watch Charlevoix fold up in the winter, looking more like Harbor Springs each year, the industrial development committee is right to be pursuing more land for more business.

There are industry owners out there who are willing to pay additional shipping costs for parts and their products to live in northern Michigan. We need to offer them an abode rather than turn our noses up in igno-

Letters to the editor

School board not acting in haste on land issue

Editor:

In response to your recent editorial cautioning the Charlevoix Board of Education to "slow down," I have few comments:

The Board of Education and the citizens have been talking about the need for land for schools and for a long range facilities plan for 25 years. We have been working on this facilities project for six years and have been looking for land for two years.

My proposed plan of a sinking fund for major repairs, a new middle school soon and a new high school in 10 to 15 years is a proposal to be completed over 15 to 20 years.

Whether the land on M-66 is utilized now for a new middle school or down the road for a new high school, it is a good value. This land will meet the needs of the school district and our children well into the future.

Sincerely,
Roberta A. Jackson
Superintendent of Schools

Boy Scout leaders should be thanked, not degraded

Editor:

I would like to address the editorial on scouting values in Charlevoix printed two weeks ago.

As an immediate family member of two Boy Scouts and a former Girl Scout, I see that editorial as many community members do — degrading.

The Boy Scouts, including leaders, try to make Charlevoix scouting the best that they can. They should be commended on putting in the time and energy to make these young boys future leaders, not publicly humiliated. I applaud all of their efforts and the problems that they have had to deal with.

I am proud to be related to the young scout that helped an elderly lady across the ice, and I am proud of his leaders for helping to instill those values. Scouting will not get any better in Charlevoix when unresearched articles are written about past occurrences.

Opinions in editorials should be based and written on facts and not hearsay.

Instead of humiliating the boys and leaders of Boy Scouts, why not publish the real stories about the good things that they have done?

It would save everyone a big headache and help provide Charlevoix with a better name in scouting.

Sincerely,
Miranda J. Barrett

EDITH GILBERT

At this time of the year, returning snowbirds always ask me "what's new?" Well, by golly, there's a lot to tell.

A new restaurant named Charly's, (pronounced Sharly's in honor of Charlevoix, get it?) is opening soon at the Edgewater Inn. Tim and Helen Coon, along with Chef Paul Carter are the new owners. Tim is a retired Ford executive, and will be in charge of finances. His wife, Helen, who was born in Malaysia, ran a fine restaurant for 24 years in Australia. Paul graduated from the well-known Schoolcraft Culinary program downstate, and shyly admits to being the master of purees.

I was lucky to be invited to a preview of the glories to come of Asian/French cuisine. How does a clear-as-glass chicken soup, with tiny bits of white chicken, pasta, and vegetables, gently floating about like ice floes, appeal to you for starters? Then I was served a Malaysian sweet and sour white fish, accompanied with fried rice and finely cut Chinese cabbage, green onions, eggs, flavored with soy sauce. Mmmmh!

For those who care about these things, they will also be relieved to note the sensible portion control for the entire meal. A proper amount was nicely served on the correct size plate, so that the food looked appetizing and not overwhelming, falling off the plate, lumber camp style.

I don't even remember eating the dessert — it just floated away. Paul prepared a fleurette of puff paste, filled with Chantilly cream, resting on a dribbling of fresh caramel sauce, dotted with fresh raspberries.

You'll be pleased to hear that Charly's will be open year 'round six days a week for lunch and dinner. Its summer menus will range from authentic curry dishes to Mexican winter specials, including an outstanding meat loaf with mashed potatoes. I can hardly wait.

A stone's throw away from Charly's, great new plans are afoot and could start any day now at the Lodge. Owner, Jack Uhrick, tells me he is bowing to popular requests and installing an outdoor, heated, 24- by 24-foot, swimming pool in the middle of the courtyard. It will be surrounded by a 3-foot apron of cement, trimmed with brick, and a wrought iron 4-foot fence. A patio for lawn chairs will be added at one end of the pool. Fortunately, the large umbrella birch trees will remain. The pool will be open six months of the year to guests of the Lodge.

Restaurateur extraordinaire, Stafford Smith, also shared some exciting news with me. He has imported a glass conservatory from England, which is arriving momentarily, to be placed outdoors at the Perry Hotel, facing Little Traverse Bay. Called the Rose Garden Verandah, it will be surrounded by an English flower garden. Maureen Parker is the landscape designer. The verandah will accommodate 125 people for lunch, or afternoon ice cream coffee breaks. It will also be available for special events, such as weddings. Open from June through October, everyone will stay toasty warm since infrared heaters will be provided.

The Rose Garden Verandah will be furnished with Woodward patio furniture, stone table tops and linen napkins. A small croquet court will be available to languid guests. Hand me my parasol.

Finally, Traverse Magazine has featured Trimper's Stonehedge gardens near Ironton, not only on the cover, but with four glorious color pages inside the magazine. Don Trimper, a retired physician, has devoted seven years to create this little rustic paradise. His wife, Marcia, devotes herself exclusively to the charming antique shop on the premises. It's worth a trip to see it for yourself this summer.

In addition to bringing out the crocuses, warmer temperatures tend to bring out many of the scam artists who prey on unsuspecting and trusting homeowners.

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department is warning homeowners to be on the look out for unsolicited visits by contractors, particularly those who say they just happened to be driving by and noticed that the roof, driveway, windows, or whatever, needed work.

Citizens are cautioned to avoid entering into agreements with contractors who contact them in this manner. There are many situations where trusting individuals

Fund-raiser collects cash for annual Trout Tournament

The Charlevoix Area Trout Tournament turns 13 this year. For Charlevoix, it's a lucky number.

The Trout Tournament originally started in 1985 as a way to improve area fishing and bring business into town.

Each year participation increases. About 393 fisherman attended the first year, a number that jumped to 883 in 1995. Although the actual tournament isn't until June, the event kicks off at the annual, pretournament dinner held Saturday, May 3. The occasion benefits the organization by raising money to hold the tournament. The night is filled with gifts that are donated by local merchants, and the menu includes prime rib and chicken.

While mingling with other potential and most likely experienced fisherman, the participants can talk about gassing up their boats and polishing their lures for the big dates, Friday-Sunday, June 13-15. What better way could dad spend Father's Day weekend than landing the big one? The date change will accommodate graduation obligations.

Include your whole family. After all, last year's Brown Trout winner was a young girl by the name of Corey Mills whose fish weighed in at 10.96 pounds. Susan Root proved lady luck reins in the lake trout category weighing in at 11.92 pounds.

Everyone's participation in the tournament is encouraged. Fees include, $5 for children, and

Repair workers get away with downpayment

have given sizahle down payments for repair work to the nice young man who came to the door, never to hear from him, or see their money again. In cases where work has heen done, it may not have been done completely or correctly. Usually, attempts made to contact the person responsible prove fruitless. More than likely they have moved on to find another neighhorhood ripe for the picking.

The sheriff's department recommends that citizens do the following before agreeing to have work done on their homes:

— Always deal with a licensed contractor and ask for proof of licensing status,

— Get references of those you are considering to do the work,

— Get written estimates and he wary of "special low prices,"

— Get a written contract and have an attorney review it, especially if a large amount of money is involved,

— Never pay for the entire job in advance, and — Never pay cash.

Sheriff Lasater also reminds residents that they have a right to cancel an agreement within three days of signing any contract solicited and signed in their home. The agreement is canceled by sending the contractor a registered letter stating the desire to cancel.

If problems with a contractor arise, residents should try to resolve the matter before making final payment, contact the local building inspector on questions of workmanship and code violations, consider going to small claims court on matters involving less then $1,500 and if fraud is suspected, file a criminal complaint with the local police or sheriff's department. In some instances the assistance of an attorney may be needed. Seniors 60 years and older can contact the local Area Agency on Aging for the telephone number of the legal services program that provides legal services to the elderly.

One other note of caution. People who attend the local home builders' show and enter one of the many prize drawings offered should realize that by entering, their name could be put on a mailing or call list. These lists are used by the company offering the prize to generate leads for other companies to mail and call people at home. For more information, call the sheriff's department at 547-4461.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

Sometimes the wonders of modern technology just amaze me. For instance, fingers meet the keyboard on the shore of Lester Lake. If you visited with me last week, then you know it's where our family went for a spring break getaway. It's 6:30 in the evening. After a rather gloomy start, the sun came out late in the afternoon, and I'm sitting here with you watching a glorious evening unfold.

Have you ever watched a pair of geese sail across a glassy pond and suddenly start talking to each other. In perfect harmony, they pick up speed and lift off the water. They bank right over my head, and the poet in me cannot help but believe they sing the praises of their maker as they climb up and away.

My son is standing on the end of a dock casting his line into the water. It seems like he has grown a foot since we last took time like this. He's strong and he's thoughtful. His grin touches my heart. There won't be any fish tonight. But then again, sometimes you catch more in other ways than by the kind of bait that sits on the end of your hook.

A splash! "Dad, did you see that?" It looked like an otter peeking up, wondering who it was that had invaded "his" territory. Hey, there are actually ripples that I can see from shore out there. You don't suppose the fish might be thinking about supper themselves?

You know that spring has come at home when the frogs start to sing across the road from us at night. Well, they certainly are singing here. Crickets, too. Oh no, would you believe it? A mosquito!

The sun is just barely above the treetops now. I hope I can catch a picture of it at just the right moment because this is a kind of evening you want to hold on to and relive now and then. Another David that I know and love wrote these words, "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof, the world and they who dwell therein; for he hath founded it upon the seas and established it upon the waters. Who may ascend the hill of the Lord? Who may stand in his holy place? He who has clean hands and a pure heart ..."

A train is coming down the tracks that run along the edge of the lake. It's whistle is like a reminder that this brief retreat is just about over and there are meetings, sermons, classes and all those wonderful things awaiting me back home. But for these few moments with the frogs and crickets for accompaniment, a fat robin scurrying by my picnic table with a worm dangling from its beak, and my son nearby, I know what David meant.

There'll probably be some more snow before winter reluctantly yields to spring.

There will probably be some days where the world will do its best to put the pressure on you and make you forget how blessed you really are. But the earth is the Lord's and that means you are the Lords, too. There are signs of his love surrounding you at all times if you'll only remember to stop, look, and listen.

The sun has set on Lester Lake for another day, and again that Psalm comes to mind "Lift up your heads, O you gates; lift them up, you ancient doors, that the King of glory may come in. Who is He, this King of glory? The Lord almighty - He is the king of glory!" You know, it feels good ... Blessings!

tient services, 12 percent to public health and education, 5 percent for professional education and 11 percent for community service projects.

As of last week, Scheels had raised just over $2,600, including $1,500 from the plant's foundation that makes it a corporate sponsor of the race.

Silva and Scheels are working together to get sponsors for the race. The support of his coworker is an example of the kind of strength Arnie has drawn during his struggle.

"Without support, I don't know how people get through something like this," he said. "I really appreciate and love Rolly for going out of his way to train and run the race."

Scheels is making is daily runs in and around Boyne City and Charlevoix. By June, he should have completed his first 20-mile run. It takes him about two hours to run 12 miles, the longest he has gone so far.

Scheels knows that the marathon won't be easy.

"I want to finish," he said. "My goal is to not stop until I cross the finish line."

Having reviewed the race path through the last frontier, Scheels has discovered that it goes off-road onto trails.

"The only way I'll stop is if I get eaten by bears or trampled by a moose," he said.

The race is Saturday, June 21. Sponsor's money must be turned in by Tuesday, June 10. To contribute, call Scheels at 582-0700.

that includes a free hat and lure. Adult registration is only $20.

Seventy cash prizes are awarded in four divisions: Brown Trout, Lake Trout, Steelhead and Salmon. Prizes are awarded each day for the largest fish. At the close of the tournament, a grand prize drawing is held with each entrant having a chance to win cash or merchandise, even if they did not catch the big one.

Dean Mikulski, a tournament director said, "This year should be one of our biggest." The Salmon catch was on an upswing, and directors expect an even better year.

Directors have voted unanimously to give back to the community which donates generously each year to make the tournament a growing success. New and improved ideas will be discussed at the dinner including making a donation to the local pool and providing a scholarship fund for seniors interested in the field of environment. Students who are enrolled at Charlevoix, Boyne City, or East Jordan High School are eligible.

Also new are junior directors. Matthew Mikulski, 17, has been initiated as the first junior director.

Charlevoixian gets electric award

Tom Hanna, of Charlevoix, the recently retired general manager of Top O' Michigan Electric Co., has received a state award for his contributions to rural electrification. Hanna received his Special Recognition Award from the Michigan Electric Cooperative Association at its annual meeting, March 4-5.

The award was given for Hanna's "invaluable service to and support of rural electrification through the Michigan Electric Cooperative Association, having served as chairman of the MECA Board of Directors, the Michigan Action Committee for Rural Electrification, and the MECA government relations committee, all of which benefited from his leadership and dedication," said Michael Peters, MECA executive vice president and general manager.

Hanna served Top O' Michigan's for 22 years, with the last 17 years as general manager.

MECA is the service organization for Michigan's electric cooperatives, which provide electricity to the homes and businesses of more than 600,000 people in rural area covering half of the state. Top O' Michigan Electric Co. serves more than 41,300 homes, farms and businesses in Emmet, Charlevoix, Antrim, Grand Traverse, Otsego, Kalkaska, Crawford, Montmorency, and Oscoda counties.

Rural electric co-ops have played a major role in the development of Michigan's rural areas. Since the formation of the Rural Electrification Administration (now called Rural Utilities Service) in 1935, nearly 1,000 rural electric co-ops nationwide, including 13 in Michigan, have been created to bring power to the countryside.

The cooperatives are owned by the consumers they serve.

Business in brief

New clothing line at Trademark Clothiers

Cross Creek Apparel has entered the retail market in Charlevoix. It is now available at Trademark Clothiers on Bridge Street.

Cross Creek is authentic golf apparel. It was launched in selected department stores back in the 70s, yet only recently has it risen in popularity," said John Meis, Cross Creek vice president of merchandising and sales. "Golf shirts are now being worn from the boardroom to the locker room."

Suggested retail prices range from $34-$45 for solid shirts, with more sophisticated patterns and designs sell for $58 and up.

Local people represent Farm Bureau in Lansing

Michelle LaButt, Rich Hand and Lynn Hand represented Charlevoix County among 200 participants in the Michigan Farm Bureau's annual young farmer leader's conference March 6-8 in Lansing.

The three-day event helped attendees develop their agribusiness leadership and management skills.

They took part in workshops covering topics such as agriculture education, legislative issues, congressional insight, farm management and marketing, and communication in the farm family.

"We're fortunate to have many talented young farmers in this state," said Ernie Birchmeier, manager of the young farmer department for Farm Bureau. "The conference gave them a chance to learn how they can successfully manage their farms and make a difference for agriculture."

Michigan Farm Bureau is the state's largest general farm organization with more than 150,000 member families.

Vote slips through board to ask voters for more land

kind of cash "on a night we're voting to lay off a teacher. Whatever the spin you put on it, the message is wrong."

Those words elicited a hefty applause from the teacher stacked crowd.

Levengood agreed with Telgenhof that a populist vote on the land was the right thing to do, and also said that a vote on the land would be a good indicator of what kind of future bond issue would pass.

Jackson, though, warned against simply using a land election as a opinion barometer and challenged the board to accompany the ballot proposal with a clear plan as to what voters can expect to see done on the site.

"A middle school now, or a high school down the road, or even a facility complex for sports," she said, "voters need to know the plan."

McKeown, whose vote broke the deadlock, said the land would be available even after the election, and the actual purchase of the land isn't as urgent as the need "to galvanize all support."

"There is a lot of ill will out there," he said, noting that paying for the land out of the general fund could feed the ill will and prevent a new school when the time comes for one.

The board signed an option on the land in December, which is good through June 30, 1998. They did cut a check for $4,500 for a down payment, which can be used toward the full payment if done by June 30, 1997. After that, only half of that down payment may be used toward the cost of the land. If the land is still unpaid for heading into 1998, none of the $4,500 can be used toward the payment.

Jackson said that the money bugeted for the land may go toward repairing the high school roof.

A second ballot measure was also passed Monday. Voters will be asked to pass a second sinking fund for one mill over six years to pay for major district repairs, including asbestos removal, arch repair and electrical rewiring.

Unlike the land proposal, this ballot measure was passed without dissent.

Expansion could begin in two years

doused the enthusiasm of Emmet County Commissioner Paul Lenahan who has been a spur for the regional jail concept.

He said that the concept of a regional jail is still simmering on the burner, but it may be a decade away from coming to fruition.

"Everybody needs to look at what they can do practically at each location," he said.

For example, Emmet County is putting the finishing touches on a $1 million, 25 bed expansion of the current jail. Cheboygan County may relocate their jail into a larger facility, a vacated family service building. Last year, the two counties combined spent more than $300,000 to house their prisoners outside of the counties.

Despite calling Charlevoix County "unique" in that they have room to expand fully on their own, Lenahan said population growth and subsequent percentage increases in crime will mitigate a regional jail.

Johnson, though, maintains that it's not in the best interest of the county to be a participant. He said the creation of a multi-million dollar facility, staffing the building, and costs to transport prisoners, which the county doesn't have in their present situation, would make the project simply "not feasible."

Organ donors needed

The National Kidney Foundation of Michigan has issued a challenge to citizens to sign organ donor cards during National Organ and Tissue Donor Awareness Week, April 20-26. Close to 2,300 Michigan residents are currently waiting for a lifesaving transplant. Only one third of the Americans who meet the criteria for donations, donate their organs.

Kidneys, hearts, livers, lungs, pancreas, bones, eyes, skin and other soft tissues can be donated.

To participate in the challenge, call the National Kidney Foundation of Michigan at (800) 482-1455 and request a free donor card.

Rayders race on new track

By Jamie MacMillan
Courier reporter

The track at Charlevoix's Kipke field has been resurfaced. It's no longer as gritty and expected to be quicker as the Rayder track and field teams set their sights on another season.

With the quicker track a record or two may fall, but at the least, speedier races should be the norm this spring. And with solid athletes throughout the line-up, the Rayders should win their fair share of races.

David Manker, who qualified for state last year, returns as the top sprinter for the boys' team, while the girls also return last season's quickest, Tricia Kelly.
